RECOVERY PLAN IN SNARL DUE TO OFFICIAL CLASHES

President on Return Must Decide Division of Power —Johnson at Odds With Cabinet Men.

ADMINISTRATOR BLOCKS TWO STEPS

Despite Friction, However, Business Reports Bring Encouragement to Government Leaders.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON
A Staff Correspondent of The Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 24—One of the first jobs confronting President Roosevelt when he returns to the Capital early in July will be that of untangling the snarl in which the National recovery program has become enmeshed because of dissension and jealousy among the officials directly in charge of it. The President is expected to tell each just where his powers begin and just where they stop.

As a result of what he considers unwarranted interference by permanent officials of the Department of Commerce, administrator Hugh S. Johnson has threatened to move the industrial control staff out of the Commerce Department building. Because of what he considered unwarranted interference by Johnson, Secretary of Interior Ickes did remove the staff of the public works administration out of that building.

The authority to establish working codes for industries is one of the most important powers vested in Gen. Johnson. Hence, he was put out this week when he learned that the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce was ready to issue a statement telling industries what to put in their codes. He stopped that.

Blocks Labor Statement.

He also prevented the Labor Advisory Committee from releasing a press statement outlining the new labor policies of the industrial recovery administration. Members of the committee were told that their function was advisory, and that policies would be determined by the administrator.

Meanwhile, pending the President's return, Johnson is presumed to be in the dark as to what his own compensation will be, and he is deadlocked with the Budget Bureau over its attempt to alter the compensation fixed by him for his subordinates. Roosevelt will have to decide between them. Donald R. Richberg, railway labor attorney whom Johnson named to head his legal department, has thus far not taken the oath of office, and there is some doubt that he will accept the post permanently.

Although public hearings on the proposed code for the cotton textile industry are scheduled to open Tuesday, the arrangements are far from complete. The Advisory Committee which is to represent the consumers has not been appointed, although indications are that it will be headed by Stuart Chase, New York economist, and founder of a consumers' research service which has been very successful.

Some Encouraging Gains.

Despite all their griefs and tribulations, however, officials of the recovery administrations today expressed much encouragement over the outlook. Their optimism was based on figures issued by the Federal Reserve Board, the Department of Commerce and the American Railway Association, all indicating an impressive upturn in business during the last six weeks. Department of Commerce forecasts have been none too reliable in the past, but the Federal Reserve Board's statements are regarded as wholly dependable.

"Volume of industrial production," said the Reserve Board, "increased from 67 per cent of the 1923-25 average, in April, to 76 per cent in May, as compared with 60 per cent in March. Operations at steel mills continued to increase in May and the early part of June, contrary to seasonal tendency, and in the week ending June 24 activity was reported at about 50 per cent of capacity." (At one stage last year it dropped to 18 per cent of capacity.)

The board reported that production of shoes last month was higher than in any other May in history. Automobile output in May was larger than in April, although the contrary is normally true. Other increases were reported in textiles and lumber. May production in textiles was larger than during any month since November, 1929. Employment during May was 61

Police Outmaneuver Legion, Lotto at Arena Is Barred

Hatzfeld Post Gets State Injunction to Stop Interference, Then Officers Drop Hint to Federal Judge

Police outmaneuvered the Walter J. Hatzfeld Post of the American Legion in court yesterday and as a result the "$2000 grand benefit cash lotto" the post was to have sponsored last night at the Arena, 5700 Oakland avenue, was called off..

The building was dark and the doors closed, despite a temporary order issued by Circuit Judge Hall which restrained police from interfering.

The order was interpreted, however, as not preventing police from dropping a hint before Federal Judge Davis, who has appointed C. D. P. Hamilton Jr. as receiver for The Arena. Judge Davis, in view of the contention of police and the Circuit Attorney's office that lotto as proposed by the Legion post was gambling, decided not to permit use of The Arena for that purpose.

The legionnaires bowed to the inevitable with good grace. There was some suggestion that the lotto be held at another place, but that was voted down.

"We decided that if it was as important as it seemed to have become we had better drop it," said A. C. Meglitsch, chairman of the committee in charge. "Of course, we've been put to some expense, but that can't be helped. Will there be another lotto later? Not if I have anything to do with it."

The lotto game had been advertised in circulars distributed throughout the city during the past 10 days. There were to have been $50 prizes for each game for an estimated total of $2000. No tickets had been sold in advance, but admission was to have been 50 cents at the gate.

More than 1000 men and women not knowing the lotto game had been canceled, went to The Arena last night and found there only a squad of policemen. Some of them complained bitterly of the interference.

Many decided to go to Carpenter's Hall, 1411 North Grand boulevard, where another lotto game was scheduled. Police followed them and about 10 o'clock broke up the game there. It was sponsored, they said, by the Spirit of St. Louis Post of the Legion.

Two women and a man were arrested at Carpenter's Hall, and booked on suspicion of establishing a lottery. Police said about 1500 persons were crowded into the hall and some sat on the stairs because seats were not available.

9-YEAR-OLD BOY SLAIN IN PHILADELPHIA PARK

Police Hunt Man Dressed in White; Victim Stabbed, Skull Crushed.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24. — Nine-year-old William A. Reilly Jr., tonight was found slain, apparently by an insane man, near Cobb's Creek Park in West Philadelphia. The boy's skull was crushed and his chest bore several stab wounds.

Police said they were looking for a man dressed in white, thought to be an ice cream vendor, seen by several park guards near the spot where the body was found.

The child had been missing from his home since noon Friday. At that time, he kissed his mother good-by, and started for the park to play. His parents reported his disappearance last night, and said they feared he had fallen into a creek or quarry pond in the park. All today, park guards dragged the waters.

The body was found by three small neighbor boys playing tag. It lay under a tree, about 400 feet from the creek and five feet off a path that runs through the tangled growth of bushes and high grass.

Within a short time, about 1000 neighbors and others collected at the spot.

Dr. E. F. Carpenter, a police surgeon of suburban Yeadon, said the boy died of a skull fracture. He expressed an opinion the child was mistreated before being slain.

ROOSEVELT ASKS GROWERS TO SUPPORT COTTON PROGRAM

Message Says Individual Farmer Will Determine Whether Plan Will Succeed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—President Roosevelt threw his influence behind the cotton acreage reduction program today as administrators of the farm act put final touches on plans for beginning Monday an intensive campaign in Southern States to cut this year's crop.

In a preface to an explanation of the plan issued under the President's signature, farmers of the cotton belt were called on to co-operate in the program under which Secretary of Agriculture Wallace hopes to reduce acreage about 10,000,000 acres.

"The fate of any plan depends upon the support it is given by those who are asked to put it into operation," the President's message said. "This program for the cotton producer essentially places the responsibility upon the individual farmer.

"He and he alone will, in the last analysis, determine whether it shall succeed. This plan offers the cotton producer a practical, definite means to put into immediate application the methods which Congress has prescribed to improve his situation.

"I have every confidence that the cotton producer will face the facts and co-operate fully in the reasonable and practical plan that is proposed."

MAN SHOT DEAD TRYING TO ROB COUNTRY STORE

Owner Scuffles With Thief, Clerk Grabs Pistol, Fires— at Mineral Point.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MINERAL POINT, Mo., June 24. —An unidentified robber was shot and killed tonight in a scuffle after Sam Najim, owner of a general store here, attempted to disarm him as he was pocketing the contents of the till.

Jumping to his employer's help, Vernie Dotson, a clerk, fought with the hold-up man for a revolver Najim had knocked from his hand, obtaining it and shooting the robber. The man, who was about 35 years old, was dressed in worn clothing and a soiled white coat.

"My wife and Dotson and myself were busy waiting on three customers when the man came in," Najim related, "and yelled to us to throw up our hands. He had an automatic pistol in one hand and a revolver in the other.

"He was stuffing my money in his ccat pocket when I saw my chance and jumped on him. I jerked the automatic out cf his hand and he dropped the revolver. He was fighting hard and things were happening fast, but the next thing I knew my clerk had beat him to the revolver and shot him."

Authorities are endeavoring to find out whether the robber drove to the neighborhood of the store with other men.

SEVEN KILLED IN GALICIA IN RELIGIOUS DISORDER

Group Shoots Into Procession, Members of Which Return Fire at Lancut.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, Poland, June 24. — Seven persons including a policeman were killed in a shooting affray at Lancut in Galicia today, authorities reported.

Nine peasants and one policeman were killed in earlier disturbances last Wednesday in the Galician districts of Bopczyze, Rzeszow and Lancut, where policemen interfered to prevent peasants from beating tax collectors.

Today's encounter, according to the police statement, arose when a religious procession was fired on and members of the procession returned the fire. Several of the assailants escaped and a posse was organized to pursue them.

HITLER WRITES ABOUT SELF

His Sketch Briefest in Reichstag Handbook.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 24. — Germany's new congressional directory, the "Reichstagshandbuch" contains the first autobiography of Chancellor Adolf Hitler as a National Socialist deputy.

The sketch, generally assumed as written by Hitler himself, is the briefest in the book. It reads as follows: "Born April 20, 1889, in Braunau-on-the-Inn. Catholic. Attended grammar school and lower realschule. Building trades worker to make study possible. Soldier 1914-1920. Presently German reich's chancellor."

KENNETH BUCK GETS 24 YEARS IN M'MATH KIDNAPING

His Brother, Cyril, Go-Between in Collecting $60,000 Ransom, Acquitted at Barnstable, Mass.

JURY OUT NEARLY SEVEN HOURS

State Had Asked for Equal Punishment for Men Accused of Abducting 10-Year-Old Girl.

By the Associated Press.

BARNSTABLE, Mass., June 24—Kenneth Buck was convicted tonight by a jury of kidnaping 10-year old Margaret ("Peggy") McMath and the extortion of $60,000 ransom from her parents. He was sentenced immediately to not less than 24 years or more than 25 years in state prison. His brother Cyril, with whom he had been jointly on trial, was acquitted.

The verdict was returned by a jury of Cape Cod landsmen in Barnstable Superior Court after nearly seven hours of deliberation during which time the jury returned to the courtroom twice to receive additional instructions from Judge Edward F. Hanify.

Judge Hanify, after hearing a plea from Elias Burwick, counsel for Kenneth, for a mild sentence and the request from District Attorney William C. Crossley that the maximum be imposed, handed the order of sentence to the Clerk of court. Burwick told the Judge he wished a new trial because of new evidence. The Judge did not reply, however.

Kenneth Buck Breaks Down.

Kenneth, who had wept during previous appearance in court, stood up firmly as he heard the sentence pronounced. Later, however, after handcuffs were slipped over his wrists and he was led from the Court-house, he broke into tears and had to be almost carried by the deputies who had him in charge.

Mrs. Bertha Buck, mother of the men, collapsed on hearing the sentence as did Mrs. Albert Chase, a sister. They were led from the courtroom.

Cyril, who had acted as go-between for his brother, Kenneth, and Neil C. McMath, father of the child, smiled slightly when he heard the verdict of acquittal. A few minutes later, however, he leaned over the back of his seat and kissed his wife and mother, both of whom had been in the courtroom every day since the trial opened June 12.

Cyril Poses for Pictures.

Willard Carleton, attorney for Cyril, moved that his client be dismissed immediately after the acquittal was announced. Cyril walked from the courtroom with his wife, posing with her for photographers.

The brothers went on trial two weeks ago. In his closing argument District Attorney William C. Crossley asked the jury to find the brothers equally guilty of the crime.

Counsel for Kenneth Buck emphasized Kenneth's contentions that a Hyannis bootlegger known as Bill was the mind behind the crime. Willard Carleton, Cyril's counsel, said that even Neil C. McMath, father of the child, had faith in Cyril at the time Cyril acted as go-between for the kidnapers in the collection of the ransom and that he still retained it.

Story of the Crime.

The crime for which the brothers were tried, attracted national attention. "Peggy" was kidnaped from the Harwich Center School at 2:30 p.m. on May 2 by a man who had telephoned the school saying he was the child's father, a former Detroit engineer who is now employed as a boat-builder at Harwichport, and was sending a car for his daughter.

The kidnaper was blacked to look like a Negro, and after leading the child into the automobile he bound, gagged and blindfolded her and hid her in a cranberry shack until midnight. He then took her to a vacant house almost opposite the home of the Buck brothers and held her there until after midnight the morning of May 5 when she was turned over to her father on board a boat in Wychmere Harbor in Harwichport upon the payment of $60,000.

The Buck brothers were arrested later the same day and the money was recovered in Kenneth's home.

39-YEAR-OLD RULE SET ASIDE; BANKER GETS NEW TRIAL

Court Holds Failure of Concern Is Not Prima Facie Evidence That Officer Knew of Condition.

APPROVES CHANGE IN JURY INSTRUCTION

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 24. — Conviction of Thomas K. Shelby, former cashier of the defunct Commercial Bank of Wellsville, Montgomery County, of a charge of receiving deposits when he knew the bank was in a failing condition, was reversed today by the Missouri Supreme Court, and a new trial ordered, in a decision overturning a 39-year-old precedent of the court.

The ruling reversed a line of decisions extending back to 1894 which approved a form of jury instruction on a provision of the law involved in such charges, that failure of a bank shall be prima facie evidence of knowledge on the part of a bank officer that the bank was in failing condition when the deposit was received.

This law was repealed by the 1931 Legislature, but the repeal took piace after the time of the offense charged against Shelby. Gov. Park recommended re-enactment of the law to the 1933 Legislature, but the bill failed of passage.

The instruction, heretofore approved by the court, informed the jury that the evidence described in the law as prima facie must prevail, unless the contrary is proved by the defense.

Commissioner James A. Cooley, who wrote the opinion, held the instruction tended to transfer the burden of proof from the State to the defendant, and that this prejudicial error was not cured by another statement in the instruction that the burden of proof was on the State.

The Commercial Bank of Wellsville closed in May, 1930. Shelby disappeared for two months, then returned to Wellsville. His sentence, now set aside, was three years in prison.

The ruling was concurred in by the three judges of Division 2 of the court.

Judge G. R. Ellison reversed the conviction of L. E. Thompson, former cashier of the defunct Bank of Willmathsville, Adair County, of a charge of receiving deposits when he knew the bank was in a failing condition, on the same ground as the Shelby reversal, and errors in admission of evidence. The reversal set aside Thompson's sentence of two years in prison.

Coaxing Bees on Lamp Standard Into Hive

Smoke Drives Bees From Street Lamp Into Hive

Beekeeper Solves Problem of Removing Swarm From Standard on 10th Near Locust—"Anybody Can Have 'Em."

The problem of removing a swarm of honey bees which settled late Friday on a street light standard on Tenth street near Locust was solved last night by Otto Meyer, Ferguson bee-keeper, who lured them into a box with his "smoke dispenser."

"The smoke is to calm them," he said through a wire screen hood to a small crowd of the curious as he stood on a ladder pumping a bellows. A few bees entered the box, containing other bees and a honey-comb. "I have 150,000 at home," Meyer remarked.

More bees forsook the light standard for the box. "I read about the swarm in the newspaper," Meyer said, "I figured it would rain tonight and they might die so I drove into town.

"Whoever wants them can have them," he said as the last of the swarm followed their queen. "I just didn't want them to go to waste."

In the afternoon they had declined the proffer of a new home —a regulation hive filled with comb set up in the fork of the light standard by P. J. Myers, a beekeeper. Some entered the hive, but the majority remained in a dense cluster on the light standard arm and on the globe.

Myers worked for a while brushing the insects to the platform of the hive without much success in inducing them to enter. He thought they were disturbed by the crowd their presence attracted. The queen, he said, seemed to be hiding out and he was sure she would ultimately accept the proferred home and lead her subjects into it.

Although the bees were not inclined to sting, many passersby were annoyed by their buzzing over the sidewalk and in the entrance of the Kinloch Building, in front of which the light standard stands. Henry Hoppe, who works in the Kinloch Building, slapped at one and was stung on the hand. When Myers was working with the bees they flew around him and crawled over him without stinging.

Myers engaged in a friendly controversy with a passing acquaintance, also a beekeeper, concerning the best method of hiving the insects. Each had his views but both agreed that in these times a single swarm of bees is not worth the trouble.

"Now if there was a whole bale of bees it would be different," one said and the other agreed.

Earlier yesterday, Rollin Mills, employed in an office in the Kinloch Building, placed a large paper box on the light standard and baited it with sugar water, hoping to capture the bees. They paid little attention to it; some, however, entered to eat and then went out.

The city street lighting department was appealed to, but Ralf Toensfeldt, chief electrical engineer, said the department wouldn't bother them; he thought they would soon go away of their own accord.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR. IN HOSPITAL WITH PNEUMONIA

Suffers Chill in New York Shortly After Return From Trip to England.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Douglas Fairbanks Jr., motion picture actor who returned yesterday from London, was taken to a hospital today suffering from pneumonia, it was learned at the home of his mother, Mrs. Jack Whiting.

He suffered a chill a few hours after landing but remained at the Whiting home until this afternoon.

The actor had made a brief trip to England with his father, who remained in Europe.

Young Fairbanks signed his first movie contract 10 years ago. He was married on June 3, 1929, to Joan Crawford, who this spring was granted an interlocutory divorce decree from him.

Fairbanks' mother, the former Beth Sully, married Jack Whiting, a dancer now appearing in a revue here, after she had been divorced from Douglas Fairbanks Sr.

HULL WANTS HARMONIOUS EFFORTS TO RAISE PRICES

STABILIZATION PUT INTO BACKGROUND

Raymond Moley, Roosevelt's Special Envoy, to Arrive This Week, Said to Bear No Radically New Instructions.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 24—a movement for an international accord to raise prices in harmony with the American recovery program was under way in the world economic conference tonight as Secretary of State Cordell Hull assailed the sources of suggestions that internal and intergovernmental schemes of action were in conflict.

As a result of this week's serious rift over monetary stabilization and French charges that the United States was blocking agreement here in order to help its own domestic campaign against the depression Secretary Hull again defended his government's position in a statement to the press.

There was "no basis and no logic" in the thought that America's domestic plans are incompatible with international efforts to halt the crisis, Hull declared.

From the American viewpoint, he said, there was only one way the conference could go now and that was in the direction of world-wide co-operation to restore price levels.

Stabilization in Background.

Early talk of de facto stabilization of the dollar convinced the American delegates that such a move would undermine American markets at this time and defeat the recovery efforts originating at Washington. Therefore a program to initiate a worldwide campaign for credit expansion and the launching of public works will be pressed by the American group in the hope that stabilization may usefully be set as an objective some time in the future.

Difficulties in the way of an agreement on such problems as trade barriers while the leading world currencies, the American and the British, are off the gold standard, thus leaving international commerce with an uncertain measuring stick, are recognized by Hull and his colleagues, but the American view is that these problems must be solved simultaneously.

As the levels of prices rise throughout the world, the need for high tariffs and import quotas, according to the American position, will diminish and the task of removing these restrictions will be easier.

The spokesmen for the United States see no reason why the basis for removal of trade obstacles cannot be laid while the price lifting process are going on.

Hull's Statement.

Hull's statement said.

"I have observed repeated references to the domestic program of the United States and the program of international co-operation as being irreconcilable, but there is no basis and no logic in that thought.

"Its constant repetition suggests that it is being fomented by forces interested in confusing he conference and seeking to prevent realization of the hopes that are the purpose and objective of this world gathering.

"It is, I think, obvious, that in an emergency such as this each country must resort to whatever feasible methods are requisite to bring about and increase commodity prices with the accompanying projects of safeguarding the country in the face of the general chaos of international trade.

Defends America's Policy.

"There is no reason that I can conceive why all these respective programs, having for their purpose business recovery with full employment at suitable wages and satisfactory price levels, should not have the united support of all those who are sincerely striving for international economic co-operation, so indispensable to full and permanent recovery.

"The United States' delegation's

GERMANS DEMAND PLANES, ALLEGING 'HANDBILL RAID'

Aviation Secretary Says Unseen Airmen Dropped Circulars in Berlin Attacking Government.

DECLARES THEY FLEW 10,000 FEET UP

At Same Hour Communists Were Tossing Dodgers From Skyscraper in Capital.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 24.—German officials and the press today assailed the Versailles Treaty and demanded on the basis of yesterday's reported "handbill raid" by foreign airplanes that Germany be given the right to self-protection in the air.

Wilhelm Goering, Minister of Aviation in the Hitler cabinet, announced a decision to place an immediate order for the construction of two fast police scouting planes.

The government, it was stated by Erhard Milch, Prussian State Secretary for Aviation, attaches the most serious importance to the "Communist handbill air-raid."

Either one or two biplanes, Milch said, passed over Berlin at an altitude of 10,000 feet, so nearly hidden by clouds that they could not be seen from below, while at the same time rifts in the clouds enabled the flyers to reconnoiter the city with exactness.

"Germany is the only country which has not the possibility of protecting herself in the air," said Milch. "If armed police planes had been available yesterday it would have been easy to compel the foreign planes to land just before crossing the frontier."

Planes Reported Elsewhere.

The "handbill raid," he said, justified Germany's demand for arms equality.

Unidentified planes were reported yesterday also at Kottbus, Weimar and Mannheim. That the flyers at Berlin must have had excellent technical equipment for judging the velocity and direction of air currents would appear from the fact that handbills thrown from such height landed in the government quarter centering around the Wilhelmstrasse and Alexander Platz where, at the same hour, Communists were throwing handbills from a skyscraper.

Requests for the text of these handbills were declined by the government on the ground it did not desire to give publicity to an insult.

Political circles are convinced that the "handbill raid" will form an important topic for discussion at Geneva next week and also at meetings during "aviation week, which begins in Germany tonight, especially during the observance throughout the nation on June 28 of "Versailles Treaty day."

New Government Decrees.

Meanwhile the government program for all embracing control of the life of the nation developed itself in various directions.

The Christian trade unions throughout the Reich were taken over by authorities.

A decree was promulgated by the Berlin cabinet under direction of Chancellor Hitler providing that Reichstag members may no longer avail themselves of the immunity claim while the parliamentary body is not in session. This enactment set aside Section 37 of the Constitution.

Another decree by the government stipulated that an official could be retired on pension before he had reached the age for retirement. In political quarters it was thought that this prepared the way for the retirement of Heinrich Sahm, the Lord Mayor of Berlin, who is not a National Socialist, to make place for Commissioner Julius Lippert, a Hitlerite.

Hugenberg Said to Have Quit.

According to the most reliable sources, Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, Minister of Economics and Agriculture in the Hitler Cabinet, presented his resignation today to President Von Hindenburg.

Dr. Hugenberg, former leader of the Nationalist party, had been at odds with the Nazi Government for some months and his resignation had long been forecast.

Dr. Bernhard Rust, Prussian Commissioner for Education and Culture, in dedicating a normal school at Lauenburg today, announced it was the Government's intention to establish "reichs universities on the lines of Oxford and Cambridge" for the purpose of training the nation's future leaders.

The concentration camps for political prisoners were swelled by the arrests of hundreds of Socialist leaders as the result of the nationwide outlawing of the second largest political group in Germany.

resolution introduced last Thursday (calling for tariff reductions and abolition of drastic trade restrictions) was framed with full knowledge and appreciation both of the American domestic program and the proposal for an internationally co-ordinated voluntary economic policy for all nations to pursue at the same time in order to stimulate business and improve prices."

He added that it was framed, in the exact language in which it was presented, before the delegation sailed, and that nothing had happened either here or at home to change the situation or to make the pursuance of domestic and international policy more difficult.

Couzens' Statement.

Senator James Couzens of Michigan, one of the American delegates to the London conference, said last Monday that there was conflict between the international and domestic program of the United States. "So far as America is concerned," Senator Couzens said, "between the time of the calling of the conference and the present, a nationalistic economic program has been developed which seems to indicate that internationalism will conflict quite severely with our national economic program. If my analysis is correct we cannot carry through both programs. Sooner or later in the conference we shall have to decide which program we are going to follow."

The same day London newspapers and members of other delegations asserted that the Americans were divided into two camps over internal and international policy. On Tuesday Secretary of State Hull asserted that the American delegation was a unit "as to its comprehensive functions."

Waiting for Moley.

The entire conference is looking forward to the arrival next week of Raymond Moley, Assistant Secretary of State and President Roosevelt's special envoy. Moley will bring latest reports to the American delegation as to how the home program is going.

It was made clear by authoritative sources, however, that the Assistant Secretary was not bringing radically new directions for the American group. He will stay at the American Embassy and this is regarded as an indication that he will keep in the background.

Recess Over Week-End.

The American delegates are spending a quiet week-end, most of them in the London Hotel headquarters where Hull and James M. Cox are preparing for next week's new developments.

Several European representatives had time to go home. Georges Bonnet, the French Finance Minister, went to face a demand in Parliament that the conference adjourn owing to lack of a stabilization pact.

The currency stabilization controversy has been the most serious problem of the week involving the clash between the American price-raising plan and fears of inflation if continental countries which had disastrous experiences in post-war currency panics.

Delegates here pointed out that the French representatives faced political pitfalls in trying to discuss price-raising devices of an inflationary character, a problem more difficult to the French than to the American Government which has a congressional mandate to pursue a monetary program of this kind.

Silver and Wheat.

The first tangible results from the conference next week are expected in well-informed circles to be action on a project for restricting wheat acreage and exports, and on the monetary use of silver.

With that representatives of the United States, Canada, Russia and Argentina in substantial agreement on the principle of restriction, only Australia of the big producers of wheat remained to be heard from.

It was understood that the Australian delegate, Stanley M. Bruce, had received new instructions from Canberra.

Senator Key Pittman's resolution proposing a reduction of the monetary coverage for currency from 40 to 25 per cent, of which one-fifth may optionally be of silver, has been debated the last few days in two sub-committees.

per cent of the 1923-25 average, an increase of 3 per cent over the figure for April. Factory payrolls were about 42 per cent of the 1923-25 average—representing another increase over May. The value of the dollar in the exchange market fell 18 per cent between April 15 and June 21.

Car loadings, considered by many specialists as the most accurate measure of industrial activity, totaled 587,931 cars of revenue freight last week, an increase of 23,385 over the preceding week, and an increase of 69,533 over the corresponding week last year, but 151,163 under the corresponding week in 1931. Under normal conditions there is a seasonal decline in car loadings at this period of the year.

The Commerce Department stated that most business indexes showed a strong resistence to the customary seasonal declines, with many industries showing actual increases, and others exhibiting less than the customary declines.

Program Still Pending.

In calling attention to these facts today, officials of the recovery administrations pointed out that the public works program, under which $3,300,000,000 is to be spent, has not yet been launched; that the farm relief program remains to be set in motion, and that the President has availed himself of none of the powers which he possesses to inflate the currency.

They pointed out, moreover, that the recent upturn had occurred despite the deflation resulting from bank closings, cuts in the compensation of veterans and Government employes, and the unfavorable seasonal trend normal to this period. On this basis they argued that the launching of the public works program, the farm relief measures and the industrial control devices for shortening hours of labor, increasing pay and increasing prices, would inevitably produce a tremendous spurt in employment and wages.

The American Federation of Labor yesterday stated that slightly more than 1,200,000 persons had gone back to work since March. It placed the number of unemployed in May at 12,540,000, as against 13,045,000 in April, and 13,770,000 in March.

No Child Labor Provision.

Child labor will be one of the most controversial aspects in the hearings on a code for the textile industry. Gen. Johnson has called the proposed code submitted by the employers "a beautiful job," but it contains no provision against child labor, and expressly exempts "apprentices" from the protection of the minimum wage provisions, which themselves are fixed at $10 and $11 a week.

Secretary of Labor Perkins has openly voiced her disquiet over the omission of a child labor clause, and representatives of labor are planning to demand the adoption of such a provision, and also to strike out the clause excluding "apprentices." It is charged that some textile mills have been employing children at the rate of 50 cents to $2 a week, as "apprentices," discharging them when their "apprenticeships" were served, and employing more beginners.

In an appeal to Administrator Johnson, the National Child Labor Committee pointed out that in southern states 3.8 per cent of all workers employed in cotton textile mills are children under 16. Secretary Perkins declared that no code should be adopted which does not prohibit employment of children 15, and that 16 would be a preferable minimum.

POLITICIANS TAKE HAND IN PUBLIC WORKS JOBS

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-5 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Theory and practice are contrasted sharply in the public announcement this week that the state public works administrators will be appointed "without reference to political affiliations" and the actual instructions sent out that all candidates for administrator and deputies must have the indorsement of the Democratic organizations of their respective states.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who also is chairman of the special board for public works, announced Thursday that no state administrators would be appointed until President Roosevelt returned from his holiday. This probably will be early next month.

The special board, in an announcement Thursday about state administrators, said:

"The administration has set high standards for the state administrators. An outstanding man in each state, who has no professional or business connections that would subject him to a conflict of interests, represents the type of administrator that is desired.

"Appointments will be made on the basis of character and ability without reference to political affiliations."

The present plans for State public works organization call for an administrator who shall be an engineer; a legal associate who shall be skilled in municipal law and procedure, and a financial associate to look after the accounting. These three officials are to be paid by the Federal Government. In addition there will be an advisory committee of three prominent persons serving without pay.

It was learned on reliable authority today that shortly after the industrial recovery bill was approved by the President, the administration had the names of 47 State directors ready for announcement. Politicians had not been consulted about these desirable appointments, and they naturally howled. The list was hastily discarded, and the politicians were informed that their views about appointees would be welcomed.

According to word now going out, not only the applicants for the administratorships and associate jobs must have the indorsement of the local organizations, but also those persons who will be asked to serve in payless advisory capacities.

The national industrial recovery act appropriated $3,300,000,000 for public works. The expenditures of a great deal of this amount will be under the supervision of the State adminitsrators. That accounts for the promptness of the politicians in serving notice that they must be consulted on appointments. Too much possible patronage is involved to have this supervision in the hands of men appointed "without reference to political affiliations."

TWO LINEMEN ELECTROCUTED, ONE IN ATTEMPTING RESCUE

Workers Meet Death on Pole Near Basco, Ill., When Repairing Wire.

By the Associated Press.

CARTHAGE, Ill., June 24.—Two men working on a transmission line were electrocuted, one of them dying when he tried to rescue his fellow worker atop a pole near Basco, Ill., late yesterday. A Coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death today. The victims were Raymond Ashford, 39 years old, of Jerseyville, and Herbert A. Nagle, 36, of Bushnell. The were employed by the Newton B. Rich Co. of Chicago and were rebuilding a transmission line for the Central Illinois Public Service Co.

Both were on the same pole, soldering taps. Nagle touched the power line and Ashford, working above him, went down to help Nagle free himself from the wire. As Ashford touched the wire his clothing burst into flames and he died instantly.

W. F. Hicks, groundman, hurried for aid. Nagle was still alive when the rescuers returned and begged them to take Ashford down first. Nagle died before the power could be shut off.

Lloyd George Puts It Up To Roosevelt to Make A Go of the London Conference

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE.

(Copyright, 1933.)

LONDON, June 24.—The proposal of a definite percentage cut in tariffs and reduction of other trade restrictions had the effect for 24 hours of converting a faint hope into an exhilarating challenge to the World Economic Conference.

The suggestion was not in itself startling, but those who had waded through pages of slosh in the hope of finding a nugget were glad to light on this particle of comfort.

If it did not contribute substantially, it might lead to something better if the conferees really meant business.

And now we are told that after all it was only a pebble dropped at random by some irresponsible person or persons.

Then also we hear that President Roosevelt has turned down the financiers on the question of stabilization. In the first week, therefore, the world drew a blank.

Looking for Guidance.

We have 66 nations who have been sitting in council at London for two weeks to discuss how the world is to be saved from chaos. They know that the eyes of the world are upon them and that the hopes of the world are in their keeping.

Thirty millions of unemployed, weary of the dragging round after a job that can't be found, and of shambling home with nothing but despair for news, have committed their case to this conference.

Countless business men, industrialists and financiers, sinking deeper and deeper into the quagmire of bankruptcy, stretch out their arms for rescue.

Bewildered statesmen and politicians, dazed by responsibilities heavier than they can shoulder, look piteously to the conference for light and guidance.

They have some hope that its collective wisdom might beget the leadership which they cannot furnish, and that its authority might compel the action which they are individually afraid to take.

The goodwill of the world to the conference has been all a question. But to speak frankly, its hope was stronger than its expectations, for the world has had some previous experience with these ecumenical councils and knows to its sorrow how little of the wisdom displayed in their speeches and resolutions is ever translated afterwards into bold, constructive activity.

Six and Eleven Years Ago.

Eleven years ago I represented Great Britain as its principal delegate at a great international conference at Genoa, and the resolutions then adoputed for stabilization of national currencies, the balancing of budgets, the removal of artificial restrictions on exchange, and the co-ordination of central bands throughout the world in order to maintain international financial stability, read still as though they might have been drafted by the present London conference.

Had they been acted upon in 1922 and in the following years we never would have reached the present state of confusion.

It is one thing for representatives to sign a protocol, and quite another for nations and governments to unite in common action for the general good.

Six years ago there was another economic conference at Geneva. There, too, the discussions which took place and the resolutions which were adopted showed the clearest sort of good sense and understanding of what ought to be done.

It reaffirmed all the warnings of Genoa about unstable currencies, and artificial restrictions to trade, and gave sound advice.

But it was not heeded. Currencies wobbled more than ever, and barriers were built higher than ever.

The chaos, misery and ruin of the world today are the result of defying all the counsel tendered it by all the experienced men who deliberated on its plight.

The Universal Question.

The universal question is whether the conference now in progress will follow its predecessors by sowing seeds which become quickly defertilized in poisoned soil. Or will it pass away after planting a series of sterile resolutions embodying platitudes that command general acceptance but solve no particular difficulty.

Such an ending would be disappointing for so imposing a gathering of all nations.

Everyone knows there is only one test of success—definite action that will remove the present stranglehold on international trade.

There is no need for increasing the wealth of the nations. The world never was richer in all that the people require. But owing to purely artificial barriers, those riches can not be passed on from the lands which produce them to the lands that want them.

Will these obstacles be removed from all the paths of commerce by the action of this conference? If they are, then this conference will be a triumph—if they are not shifted, then the conference will be a fiasco.

The delegates would dislike going home to report to those who sent them that they had accomplished nothing. They might therefore be tempted to rig up some sham of achievement. That has been done too often and ought not to be tolerated this time.

We all feel that this time there must be real solutions, or the world will have to be told frankly that none had been found and that consequently each country must shift for itself.

Opening Not Reassuring.

The opening speeches were not reassuring.

Prime Minister MacDonald was as vague and diffuse as ever in his address from the chair. That surprised and disappointed no one. Concrete suggestions are not in his line of oratory. He wisely left the actualities to his Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Chancellor Chamberlain contented himself by stating his position and did so with his usual clarity and precision.

But he didn't seem to think it necessary at this stage to commit himself to any definite propositions.

All the other speakers also carefully shunned every attempt at proposing remedies. There was a good deal of agreement in a general way about the causes of the present distress, but so far no one had submitted any plans for the construction of a road out of the jungle.

But there were indications in emphasis, rather than in expression, of serious divergencies in outlook and aim.

On Question of Currency.

On the question of currency some clearly wanted the gold standard and some definitely did not. Some, like Britain, would like to return to it, but dare not. Finance would like it, but industry would not allow it. Bankers and industrialists are preparing to fight it out.

In 1925 the industrialists were caught napping and the bankers flayed their business with a golden knife. This time they are wide-awake keeping a vigilant and suspicious eye on the secret conclaves of the big bankers going on in a parlor of the Bank of England. If there is an attempt to maneuver Britain back to the gold standard there will be a first-class row.

Neville Chamberlain knows that. Consequently in his address he was very non-committal, conditional and remote on the question of a return to the gold standard.

Mr. Roosevelt seems to be equally distrustful of the gold magnates. They let America down badly and he is in no hurry to give them another chance.

There are also advocates of silver at the conference. Wise men of the East are on that side.

Some countries are in such straits that it is a matter of no consequence to them whether the world is on or or off gold.

The cry is: Silver and gold have we none, but such products as we have we offer you if you will only take them.

Under these conditions it will not be easy to stabilize currency, and unless this is done commerce will continue to be paralyzed.

Besides currency, there is the dominant issue of trade barriers.

Currency or the Tariffs?

But which ought to come first—currency or tariffs? Which is the cart and which the horse?

The conference has not yet made up its mind on that point but all nations are agreed that stabilization is impossible unless artificial restrictions on all trading are reduced by somebody—not themselves.

All countries alike are united in denouncing quotas and tariffs—when put up against their own goods. By implication the tariffs of other nations are "excessive"—their own tariffs only reasonable protection.

The conference has not so far come to grips with either currency or restrictions. They set up two committees. They meant to run Babel by committees.

The first experiment failed through confusion of tongues. They might succeed now by the adoption of methods which never occurred to Noah and his progeny.

The conference was about to enter a labyrinth this week. Will it ever find its way out? There was no guidance. The tariff reduction proposals, on a percentage basis, made tentatively and a little timidly, indicated the right direction, but now that the finger-post has been withdrawn, the conferece will have to grope its way again unless America gives a resounding lead.

U. S. in Better Position.

The United States delegates are no doubt in a better position to deal with the tariff situation than the representatives of any other nation.

Mr. Roosevelt fought his election on reduced tariff, and any bargain that lowers tariffs all around the world would enable him to fulfill his election pledges in a most effective manner.

There is no other delegation in that happy situation. Least of all, the representatives of the British Empire. Our tariffs have only just been imposed as the result of an election, and not only has their height been fixed by act of Parliament, but it has been cemented at that height by an elaborate contract entered into with the dominions and dependencies of the empire.

What the World Expects.

The world expects that the spirit of Washington will invade this London Museum conference and rattle, if not revive, the skeletons that surround and depress the debates.

A 10 per cent reduction of import duties, such as was suggested, does not amount to very much—a 3 per cent cut in a 33 per cent tariff or a 5 per cent cut in a 50 per cent tariff, makes no appreciable difference and a "reduction of impo restrictions" sounds a little indefi nite.

Progressive minds of all nation expect a bigger, bolder, broade lead. They were anxiously awaiting a Roosevelt offensive agains vested stupidities from which th world seems quite unable to emancipate itself.

NORMAN THOMAS PROPOSES ONE-CHAMBER CONGRESS

Members Would Be Chosen by Geographical Divisions, by Industries and at Large.

By the Associated Press.

FOREST PARK, Pa., June 24—Constitutional revision to provide for a one-chamber congress, with members chosen by geographical divisions, by industries and by the nation at large, was recommended tonight by Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for President in 1932.

Thomas proposed national control of industry under a new socialistic constitution before the nineteenth annual summer conference of the League for Industrial Democracy.

The majority of congress would be chosen sectionally under his plan; the industrial representatives would serve as a large committee to recommend or disapprove legislation affecting their field; those chosen to represent regions or the nation at large would be fewer, but "might command weight by a voice freed from too narrow sectionalism."

SAM RANDAZZO AMONG 60 BEING DEPORTED

Gangster Convicted on Narcotic Charge Here Released From Prison Few Days Ago.

Sam Randazzo, St. Louis gangster released from Fort Leavenworth penitentiary a few days ago, is being deported to Italy, it became known yesterday. He was a passenger on the train carrying more than 60 aliens which stopped Friday night in the railroad yards here and continued to New York yesterday.

Randazzo, 23 years old, was sentenced to two years in prison when he pleaded guilty, Jan. 28, 1932 of selling narcotics. He was an associate of Joe Dattalo, handbook operator known as "Beef", who pleaded guilty with him and received a similar sentence.

An amendment to the anti-narcotic laws provides that aliens convicted of such offenses must be deported regardless of how long they have resided in the United States. Randazzo, 23 years old, came to this country with his parents when he was 6 years old.

He had been arrested about 2 times in robbery and extortion investigations, but was never convicted until he pleaded guilty to the narcotic charge.

The train on which he was taken to New York began its journey in San Francisco, stopping along the route to pick up aliens for deportation. Five joined the party here, four of whom had just finished prison terms. The fifth, John Davies, an Englishman, asked to be returned to his native land because he feared he was about to become a public charge. The four were William Krasniuk and Godius Marquis, French-Canadians, John Marx, German, and Otto Idzewski, Polish.

SAYS CITY NEED ISSUE NO BONDS IN $41,986,000 PLAN

Counsel Hunt of Federal Board Declares It Is Not Necessary Preliminary to Get U. S. Aid.

CONTRACT TO FINISH WORK TO BE REQUIRED

C. M. Hay Starts Home — To Advise Mayor to Recall Aldermen to Push Public Works Program.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Henry T Hunt, counsel for the Federal Public Works Administration, assured Senator Clark and City Counselor Charles M. Hay of St. Louis today that a new bond issue would not be necessary before St. Louis could get Federal aid for the proposed $41,986,000 public improvement program.

Much encouraged by his conference with Hunt and a talk with Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who is chairman of the Special Board for Public Works, Hay left this afternoon for St. Louis prepared to advise Mayor Dickmann to call a special session of the Board of Aldermen to expedite the local public works program.

When Mayor Dickmann and the delegation of St. Louis officials saw Col. Donald H. Sawyer, temporary administrator of public works on Thursday, they were fearful lest the Government would require a city bond issue authorization for completion of the improvement proposals. Sawyer said that he would not be "pernickety" about details so long as the Government was adequately protected. He added, however, that he could not give a definite answer on the necessity of a bond issue.

What Government Will Require.

Hunt, a former Mayor of Cincinnati, told Clark and Hay today that a bond issue authorization would not be necessary for St. Louis. He said that the Government would require a contract with the city, which would obligate the city to carry out its promises. The Federal Government, he continued, would have general engineering supervision over the projects.

After the conference Hay said that Baxter L. Brown, President of the Board of Public Service, and Roy C. Gans, city engineer, left Washington yesterday prepared to get complete plans of the projects ready for Government approval.

"I was much encouraged by my talks with Mr. Hunt and Secretary Ickes," Hay said. "On my return to St. Louis I shall work to get the St. Louis plans in legal conformity with the National Industrial Recovery Act. I shall also advise the Mayor to call a special session of the Board of Aldermen to pass an ordinance that will authorize us to go ahead with our plans to get Federal aid."

Example for Other Cities.

Hay said the Federal officials seemed favorably impressed with the completeness of the St. Louis plan and were sympathetic with the idea that public works in St. Louis might be used as an example for other cities in the country.

The St. Louis counselor also was elated with the assurance given him by Secretary Ickes that the Government had no prejudice against giving Federal aid to cities that wished to erect their own light and power plants. This assurance was in line with Mayor Dickmann's announcement in Washington that he would appoint a commission to study the feasibility of having the city generate its own electric current to supply the municipal buildings on the Twelfth Boulevard Plaza.

To Seek Share of Road Fund.

Counselor Hay added that he also would advise Mayor Dickmann to ask the State Highway Commission for $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 of the $12,180,306 Federal aid road allotment to Missouri.

Secretary Ickes announced his approval yesterday of Acting Secretary of Agriculture Tugwell's apportionment of the $400,000,000 appropriated by the National Industrial Recovery Act for highway construction under which Missouri's apportionment is $12,180,306.

The general regulations accompanying the apportionment provided that not more than 50 per cent of the fund allotted to the states should be applied to projects on the Federal aid system outside of corporate limits. The regulations further stipulated that not less than 25 per cent of the state allotments

What Government Will Require.

Hunt, a former Mayor of Cincinnati, told Clark and Hay today that a bond issue authorization would not be necessary for St. Louis. He said that the Government would require a contract with the city, which would obligate the city to carry out its promises. The Federal Government, he continued, would have general engineering supervision over the projects.

After the conference Hay said that Baxter L. Brown, President of the Board of Public Service, and Roy C. Gans, city engineer, left Washington yesterday prepared to get complete plans of the projects ready for Government approval.

"I was much encouraged by my talks with Mr. Hunt and Secretary Ickes," Hay said. "On my return to St. Louis I shall work to get the St. Louis plans in legal conformity with the National Industrial Recovery Act. I shall also advise the Mayor to call a special session of the Board of Aldermen to pass an ordinance that will authorize us to go ahead with our plans to get Federal aid."

Example for Other Cities.

Hay said the Federal officials seemed favorably impressed with the completeness of the St. Louis plan and were sympathetic with the idea that public works in St. Louis might be used as an example for other cities in the country.

The St. Louis counselor also was elated with the assurance given him by Secretary Ickes that the Government had no prejudice against giving Federal aid to cities that wished to erect their own light and power plants. This assurance was in line with Mayor Dickmann's announcement in Washington that he would appoint a commission to study the feasibility of having the city generate its own electric current to supply the municipal buildings on the Twelfth Boulevard Plaza.

To Seek Share of Road Fund.

Counselor Hay added that he also would advise Mayor Dickmann to ask the State Highway Commission for $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 of the $12,180,306 Federal aid road allotment to Missouri.

Secretary Ickes announced his approval yesterday of Acting Secretary of Agriculture Tugwell's apportionment of the $400,000,000 appropriated by the National Industrial Recovery Act for highway construction under which Missouri's apportionment is $12,180,306.

The general regulations accompanying the apportionment provided that not more than 50 per cent of the fund allotted to the states should be applied to projects on the Federal aid system outside of corporate limits. The regulations further stipulated that not less than 25 per cent of the state allotments must be spent on the Federal aid system into and through municipalities.

In Line With St. Louisans' Request

These regulations were exactly in line with what the St. Louis delegation, headed by Mayor Dickmann, asked for when the members appeared Thursday before Col. Sawyer. Frank L. McDevitt, director of St. Louis streets and sewers, told Sawyer he had been informed by the State Highway Commission that St. Louis would not get one cent of the Federal allotment.

Hay said that St. Louis should get a "fair share" of the 50 per cent apportioned to roads and highways within corporate limits.

"The funds were allotted," said Hay, "with regard to population. The spirit of the law also shows that it was the intention of the Federal Government that the funds should be spent where unemployment would be relieved.

"St. Louis is the most populous center in the state and naturally has a large number of unemployed. It seems perfectly apparent to me that St. Louis should get at least one-third or one-half of the funds allotted to municipalities."

Mayor Dickmann Inspects New York's Elevated Speedway.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mayor Dickmann of St. Louis visited Alfred E. Smith, John Raskob and Senator Robert F. Wagner today and then went on an inspection tour of the new West Side elevated speedway, similar to the highway the Mayor has in mind for part of the downtown section of St. Louis. He departed for home tonight.

Mayor Dickmann came here from Washington, where he had appeared before the National Recovery administration Thursday with plans for a $41,986,000 public improvement program.

Cruise of the Amberjack II

—By JAMES ROOSEVELT—

President Dictates for Three Hours While Repairs Are Made

(Copyright, 1933.)

ON BOARD AMBERJACK II, PULPIT HARBOR, Me., June 24.—It happens on every cruise at least once, and today it happened to us. When we called on the motor to take us out of the harbor this morning, it wouldn't even cough.

Inspection showed a broken valve spring and the only thing to do was to send to Camden across the bay for a new one. The destroyer Ellis, with all on board but the skipper, Briggs Cutter, and myself, went over for it. It took several hours to find the right part and Paul Rust then spent several more putting the motor in good running order again.

At 4 o'clock with a spanking west southwest breeze we're off again to get as far as we can by sundown, and to enjoy the perfect sailing conditions in spite of the delay.

The day has been far from lost. The Skipper (President Roosevelt) dictated and worked for almost three hours this morning and has been reading official communications again this afternoon. The rest of the crew have been writing letters and getting generally cleaned up. Several of us took an automobile ride over North Haven Island. It certainly is a beautiful spot and the scenery as fine as any place in the world.

We had an interesting visitor this morning. His name was Solomon Parsons and we found out he's well over 80 and claims to be the oldest Democratic voter in Maine. He brought us out some lobsters which we had for lunch and enjoyed greatly. The residents whose places border the cove where we are anchored have sent out some strawberries and cream, and are the biggest strawberries we have ever seen and were certainly an unexpected pleasure.

We are now looking over the chart to pick out a good anchorage for tonight. It will probably be Burnt Cove Harbor, a 24-mile run from here. We are all hoping for a good day with a fair wind tomorrow to make up for today's short run. Equally important, however, is the cook's announcement of Sunday's breakfast, baked beans, fish cakes and brown bread.

ROOSEVELT LOAFS DAY AT PULPIT HARBOR, ME.

Balky Motor Repaired, He Finally Departs Late, Makes Run to Southwest Harbor.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTHWEST HARBOR, Me., June 24. — President Roosevelt, leisurely cruising along the coast to New Brunswick, arrived here late tonight aboard the Amberjack II after a run from Pulpit Harbor. During the day Mrs. Roosevelt had arrived and was a guest in the home of Miss May Drier of New York City.

The President had been held most of the day at Pulpit Harbor by motor trouble. The motor was finally repaired and the President departed into the open wind at 5:30 p. m.

Well ahead of schedule, he did not mind the loafing during the morning which he spent visiting with his two youngest sons, Franklin Jr., and John.

There were very few visitors at Pulpit Harbor. Solomon Parsons, 87-year-old resident of North Haven Island, sent the President a lobster and the President was so pleased he invited Parsons aboard to thank him.

Roosevelt is not the first President to visit the island. President Grant was here and his name is on the register of the North Haven Inn. Roosevelt signed the register, too.

The passing of noon found the President still in the harbor. However, far ahead of schedule, and with another week of time, it is likely that he will extend his cruise into the Bay of Fundy if he reaches his destination off Campo Bello Island early next week, as now seems probable.

Since boarding the Amberjack II a week ago tonight, Roosevelt has not left it. After a few days of rough going he has had almost perfect sailing weather. The week has not only given him a complete rest but it has given him a deep tan.

MANAGER OF THEATER HELD UP AND ROBBED IN OFFICE

Donald C. Primo, manager of the West End Lyric Theater, 4819 Delmar boulevard, was held up at 11:10 last night by a young man who walked into the second floor office of the theater, pointed a pistol at Primo and forced him to hand over a packet of bills containing $49.

The robber forced a patron of the theater, who passed the door, into the room along with the manager. Primo said there were other funds in the safe but that the robber fled when handed the first package.

HOSPITAL PATIENT HANGS SELF

The body of Theodore Pundmann, a contractor, of 428 Jefferson avenue, St. Charles, was found last night hanging by a bathrobe cord from a transom in his room at Deaconess Hospital, where he had been under treatment for a mental ailment since May 26. Pundmann was 51 years old.

Y., a nephew of Col. Robins.

DR. J. M. HAVEN REPLEVINS $8500 HE SAYS WIFE SEIZED

Gets Possession of Cash and Securities in Safety Deposit Box.

Cash and securities amounting to $8,500 were replevined yesterday by Dr. James M. Haven from his wife, Mrs. Anna Haven, 2611 Russell boulevard. The property consisted of $3,000 in $10 bills, and bonds in a safe deposit box in the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co.

The box had been rented under the name of Mrs. Pearl Rousman or Williams, a friend of Mrs. Haven, it was set forth.

Dr. Haven alleged that Jan. 19 the money and bonds were taken from him by Mrs. Haven and that she refused to relinquish possession. The property was turned over to Dr. Haven but he was required to furnish a replevin bond. Mrs. Haven could not be reached.

COL. SPALDING HERE FOR FLOOD CONTROL CONFERENCE

Officer, Who Will Have Charge of Public Works Program, to Return to Capital Today.

Col. George R. Spalding, who is to have charge of the $3,300,000,000 Federal public works program, returned to St. Louis yesterday evening, but planned to depart again for Washington at noon today.

Declining to discuss the public works program, Col. Spalding said he came to St. Louis for a conference on flood control with Dean Anson Marston of the University of Iowa. He and Dean Marston, with Gen. Harley B. Ferguson, president of the Mississippi River Commission, are members of a board appointed last year to review flood control plans of the Federal Government.

Col. Spalding, who has been in charge of the Upper Mississippi Valley Division of the army corps of engineers, with headquarters in St. Louis, lives at 125 South Elm avenue, Webster Groves.

ILLINOIS HOUSE TO VOTE ON SALES TAX TOMORROW

Gov. Horner in Appeal for Bill Says State "Must Face the Facts."

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 24—"Illinois must have the courage to face the facts," Governor Horner declared tonight in an appeal for passage of the sales tax.

The Governor expressed the belief that members of the house would pass the bill when it comes up on final roll call Monday.

"I believe," he said in a statement, "they will rise above the selfish local appeals of persons who put themselves above the general good."

The legislature must assume responsibility, Horner said, "for what may occur when Illinois' relief funds are entirely exhausted, as they will be shortly, and it must also assume responsibility when our citizens ask wherein have practical steps been taken to reduce taxes on general property."

Combination Surprises by Going Ahead of Lenz and Lockridge; Play Ends Today.

By the Associated Press.

HANOVER, N. H., June 24.—L. H. Watson and Sam Fry Jr., gave seasoned experts a surprise by leading at the two-thirds mark in the all-American contract bridge pair championship today. The session closes tomorrow.

This combination went ahead of the veteran expert Sidney C. Lenz and his partner, C. S. Lockridge, 1260 to 1183, by scoring more than 600 points in each session. Baron Waldemar von Zedtwitz and George Unger made a sensational rise in the second session today by chalking up 625 points to put them in fifth place after a sorry start.

In all 53 teams were contesting for positions in the championship, and all within the first 10 technically still were in the running. P. Hal Sims was 17th in the standing tonight, while the wives of two of the more famous players, Mrs. P. Hal Sims and Mrs. Oswald Jacoby, were far down in 33rd and 40th places, respectively.

OIL INDUSTRY ASKS U. S. TO LICENSE IT; DRAWS NEW CODE

Resolution Is Adopted Without a Dissenting Vote in Contrast to Previous Clashes.

LEADERS PREDICT BENEFIT TO ALL

Competitors in 12 Trades Meet in Chicago With Price Fixing Major Concern in Agreements.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Adopting a resolution requesting Federal licensing of the petroleum industry under the industrial recovery act, the oil distributors concluded a conference late today which brought formulation of a new code of fair competition for the industry.

The licensing resolution was adopted without a dissenting vote in contrast to the opposition which the proposed code aroused. The distributors wrangled some time, particularly over a clause of the document which, as finally accepted, would empower the President of the United States to fix minimum prices from time to time on gasoline and other petroleum products.

Termination of the conference brought statements from President E. C. Arnott of Socony-Vacuum and President W. G. Skelly of the Skelly Oil Co., predicting its achievements would result in benefit to the entire industry. Arnott praised the conference as the first in which real harmony had prevailed and the licensing vote as the first on which the industry had been able to realize unanimity of opinion.

Price Is Chief Concern.

Competitors in a dozen industries who have met here to organize industries under the National Industrial Recovery Act have made rules by which competition was strictly limited. Their chief concern, as shown in the finished codes, has been to see that the outcome, the price for their products, was not in doubt.

Many of the agreements which have been reached by rivals in the oil, coal, macaroni, candy, beer barrel, motor equipment, paper and stamp printing lines were promises which have been made before.

They were taken from the codes of ethics which almost all trade associations had. Leaders told the code meetings that because of the Recovery Act they could have new significance. If written into the code, practices which had been little more than good business manners could be made laws, with stiff penalties for violation.

Wages, Hours Undetermined.

Wages and hours for employes were left in most instances to be determined later.

Soft Coal operators repeated the labor guarantees of the Recovery Act in their code, recognizing the workers' right to organize and bargain collectively, and provided for minimum wages and maximum hours to be set by districts.

The codes showed wide differences as to how the prices were to be achieved in the oil code, minimum and even maximum prices were to be set by the Federal Government. Coal operators suggested minimum prices be set in each field. Confectioners tried to insure firm prices by requiring standard profits: 10 per cent for the manufacturer, 20 per cent for jobbers, 33 1-3 for retailers.

Question of Price Publicity.

Price publicity has also been a concern. Oil purchasers were to be required to make public the prices paid, and marketers must post all prices. Candy makers will file their price lists with a central officer. Coal prices also will be in the open.

While uniform accounting isn't required in any of the codes, full reports to trade association officers were pledged in all of them. Books of manufactuers will be open to an investigating committee to see that the code was observed.

Coal men made no attempt to limit production, their presiding officer declaring it was impossible

There were provisions for standardized coal sizes and uniform sales contracts, and for uniform credit terms.

Disagree on Bung Holes.

One attempt at uniformity failed. Beer barrel makers could not agree on a standard size for bung holes so that only one size of bungs would be needed.

Some of the conventions which drafted new laws for the industries were warned to make their constitutions short and simple. Others set the bounds for competition with great detail, outlining almost all actions a member could take.

Wages paid girls in candy factories were to be set the same way. Coopers left these matters to be decided in the various districts of the barrel trade.

Cement manufacturers from the Middle West planned to recommend a minimum wage to the trustees of the American Cement Institute, which, they said, could agree next week on wages by districts.

Guarantees covering prices take up most sections of the codes, and many of the trade practices forbidden were tricks of underselling through premiums, rebates and other concessions.

CATHOLIC SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS ANNOUNCED

They Are Guibor Townsend, Bernard Lutz and Thomas Neill.

The award of scholarships to a graduate of each of the three Catholic boys' high schools in St. Louis was announced yesterday by the Rev. Thomas M. Knapp, S. J., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of St. Louis University.

The winners are Guibor Townsend of St. Louis University High School; Bernard Lutz of McBride High School and Thomas Neill of Christian Brothers High School.

Townsend, the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Townsend, 7406 Flora boulevard, Maplewood, stood highest in the competitive scholarship examination with a grade of 91.08. He was an honor student during his four years in high school, played tackle on the football team and was named guard on the all-state basketball team.

Lutz, the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Lutz, 4956 St. Louis avenue, had the highest general average for his four years in high school, 96.5, and stood high in the scholarship examination. He was active in debating, was on the staff of "The Colonnade," McBride's student publication, and was captain of the tennis team in his last year.

Neill, with a four-year general average of 92, had the second highest grade. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Neill, 7628 Harter avenue, Richmond Heights. He was editor of the C. B. C. student newspaper, "The Turret," and student manager of athletics during his last two years in school.

SAYS RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA WOULD HELP U. S. TRADE

Senator Norris Declares It Would Assist Farms and Give Work to Thousands Now Unemployed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 24—Demands for recognition of Russia were made today by Senator Norris (Rep.) Nebraska, in a formal statement and by the United States Board of Trade, of which Rudolph Spreckels of California is president.

The Board of Trade in a message, urged Mr. Roosevelt to restore "full diplomatic relations with the Soviet Government." Other officers of the organization besides Spreckels are former Senator Brookhart of Iowa, a Republican, chief counsel, and former Representative LaGuardia (Rep.) New York, vice president.

Norris Wants Russian Trade

Norris said he had "just learned on reliable authority that the Russian Government desires to buy in the American market $10,000,000 of meat products; 1,000,000 bales of cotton; and $400,000,000 worth of machinery."

The soviet government, he added, would make payment partly in goods and partly in money over a period of several years.

"Her purchase of meats, cotton and machinery," Norris said, "would not only raise the price of hogs and cotton to a remunerative figure, but it would give employment to thousands of unemployed Americans and business to manufacturing concerns.

"What is the objection to this proposed deal? We do not like her form of government. We disagree with her on religion. Our people are shocked at the easy manner in which divorces can be obtained in Russia. For these and similar reasons, we refuse to trust her, or to have any official relation with her. What are the facts?"

Norris then contended that the Soviet Government had never defaulted on a single obligation while all but one of America's allies had repudiated their obligations in whole or in part.

Likes and Dislikes.

The Russian Government has no official religion," he said. "Neither have we. We do not like the religion of Japan, or even of poor old China, but we still recognize them.

"Divorces are easy and cheap in Russia. In the United States, they are easy but expensive. The only difference is in the expense. Statistics show that the number of divorces is increasing in America and decreasing in Russia.

"We do not like Russia's form of government. Neither do we like the governmental activities in Germany, or in Italy, or in Japan, but we still do business with them, recognize them, and negotiate with them in international affairs.

"Ever since the war, we have been trying to get rid of our agricultural surplus. Russia wants to buy it. We refuse to sell to her. We compel our farmers to struggle along, producing the food we eat and the clothes we wear at a financial loss to themselves. How long will we continue to hide our heads in the sand?"

REHEARING GRANTED IN CASE OVER LACLEDE GAS CONTROL

Missouri Supreme Court Grants Motion by Public Service Commission.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 24.—Rehearing of a case in which Division No. 2 of the Missouri Supreme Court recently reversed an order of the Public Service Commission, authorizing the Utilities Power and Light Corporation of Chicago to take over direct stock control of the Laclede Gas Light Co. and Laclede Power and Light Co. of St. Louis, from an intermediate holding company, was ordered today by the court.

The division granted a motion by the commission for rehearing of the case before the court en banc. The reason for order was to permit the entire court to pass upon the case, due to the importance of the regulatory principle involved.

When the case was decided last April, one of the three judges of Division No. 2 concurred in the opinion by Commissioner James A. Cooley, another concurred in the result, and the third judge did not vote, as he had not heard the arguments.

The Utilities Power and Light proposed to take over direct control of the two Laclede companies from the Laclede Gas and Electric Co., a holding company controlled in turn by Utilities Light and Power. In reversing the commission order, the court held benefit to the public must be shown before a holding company can be permitted to gain control of an operating public utility in Missouri. The commission merely had found that no public detriment would result from the transfer.

Youth Caught in Cross-Fire, Dies.

By the Associated Press.

HARLAN, Ky., June 24.—Humes Johnson, 19 years old, was shot to death on Main street tonight when caught between the cross-fire of two men, one riding in an automobile and the other sitting on the curb. Johnson was talking to Charley Gurley, a miner, when six shots were fired from an automobile. Gurley returned the fire. Gurley told officers that the man who fired from the car was Corb Farley, and that the shots probably were intended for him.

Three Companies Announce Increases; Two Plants at Mexico, Mo., Advance Pay 20 Pct.

By the Associated Press.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 24.—Two silk companies in Scranton and one in Taylor today announced increases in wages for their employes ranging from 10 to 15 per cent.

Employes of the Canova Silk Co., this city, have received a 15 per cent increase while employes of the Carol Silk Corporation, Scranton, and Plymouth Silk Mill, Taylor, were given advances of 10 per cent. The increases are said partly to offset previous decreases.

A strike at the Elite Silk Co.'s plant continued with employes asking for a 20 per cent increase in wages.

MEXICO, Mo., June 24. — A 20 per cent wage increase, effective immediately, for several hundred employes of the A. P. Green Firebrick Co., was announced here today. The Mexico Refractories Co., manufacturer of firebrick, also announced a 20 per cent wage increase for employes, effective immediately.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 24. — An increase in the pay of day laborers working for the State Highway Department was announced today by Gov. Talmadge and Highway Commissioner Wilhoit, who said the increases were in line with the policies of President Roosevelt in raising pay, especially for low-salaried workers. "We have effected sufficient savings through our economy program to merit this increase in the pay of some 700 day laborers, without increasing the operating costs of the Highway Department," said Wilhoit.

Convention Takes Formal Action—Delegates Pledge Selves to Wise Liquor Regulation.

By the Associated Press.

DOVER, Del., June 24.—Delaware, the first of the 13 Colonies to ratify the Federal Constitution, became the sixth state today formally to approve the proposed repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The State convention of 17 delegates unanimously adopted the congressional resolution for the repeal in a 45-minute session.

FOREST CAMP OFFICER FACES COURT-MARTIAL FOR ATTACK

Lieut. John Colonna Assaulted Man and Wife, Owners of Colorado Hotel.

By the Associated Press.

FLORENCE, Colo., June 24—Court-martial proceedings will be instituted against Lieut. John Colonna, who pleaded guilty today in a Florence justice of the peace court to making an attack on Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilbert, hotel proprietors. Lieut. Colonna, who was in charge of the Hardscrabble reforestation camp, was taken to Fort Logan by Capt. Reading Wilkinson, who said there would be a court-martial.

Lieut. Colonna was fined $199 and costs by Justice Robert M. Belt after he pleaded guilty to the assault. Another fine of $25 was imposed by Justice Belt for disorderly conduct and indecent exposure.

It was alleged Lieut. Colonna and 30 of his subordinates invaded the hotel Thursday night in search of a man with whom the officer had had a fistic encounter earlier in the evening. The Gilberts said that the group was armed with clubs and baseball bats and that they were injured when struck by Colonna.

You can see it in city after city where the wheels of industry are turning again: men are marching back to work.

Behold the Nation rising to LEADERSHIP!

NO MAN of observant eye can fail to mark the change that has come over America in the past three months.

You can see it in the records which the trained business analyst follows: commodity prices are surging up.

You can see it in advertising and in the stores where you go to buy: retail prices already have made a slight rise.

You can see it in city after city where the wheels of industry are turning again: men are marching back to work.

After three years in which business withered because prices were chiseled lower and lower—in which people feared to spend money and held back lest prices drop still lower—a new spirit of courage and confidence has started people buying!

This new spirit, this new courage, is born of a single cause—leadership. This new confidence, expressed in a reviving trade, is the direct result of vision, enterprise, competence concentrated upon a clearly understood task.

JUST as surely as the men and women of America recognize and respond to national leadership, so do they react to leadership in the everyday things of life.

You see proof of that all around you, in every product of repute and popularity that bids for the public favor.

Thus, because Goodyear has built tires for years with the extra safety of traction in the center of the tread, where the tire rides on the road—

Because Goodyear has given genuine protection from blowouts in every ply of the tire by the use of patented Supertwist cord—a ply material which stands up longer under the constant strains of driving—

Because Goodyear for more than a quarter-century has led in the pioneering, improvement and perfection of factors in tire excellence which underlie extraordinary quality and value—

More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind!

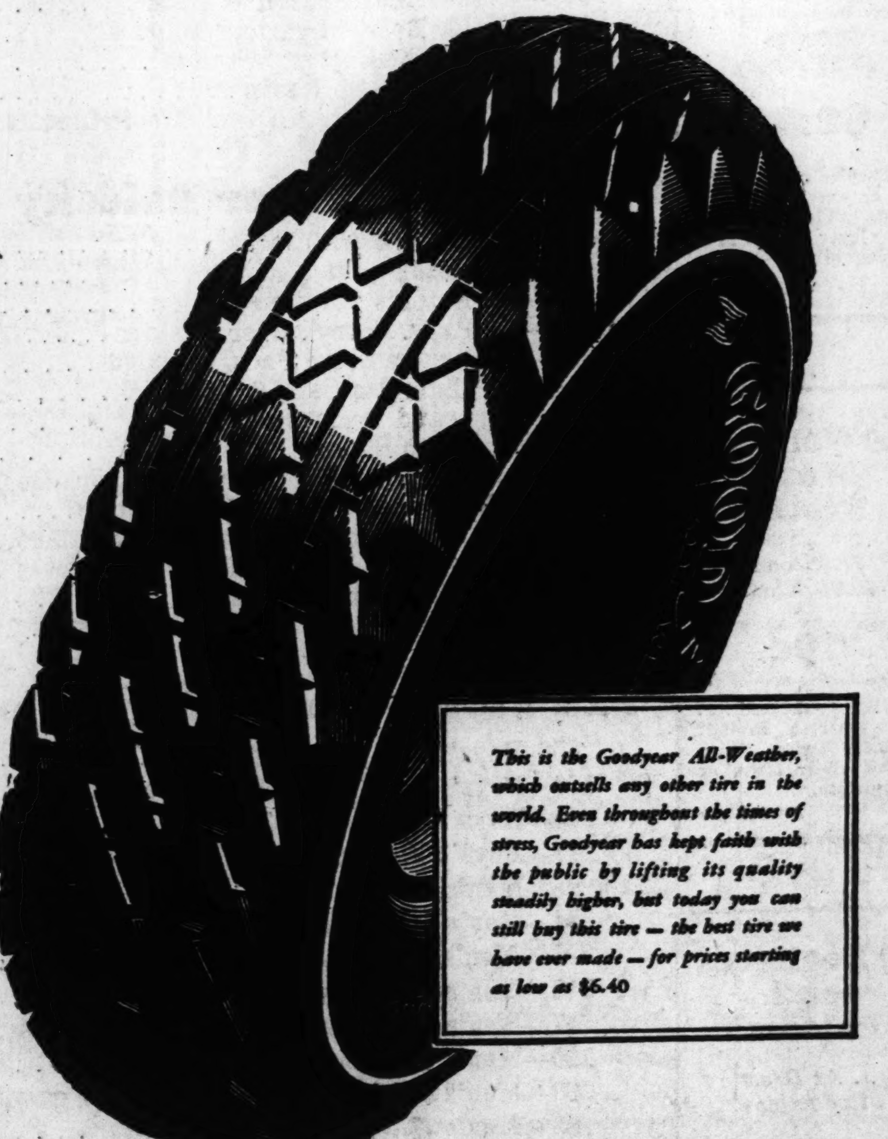
IN THE past months when money was scarce, and car owners needed the utmost value for every dollar, Goodyear brought the prices of the finest tires within reach of everyone—not by reducing quality, but by eliminating waste, increasing efficiency, through concentrating on two main lines of tires.

You can buy these tires today—the world-famed All-Weather or the thrifty Pathfinder—at prices still near the lowest level of all time.

No man can tell how soon or how much tire prices will go higher, but if mounting raw materials costs mean anything it is wise foresight to buy the tires now that you will need for the balance of 1933.

You get two things: the best tires that Goodyear ever built, and prices lower than you may ever see again.

P. W. Litchfield
PRESIDENT,
THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY, INC.



This is the Goodyear All-Weather, which outsells any other tire in the world. Even throughout the times of stress, Goodyear has kept faith with the public by lifting its quality steadily higher, but today you can still buy this tire — the best tire we have ever made — for prices starting as low as $6.40

LAWYER MUST GO TO TRIAL HERE ON CHARGE OF FRAUD

Supreme Tribunal Rules Circuit Court Was Wrong in Quashing Indictment of James L. Wren.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 24. — James L. Wren, St. Louis lawyer and former member of the Legislature, must go to trial charged with fraudulently accepting money upon his assertion he could get a man a job in the St. Louis Police Department.

The Missouri Supreme Court so ruled today, reversing the St. Louis Circuit Court, which quashed an indictment and ordered Wren discharged on the ground that the indictment did not allege misrepresentation of an existing fact but only a promise to do something in the future. This, the Circuit Court held, did not come under the statute prohibiting acceptance of money under false pretenses.

The Supreme Court decision was on an application by the Circuit Attorney of St. Louis for a writ of error—in effect an appeal.

Wren was indicted on a charge of feloniously obtaining $175 from Ralph Woods, a street car employe, in May, 1930, on an alleged representation by Wren that he had influence with the St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners and could get Woods a job as a policeman.

Commissioner James A. Cooley, who wrote the opinion adopted by Division No. 2 today, held that the indictment charged facts sufficient to constitute an offense under the law, and that the lower court erred in quashing the indictment. All of the Judges in the division concurred.

Upholds Quashing of Indictment Against Attorney M. A. Block.

A ruling of the St. Louis Circuit Court quashing an indictment against Morris A. Block of St. Louis, attorney, on a charge of attempting to obtain $285 from an automobile insurance company by alleged false pretenses, was affirmed by Division No. 2 in an opinion by Judge E. M. Tipton.

Block was charged with attempting to obtain the money through a claim that a client had been injured in an automobile accident, in December, 1931. Judge Tipton held the indictment, under the circumstances, did not properly charge an offense, and that the trial court properly quashed the indictment.

Woman Driver's Conviction and Fine for Killing Boy Upheld.

Conviction of Henrietta Armbruster of St. Louis on a charge of felonious wounding with an automobile, which carried a fine of $125, was affirmed by the court for the second time, in an opinion by Commissioner Henry J. Westhues. She was convicted of driving her automobile past a stop signal at Gravois and Spring avenues, in St. Louis on Dec. 6, 1928, and injuring a 7-year-old boy. The conviction was affirmed by the Supreme Court the first time at the October term of last year, but the appellant obtained a rehearing.

MRS. RUTH OWEN TO SEEK DANISH TRADE FOR U. S.

Copenhagen Has New Treaty Providing Nation Show Preference for British Products.

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, June 24.—Turning the tide of Denmark's foreign trade is, probably, the main task that confronts Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, the United States' first woman envoy to a foreign capital.

This country has united itself commercially to Great Britain, promising to honor offers of British goods in return for a steady market in England for its butter, bacon and other agricultural products. The contract is to run three years.

Denmark has been a good customer of the United States, buying generally more than 12 times as much as she has sold across the Atlantic. That proportion held good even as imports dropped from nearly $60,000,000 in 1927 to less than half that figure in 1931. But under the new trade treaty with Great Britain, the Danes must show a decided preference for British products.

The United States embassy is housed in a large duplex garden apartment in the heart of the city. Mrs. Owen took over an apartment used by her predecessor, Frederick Coleman, and added an upper apartment, giving her in all 15 large rooms.

HOME LOAN BANKS APPROVE $1,799,000 IN AID IN WEEK

Advances Sanctioned From June 3 to 10 by U. S. Body Increase Total to $41,620,000.

Federal Home Loan Banks approved $1,799,100 in loans during the week of June 3 to 10, according to a report received by James L. McQuie, president of the Missouri State League of Building and Loan Associations, who is a member of the board of the Federal Home Loan Bank at Des Moines. This sum swells the total of loans advanced by the Federal body to $41,620,455.61, and an additional $12,506,610.88 has been authorized.

The Des Moines bank has advanced about $2,500,000 to member concerns of the Eighth District, which comprises North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri, McQuie said.

DRY AGENTS DESTROY 150 CASES OF SEIZED WHISKY

Nine Persons Involved in Raid in 1930, recently pleaded guilty and Were Fined.

One hundred and 50 cases of Canadian whisky—24 pints to the case—were destroyed by prohibition agents in the basement of the Federal Building yesterday, concluding the Sam Eastman liquor conspiracy case.

The whisky was seized in a truck on South Second street Oct. 16, 1930, and nine persons were indicted in connection with the case. Ten days ago, all of the nine pleaded guilty before Federal Judge Davis and were fined $200 apiece.

MOTHER OF 3 SHOT DEAD IN BED

Husband Held; Police Doubt Evidence of Suicide.

By the Associated Press.

GEORGETOWN, Del., June 24.—Mrs. Minerva C. Smith, 42 years old, mother of three children, was shot to death in bed today. Her husband, Asa J. Smith, 48, was arrested. Beside her body lay a shotgun, its muzzle pointing toward her head, and a stove poker, the handle in the dead woman's fingers and the hook against the trigger of the gun.

Police said they did not believe teh shot would have torn off the top of the woman's head, as it did, if she had fired the gun. The Smiths lived at Collinsville, outside Georgetown.

TO TEST ALCOHOL-GASOLINE

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Rep.), Pekin, Ill., announced today plans for a cross-country test of fuel gasoline blended with 10 per cent of alcohol manufacturers from American farm products were about completed.

Dirksen's plans for a distance test to establish the efficiency of the blended fuel under ordinary conditions of travel were formulated after an unfavorable report released by the American Automobile Association as the result of a series of 10-mile tests held here early this month using the mixed fuel.

LIBRARY KEEPS RECORD OF ITS NEW PATRONS

Recreational and Educational Books in Demand, Bostwick Finds.

A record of books taken from the Public Library by borrowers registering for the first time was kept last week in an effort to determine what new readers are seeking.

"This record, never bfore kept," said Librarian Arthur E. Bostwick, "indicates the practical, recreational and educational use of the library. Titles varied from a scientific book on the x-ray to the much-read detective story.

"The surprising thing," he added, "is the small proportion of ephemeral books issued. Evidently, these newly registerd borrowers intend to make good use of the Public Library."

A salesman borrowed Clute's "Common Names of Plants," Griswold's "Handicraft" and Strong's "We Believe in Immortality," and a housemaid took out "Denatured Africa," Streeter's travel book. Morgan's "the Fountain," one of the better and best-selling current novels, was issued to a stenographer and to the manager of a cleaning firm who also took along "Dissociation of a Personality" by Prince.

"History of South Africa," by Walker, was borrowed by a Negro laborer. An inspector obtained Abbott's "Principles of Bacteriology."

A clerk borrowed a book on typewriting and another on letter writing. An inspector of boilers and elevators took books on electric and hydraulic elvators and hydraulic boilers and "Rules for the Construction of Steam Boilers," published by the American Society of Mechanical engineers.

Other books and the occupation of their borrowers: Bridgman's "Life Drawing" and Hoyt's "Perspective Simplified," high school student; Swift's "Tale of a Tub," college student; Kennedy's "A Long Time Ago," ice cream salesman; Vance's "Alias the Lone Wolf" and Fielding's "The Wedding Chest Mystery," saleswoman; Randall's "The Making of a Modern Mind" and Pearson's "Grammar of Science," college student; Mackrail's "How Amusing" and Phillips' "Th Price She Paid," waitress.

MARQ PICKFORD INHERITS $1,144,000 FROM MOTHER

Gets Bulk of Estate Under Will, Which Has Been Admitted to Probate.

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Ont., June 24.—Mary Pickford, Toronto-born movie star, inherits $1,144,972 from her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Smith, professionally known as Charlotte Pickford, who died at Beverly Hills, March 21, 1929. Probate of the will has been granted by Surrogate Court of York.

In leaving the bulk of her estate to her daughter, Mrs. Smith said it is to be "hers, her heirs, and assigns forever, because whatever property I am possessed at the time of my death has come to me through my association with my said beloved daughter in her business, and through her most unusual generosity to me."

Mrs. Smith directed that three funds of $200,000 each be created for Lottie Pickford Forrest, daughter; Jack Pickford, who has since died, and Charlotte Pickford, granddaughter, whom she adopted as a daughter.

STATE GETS MANY PROPOSALS FOR SPENDING U. S. ROAD FUND

Would Need $42,000,000 Instead of $12,000,0000 to Carry Out All Projects.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 24.—Although definite regulations regarding distribution of Missouri's share of $12,180,306 from the $400,000,000 highway fund allocated by the Public Works Board have not been received by the State Highway Department, suggestions received for possible projects are more than three times the allotment.

State Highway Department officials said today that suggestions from all sources for possible projects under the program total approximately $42,000,000.

It has been estimated approximately 35,000 men would be given employment under the Federal plan for expenditure of Missouri's allotment. This figure includes all types of employment in the various phases of roadbuilding. It was pointed out that this does not necessarily mean that 35,000 men will be given steady work, but that this figure represents "work units," since many men would work only a few weeks, and others working several months or longer.

STOP SIGNS NEAR PLAYGROUNDS

Safety Council Wants Motorists Warned to Observe Them.

Motorists frequently disregard swivel stop signs recently placed near playgrounds, the Safety Council wrote yesterday to Chief of Police Gerk. He was asked to station patrolmen near the signs to warn motorists to observe them.

Reyburn Hoffman, secretary-manager of the Safety Council, said there was probably some confusion because school stop signs, of the same type, did not require a stop after 4 p. m., but sometimes through inadvertence, were left facing traffic after that hour. The playground stop signs require stops to be made between 8 a. m. and 8 p. m.

FARLEY URGES HIGHER BUSINESS MORALITY

Deplores View That Anything One "Can Get Away With Legally" Is Right.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Postmaster-General James A. Farley expressed the hope today that "we have seen the last of the days when nearly everyone had the notion that whatever he could get away with legally was all right."

Farley made the statement in a speech at the luncheon closing the convention of the National Catholim Alumni Federation.

"I think if there is any one reason why the people of this country have responded in the remarkable way they have to the efforts at starting a new deal," he said, "it is because they realize that not only in conventions of this sort, but in the very seat or our Government itself the notion is spreading that sound business and sound morals are one and the same thing.

"I hope we have seen the last of the days when nearly everyone had the notion that whatever he could get away with legally was all right. There are a great many human activities which it is utterly impossible for laws to reach and to cover.

"Moreover, legislation is always slow in catching up to the latest efforts of human beings to evade responsibility and to grab the biggest share of power or profit for themselves.

"Because your convention feels that every move for greater economic stability should be tested first by the simple principles of right and wrong, and because our Government fells exactly the same way about it, I am tempted to say that the greatest single assurance that we could have of business recovery in this country and throughout the world would be a fully awakened public opinion, ready to back up sound economic measures because they are morally right and just; and ready to enforce responsibility, in high places and low places alike, for the proper conduct of business affairs."

Of the industrial recovery act Farley said it would be a mistake to suppose that because some provisions of the anti-trust laws had been modified "we are now going headlong into an era of monopoly."

"The function of the Government in this new picture," he said, "is to see to it that the interests of all the people are properly protected and that labor and capital and the consuming public all have a full and adequate representation."

The convention adopted a resolution commending the "high intelligence, fearless courage and the consecration to the service of the whole people" of President Roosevelt in his economic program. A second resolution condemned the anti-clerical activities of the present Spanish government.

Edmond B. Butler of New York was elected president, succeeding Redmond F. Kernan, also of New York.

Measles in Forestry Camps.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Officials of the Civilian Conservation Corps said today there had been about 100 cases of measles in the 1400 camps scattered over the country. The office of the Surgeon-General of the Army, which is supervising health work among the civilian conservation corps units, said there "never has been a threat of an epidemic." The statement was made in connection with reports of a measles epidemic among forest workers.

A body recovered from the Mississippi River at Barton street yesterday was identified as that of William Lee Vickers, 63-year-old automobile salesman, whose hat, eyeglasses and business cards were found on the Municipal Bridge Thursday noon.

Identification was made by a son, William R. Vickers, with whom the elder Vickers made his home at 5304 Devonshire avenue. The son received a special delivery letter Thursday from his father in which the latter wrote of "committing a disagreeable act," and begged forgiveness.

Vickers worked for the Riefling Automobile Co. on a commission basis.

MEETING ON STATE ANTI-TRUST LAWS AND CODES CALLED

Gov. Park and Business Group to Discuss Application to Industries Acting Under U. S. Control Act.

A conference to discuss the policy of the State as to application of its anti-trust laws to industries operating under a code of fair practices approved by the national industrial recovery administration has been arranged with Attorney-General McKittrick and Gov. Park by a sub-committee of the Associated Industries' Industrial Recovery Conference Committee. The meeting will be at Jefferson City Friday.

The industrial control act, effective for two years unless the President proclaims the emergency ended before that time, provides that any action complying with a code of fair practices approved by the Federal administrator shall be exempt from the provisions of the anti-trust laws of the United States as long as the act is in effect and for 60 days thereafter.

Situation Common to Every State.

It is obvious to industrialists, however, that organization of industry under the industrial control act will be difficult without infraction of State anti-trust laws, a situation common to every state.

Some are of the opinion a special session of the Legislature must be called in order to amend statutes conflicting with privileges accorded by Federal law and regulation. Others are hopeful it will be found, when more complete information is forthcoming from Washington, that no revision of State laws is necessary.

An expression of policy was requested of McKittrick last week by St. Louis milk producers and distributers who wish to enter into an agreement regulating trade practices and tending to control wholesale and retail prices under the agricultural adjustment act.

Wants to Study Laws First.

The Attorney-General said he wished to study the new Federal legislation and confer with administrators of the laws and with Gov. Park before deciding on any policy "as to how far we will go in suspending operation of the state law." He said the course of his department "in individual cases would be determined under such a policy, by the specific terms of any price-fixing agreements entered into in Missouri and affecting practices within Missouri."

Sample Code Prepared for Guidance of Industries.

A bulletin containing a sample code of fair competition required under the industrial control act, and an explanation of requirements, has been prepared by the Industrial Recovery Service Bureau of the Industrial Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

"The code," it is explained, "is merely a suggestion made in answer to the many calls for help in code preparation which we have received, and is subject to variations to fit industries of varying types."

Only one code will be filled at Washington for each industry but individuals and sectional organizations of an industry are being encouraged to draft sample codes so the national organizations may use them as suggestions.

The bureau also has prepared a check-list of items to be considered by code makers to minimize the chance of overlooking necessary points. The list was compiled at Washington after examination of 102 codes filed in recent years with the Federal Trade Commission.

CANADIAN TIMBER KING'S GRANDSON WEDS U. S. GIRL

Frederick H. Booth of Ottawa Marries Miss Cornelia Vanderhoef of Greenwich, Conn.

By the Associated Press.

GREENWICH, Conn., June 24—Cornelia Ann Vanderhoef, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Bailey Vanderhoef of Greenwich, and Frederick H. Booth of Ottawa, grandson of Canada's timber king, were married today on the terrace of Wishing Woods, the Vanderhoef estate in Greenwich. The wedding ceremony was read by the Rev. Oliver Huckle, pastor of the Second Congregational Church of Greenwich.

The maid of honor was Miss Betsy L. Vanderhoef, sister of the bride, and John Rudolphus Booth, twin brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The bride attended the Fermata School, Aiken, S. C., and Rosemary Hall of Greenwich. She made her debut in Greeenwich society at the Round Hill Club in 1929.

Booth is vice president of the Booth Lumber Co. of Ottawa. His sister, the former Lois Booth, was recently married to Prince Erik of Denmark.

Mr. and Mrs. Booth planned to take a motor trip before sailing for Eurppe on an extended wedding trip. They expect to live in Pasadena, Cal.

CHEROKEE, Okla., June 24.—Tom Jones, superintendent of the Saline Game Preserve, is under arrest following the fatal shooting of John Corbett, 55 years old, a farmer. A dispute over water rights, neighbors said, led to the shooting yesterday. Corbett had asserted the game preserve altered a stream on his farm and caused him to lose water.

FLETCHER URGES LAWS TO PREVENT TAX EVASIONS

Head of Senate Banking Group Says Public Condemnation Calls for Legislative Remedies.

INQUIRY TO BE REOPENED TUESDAY

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Practices to Be Gone Into — Accomplishments of Investigation Reviewed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Pointing the way to the reopening Tuesday of the investigation into private bank operations, Chairman Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee today said the investigators would continue to disclose any "unwholesome income tax practices" that might be found.

Referring to the recent acquittal of Charles E. Mitchell, former chairman of the National City Bank, Fletcher said in a formal statement that "public condemnation of devices employed by him and others to escape taxation" made legislative remedies inevitable.

Fletcher mapped out the future course of the inquiry and, reviewing its accomplishments, said it "has already exposed many unsound practices in securities markets."

"It has shown," he said, "that the stock exchange, while enforcing the most rigid honesty within its own circle, does not yet assume much responsibility for the manner in which its facilities are employed to do the bidding of professional speculators, to assist the piracies of industrial warfare, or to enforce the will of financial powers."

"Influential Opposition."

Expressing the hope for reforms, Fletcher said he had never seen an investigation with so much substantial public support or one "which has suffered so much skilful and influential opposition and obstruction."

Mitchell's trial on charges of income tax evasion grew out of his testimony before the Senate Committee.

In its preparation for beginning the Kuhn, Loeb & Co. hearing Tuesday, the committee has scrutinized the income tax returns of that firm's partners, as it did in its investigation of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Fletcher, in his statement, did not mention the Kuhn, Loeb inquiry, but said the Mitchell verdict would have no influence on the investigation, adding that the committee's function was not to gather evidence for prosecuting officers.

Justice on Watch.

"On the other hand," he said, "it is the duty of the Department of Justice to take cognizance of any evidence developed before the committee which has the appearance of violation of Federal law.

"If unwholesome income tax practices are encountered during the further conduct of the investigation, they will be disclosed. If they have the color of fraud, I have no doubt they will be prosecuted.

"But in any event, neither the absence of prosecution, nor an astute criminal defense, will deter Congress from taking legislative action to make our income tax laws equally applicable to—and equally enforceable against—all our people without regard to their wealth or the source from which their income is derived.

"Congress has not been relieved of any responsibility because Mr. Mitchell escaped jail. On the contrary, the public condemnation of devices employed by him and others to escape taxation has been so emphatic that legislative remedies to prevent such practices in the future are inevitable."

"A Public Duty."

Fletcher asserted that the committee "owed a public duty to expose unwholesome or unethical practices" when they were discovered.

"At the same time," he added, "the public should not lose sight of the primary responsibility of the committee. The principal job is that of disclosing those evil speculative practices which in the name of investment robbed millions of our people of their savings and closed the doors of hundreds of smaller banks throughout the country.

"Next week the committee will conclude for the time being its examination of private banking practices. Before the inquiry is concluded we shall return to a consideration of banking practices and, in addition, examine the investment trust situation, the employment of holding companies to engulf a multitude of unwholesome business purposes, and the use of stock exchange facilities to accomplish ends not in harmony with the idea of a 'free and open market.'"

GERMAN BISHOP, ELECTED DESPITE NAZIS, RESIGNS

Von Bodelschwingh Choice of 29 Protestant Groups, Was Non-Political Candidate for Post.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 24.—The Rev. Friedrich von Bodelschwingh, losing his fight with Chancellor Hitler's German Christians, handed in his resignation today to the Evangelical Council as Protestant Reichs-Bishop.

His action followed the appointment of a State Commissioner for the Protestant churches in Prussia, by far the largest German State.

Dr. Von Bodelschwingh made the following statement:

"Through the appointment of a State Commissioner for all the Protestant churches in Prussia, I no longer have any possibility of executing the office conferred upon me. This necessitates my returning the commission entrusted to me by the Evangelical Church Union."

The appointment of Dr. August Jaeger as commissioner for Protestant churches in Prussia, was announced earlier today by Bernhard Rust, Prussian Commissioner for Education and Culture.

Dissolves Church Councils.

Dr. Jaeger soon after his appointment announced the dissolution of every local Protestant Church Council in the state. He also removed from office the vice president of the evangelical supreme council, Dr. Mundt, and the general superintendent of the Breslau District, Dr. Schian Wells, chief officers of the Protestant Press Association.

New Protestant Press executives, Dr. Hans Mueller and Max Grevemeyer, were named. They issued a statement asserting that "the sovereignty of the gospel and its unrestricted proclamation will remain untouched."

It said that Dr. Hans Mueller would decide among the churches their attitude towards baptized "non-aryans," meaning Jews, at the earliest possible date.

The Nazi German Christians have made a powerful drive to subordinate the church to the state. Their scheme of "a national church with a supreme bishop at its head" maens that this bishop would be Hitler's subordinate.

The German Protestant Church, except for some clergymen in South German states, had been openly opposed to the Republic and, particularly in Prussia, was a rallying point for restoration of the monarchy. But now with the Nazis advocating their subordination to the Hitler regime, they have turned to appeals for liberalism.

Protests in Vain.

Commissioner Rust notified the Prussian United Church Conference at Eisenach yesterday that its decisions would no longer have any binding character. Today the conference protested against this ruling and the appointment of Dr. Jaeger, asserting the Government was seeking to make Protestantism conform to the leadership of the Nazi German Christians.

Dr. Von Bodelschwingh's resignation, a month after his selection, raised the question of whether it would upset the program for unification of Protestant churches.

Unless non-Nazi church members present a stronger front than is discernible at this time, observers said, Hitler's candidate, the Rev. Ludwig Mueller, will become Reichsbishop. He was the defeated choice of the Nazi German Christians when Dr. Von Bodelschwingh, non-political candidate, was elected by 29 Protestant church groups, May 27.

The German Christians held their first convention early this year in Berlin where they organized a campaign to make radical reforms in the church and bring it under the control of the State. One of their projects was to eliminate the Old Testament because of its connection with the Jewish religion and to develop a religion embracing Teutonic heroes of mythology.

The Government allowed the churches a free hand, however, in carrying out the unification program. Hermann Kapler, president of the German Church Union, and two advisers received full powers to conduct negotiations. They insisted the church must remain independent of the state and pointed to Chancellor Hitler's speech before the Reichstag in March as a promise that this policy would be followed.

$1,386,934 BACK TAXES PAID UNDER NEW LAW

Penalties of $177,171 Saved With Five More Days of Grace Remaining.

Five days remain for payment of delinquent real estate and personal property taxes without penalty, under a new law. After next Friday and for the remainder of this year a graduated scale of reduced penalties will apply.

In the last week St. Louis taxpayers have paid $1,386,934 in delinquent taxes without penalty, taking advantage of the new law. In paying they saved $177,171 in penalties. In the three hours for which Collector Koeln's office at City Hall was open yesterday, $77,162 in back taxes were paid, with a saving of $11,133 in penalties.

Unpaid taxes are placed on the back tax list March 1 each year. Last March 1 the amount of delinquency in St. Louis was $15,882,442. From March 1 to June 16 payments, with the usual penalties added, amounted to only $357,028. On May 29 the Public Service Co. tendered its 1932 taxes, $552,260. This was accepted, subject to application of the new law. Since the law became operative here this payment has been credited and the company has saved $44,180 in penalty. Other taxpayers in the period from June 17 to yesterday, paid $834,674 in back taxes, saving $132,991 in penalties.

The oldest bills paid last week ran back to 1927 on real estate and 1925 on personal property. Yesterday's payment of delinquent real estate taxes was divided by years as follows: 1932, $42,267; 1931, $26,815; 1930, $4626; 1929, $1781; 1928, $296. Yesterday's receipts of personal property taxes were divided as follows: 1932, $931; 1931, $239; 1930, $83; 1929, $62; 1928, $28; 1927, $7.40; 1926, $8; 1925, $12.90.

Officials think some large delinquent tax bills may be paid the latter part of this week. Last year, in the period between March 1 and June 30, delinquent tax collections amounted to $1,843,398.

During July and August, under the new law, one-fourth of the usual penalties will be charged; during September and October one-half will be charged, and during November and December three-fourths will be charged. The law is state-wide in application, covering state, city and school taxes. After this year, other new laws somewhat reducing the usual penalties on delinquent city and school taxes for 1932 and prior years will be operative in St. Louis only.

The Supreme Court ruled in a Jasper County case last Friday that pending delinquent tax suits will be abated if the taxpayer pays the taxes during 1933. Where suits for back taxes have been filed and the taxes are not paid this year, the suits can not be taken to final judgment until after this year.

KILLED IN DICE GAME FIGHT

Joe Jones, Negro, Fatally Stabbed; Companion Arrested.

Joe Jones, 42-year-old Negro laborer, was fatally stabbed in the throat last night after an argument with another Negro with whom he had been playing dice. Police arrested James Moore, Negro, in whose third-floor room at 1314 North Ninth street, the game and subsequent fight were said to have occurred.

Moore admitted stabbing Jones, according to police, and said Jones had threatened him with a stove lid during the argument.

MISSOURI PACIFIC NET INCOME FOR MAY SHOWS INCREASE

Total Operating Revenue Also Up As Compared With Same Month of 1932.

An increase in total operating revenue and in net income of the Missouri Pacific railroad for May, 1933, over May, 1932, is shown by the monthly statement issued yesterday by L. W. Baldwin, president and co-trustee. Total operating revenue for last month was $5,845,329, as compared with $5,503,772 in the same month of 1932. Net operating income last month was $676,907, and that in May, 1932, was $271,973.

Despite the improvement in May, the comparison for the first five months of 1933 shows decreases in gross and net revenues as compared with the first five months of 1932. The figures are: First five months of 1933, total operating revenue $24,975,575, net income $1,315,881; same months of 1932, total operating revenue $29,377,892, net income $2,577,601.

Of the company's Texas lines, the International-Great Northern shows an increase of operating revenue and net income both for May and for the five-month period, over 1932. The Gulf Coast lines, on the other hand, show less operating revenue and net income, both in May and in the 5-month period, than last year.

President Baldwin announced the purchase by the Missouri Pacific of $575,000 worth of steel products, including structural steel, tracking material and steel for shop use.

ADVISES RAILROADS TO CUT RATES TO GAIN BUSINESS

Rayburn, Head of House Committee Says Carriers Have Let Trucks and Busses Get Trade.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Calling on railroads to reduce freight and passenger rates as a means of increasing their revenues through a greater volume of traffic, Representative Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, said today rail carriers had not done all they could to meet competition and protect themselves.

"I am of the opinion," the chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee said, "that the railroads would make more money if substantial decreases in both passenger and freight rates were brought about.

"The whole question is being reviewed by the Interstate Commerce Commission and I hope that a decision will be handed down soon.

Rayburn, who piloted the new railroad act through the house, said "the railroad managements have sat down rather grimly and have allowed the bus and the truck to take their business away from them."

RETIRED FARMER, 75, KILLS WIFE, SELF AT MEXICO, MO.

Justin V. White Married Sister of His First Mate Three Months Ago.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

Mrs. White was the sister of White's first wife, who died several years ago. Mrs. Lois Sterrett, a neighbor, found the bodies of the pair when she called to bid goodby to Mrs. White, who had planned to leave today for Chicasha, Ok., where a grandson is dangerously ill. A revolver, with two discharged shells, was found beside White's body. White had been in ill health.

CAPITAL STOCK TAX DELAY

Time for Making Return and Paying Extended to Aug. 31.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 24. — Guy T. Helvering, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, today extended until Aug. 31, the time for filing returns and paying tax due under the capital stock tax provided in the national industrial recovery act.

The new law levies a tax of $1 on each $1000 of declared adjusted captial stock on the year ending June 30, of each year. The bureau had set July 31 as the date for making the returns and paying the tax for the period ending June 30, 1933. In the new order the commissioner extended the return and tax payments to be filed in the continental United States until Aug. 31 and those from Alaska and Hawaii to Sept. 20.

LUDWIG KOTANY ESTATE ASSETS ORDERED SOLD

Settlement Had Been Deferred Because of Depreciation—More Time Asked For.

Ludwig Kotany, treasurer of Washington University and writer on economics, who died three years ago last month, left to his executors, and to the Probate Court, a problem in economics, which the Court solved yesterday, when an order for the sale of assets of his estate was issued.

Dr. Kotany's will made specific bequests amounting to $143,000, of which $25,000 was left to Washington University and $118,000 in fixed sums to relatives and other persons. The residue of the estate, after payment of the $143,000 bequests, was left to two nieces, Mrs. Benedict Farrar of St. Louis and Mrs. Clarke S. Smith of Los Angeles.

It was evidently Dr. Kotany's belief that Mrs. Farrar and Mrs. Smith would receive substantial amounts, for the inventory of his estate, filed in December, 1930, showed a par valuation of $673,000 for the stocks and bonds composing his personal estate, with cash and realty bringing the total above $700,000. American Woolen common stock, Pierce Oil preferred, and Mexican bonds were among the items of the estate.

In May, 1931, a year after Dr. Kotany's death, application was made in Probate Court for an order of sale of the assets. At that time, stock prices were so low that, it was estimated, the sale would have realized not much more than $100,000. This would have given the specific legatees about 70 per cent of their claims, and would have left nothing for Mrs. Farrar and Mrs. Smith.

Judge Holtcamp, at that time, in view of conditions, deferred his order of sale, waiting for market conditions to improve. Later, near the end of 1931, prices went so low that a sale of the assets would have realized not more than $40,000. Prices thereafter appreciated.

Last Wednesday the executor, the St. Louis Union Trust Co., made a new application for sale of assets, stating that at prices as of that day, the sum realized would pay 97.4 per cent of the specific bequests. Joseph H. Zumbalen, treasurer of Washington University, and Dean Otto Heller of the university appeared in support of the motion. Prof. Heller is one of the specific heirs, $10,000 having been left to him.

Mrs. Farrar's attorney, Alvan J. Goodbar, appeared to ask that the order be deferred further. He said he felt optimistic about the future, and said that by waiting longer, it might be possible to pay the specific bequests in full and provide substantial amounts for Mrs. Farrar and Mrs. Smith. Mrs. Smith joined Mrs. Farrar in asking for delay, but explained that her position was not quite the same as Mrs. Farrar's, inasmuch as five children of Mrs. Smith are among the specific heirs, a total of $55,000 having been left to them.

Judge Holtcamp, in granting the application for an order of sale, said he did not wish to be responsible for holding the matter in abeyance longer. He said no one could tell how the present industrial recovery measures would result. Attorney Goodbar indicated that he might appeal from the order.

CHANGE IN ZONING OF 3 LOTS ON LINDELL BL. OPPOSED

Council on Civic Needs Asks Mayor to Veto Bill and Outlines Reasons.

The General Council on Civic Needs, through its secretary, Frank E. Lawrence Jr., yesterday asked Mayor Dickmann to veto a bill passed last week to change the zoning of three lots on Lindell boulevard. The lots, on the south side of Lindell, west of Whittier street, would be changed from a multiple dwelling zone to commercial. Property to the east is zoned for commerce.

Lawrence gave the following reasons for a veto in a letter to the Mayor: Further commercialization of Lindell will increase the damage to the character of this fine street and approach to Forest Park; there is no need for additional land for commercial use, in view of vacancies elsewhere; this would be spot zoning, which might be carried to court, with a loss to investors; the question should be referred to the zoning Board of Adjustment; the zoning law should be gvien a chance to prove its merits, without frequent amendments like this.

REVOLT PLOT IN ARGENTINA

BUENOS AIRES, June 24.—Minister of Interior Melo made public today information that former General Severo Toranzo, ex-chief of the general staff, asked for support of Bolivian authorities for an extensive revolutionary movement against President Augustin Justo of Argentina. the Bolivian government categorically refused to give any support to the plans of Gen-Toranzo, who made his request to the consul in Salta, it was stated. Toranzo was dismissed from the ranks owing to his activities in behalf of followers of former President Yrigoyen.

Melo said that he tried to obtain arms and explosives from Bolivia and that his plan involved destruction of bridges in Cordoba and Salta provinces to hinder the movement of loyal troops. In return for Bolivian co-operation, Toranzo was said to have promised Argentina would change its present neutrality status to a more favorable attitude toward Bolivia in its conflict with Paraguay over the Gran Chaco.

Commissioner Hanley Tells How Radio Board Rules Air for Listeners

Member of Commission for This Zone Explains Efforts to Prevent Interference and Monopoly of Air and to Equalize Reception for Rural and City Districts—Broadcasting Facilities Assigned Under "Quota" System—Hopes for Relief Through Inter-Nation Conference at Mexico City in July.

"IN many respects, a union between a newspaper and a radio station is ideal," James H. Hanley, Federal Radio Commissioner for this zone, said while inspecting stations during a visit to St. Louis the past week. "As a rule," Hanley said, "stations which are controlled in whole or in part by newspapers are less likely to overemphasize revenue and indulge in offensive sales talk than are purely commercial stations."

Discussing problems of the Radio Commission and of stations, Commissioner Hanley said: "The fundamental principle of the radio act is that transmission, conveying and receiving of radio broadcasting, must be in the public interest and meet the convenience and necessities of the people. 'Public interest, convenience or necessity,' as used in the act, mean that the rights of the listener are superior to those of the broadcasting stations, and also mean that as far as possible interference must be avoided. The rural listener, remote from any station, as well as the city listener, must be given service. Duplication by an excessive number of stations cannot be permitted to the extent of creating undue interference.

When Control Broke Down.

"We learned in 1926 what happened to radio without Federal control, because regulation in the United States broke down that year—when the Attorney-General interpreted court decisions as meaning that the Secretary of Commerce, then the licensing authority, had no right to assign wave lengths, power or time of operation to radio stations under the marine act of 1912, but must issue licenses to all applicants. Chaos and confusion reigned. Stations sprang up like mushrooms. Nearly 250 new stations went on the air from June, 1926, to Feb. 23, 1927, when the radio act was signed by President Coolidge. During that period stations showed no respect for the rights of others. They jumped power at will, grabbed any desired channel, and operated regardless of interference with other broadcasters.

"The Radio Commission, under the new act, sought to remedy this situation.

Guard Against Monopoly.

"Virtually all of the leading stations now in existence were established before the creation of the commission. The great majority of these stations were located in congested areas because small, sparsely settled communities could not afford to support a station. Successful operation of a radio station requires considerable revenue, and the only income possible is from advertising which is most available in large centers of population.

"The Supreme Court held that stations possessed no property rights in their channels and existed only by sufferance of Congress from license renewal to license renewal, under powers delegated to the commission, and the commission is given a free hand in reducing facilities as the public interest may require. This amounts to a loan of radio facilities to broadcasters by the commission, acting for the Government. Stations have no vested rights in the air.

"There has been, and still is, a disposition on the part of some broadcasters, when they find a fertile field for revenue, to usurp the rights of other stations. Here we find an opportunity to invoke the Democratic doctrine against monopoly.

The "Quota" System.

"The tendency tomonopolize is the strongest reason for Congress controlling, through the commission, the privileges of radio transmission and reception. There must not be monopoly in radio in any shape or form."

Discussing the commission's "quota" system, under which each zone is supposed to be allotted so many "units" of station broadcasting wave length, power and operating time, Commissioner Hanley said:

"To comply with the Davis amendment to the radio act, which requires the commission to make and maintain as nearly as possible an equality of broadcasting transmission and reception among the zones, and to make a fair and equitable allocation of facilities to the states according to population, the commission has adopted a unit system as the fairest means to divide the radio facilities, which are wave lengths, power and time of operation. Under that system, the whole United States was allowed 400 units, a unit being equivalent to a 1000-watt station operating unlimited time. A full-time station of 5000 watts or more was given a value of five units.

"Two or more stations operating on a channel and using 5000 watts or more power were given a value of two units each. Stations with 500 watts power operating simultaneously on a common channel were valued at .6 units each. Stations of 250 watts, operating simultaneously on a common frequency, were valued at .4 unit each. Stations of 100 watts or less operating on a common frequency were valued at .2 unit each. All other classes of stations were given corresponding unit values.

"Under that system each zone is entitled to 80 units. The fourth zone, which I represent, consisting of Nebraska, Kansas, South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, now has 101.15 units. The first zone, comprising the New England and some Atlantic Seaboard states, 75.36 units. The second zone composed of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia, 73.44 units. The third zone, the southern states, 95.77 units, and the fifth zone, comprising the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast states, 95.77 units.

"The rules and regulations of the commission, adopted to carry out the radio act, provide that we will not grant additional facilities to over quota states or over quota zones and applicants for facilities within an over quota state must apply for facilities already in use. Furthermore, any person in an under quota state or zone can apply for the facilities of a station in an over quota zone or over quota state.

Problems Increasing.

"You can readily see how unstable the present broadcasting structure is in many respects; how it may be gradually broken down and changed. You can easily visualize some of our troubles in trying to be fair to all parties concerned, always considering first the welfare of the general public.

"Broadcasting takes up only a small part of the radio spectrum, and we are called on to control the radio facilities used for police service, television, ships, aircraft, general experimental and various other purposes. Last year the commission passed on more than 40,000 problems, big and little. As the art is rapidly developing and changing our problems are ever increasing.

"Legislative history of cities, counties, states and the Federal Government evidences the public interest in and need for education and enlightenment. I am, therefore, strongly in favor of educational programs and of community stations where local talent can be developed and used and local needs expressed and satisfied.

Hopes for Relief.

"There are few holes left, if any, for local stations, as only six channels for the 100-watt or less stations have been set aside for the whole country.

"It is my hope that we can clear the way for a few more local channels. That problem may be solved at the North American Conference to convene in Mexico City on July 10. That conference will take up the question of allocating broadcasting frequencies to all countries in North America—the United States, Canada, Newfoundland, Cuba and the Latin American nations.

"We have an agreement with Canada whereby there is no duplication of channels, but the other nations mentioned have been using any frequencies they desired, thus causing much interference with many of our stations and those in Canada. Several new high-powered stations are about ready to start operation in Mexico. It is absolutely necessary to work out an allocation to avoid chaos and confusion in the broadcasting service in the United States."

Sponsors Balk at Price For Fight Broadcast.

BECAUSE of differences over the price asked for the broadcasting rights, there probably will be no round-by-round radio report of the Jack Sharkey-Primo Carnera fight Thursday night, at least so far as the sponsors of the Jack Pearl program are concerned. It had been planned to broadcast the fight as a climax of Pearl's last program over KSD and the WEAF net and to have Pearl at the ringside to comment on the battling. But the price, $15,000, was objected to. As a result, the broadcasting of the fight may be confined to a brief announcement of the result and an occasional report while it is in progress.

New Aerial Increases WLW Signal Strength.

RECEPTION in St. Louis of broadcasts from WLW, the 50,000-watt Cincinnati station, has been materially improved since the station put into use its new 831-foot tower transmitting aerial. Programs from WLW tend to ride over static, and there is far less fading. The 500,000-watt station which WLW is building for experimental broadcasts [illegible]. The 50,000-watt WSM, Nashville, Tenn., has been much stronger since that station built a similar tower aerial.

WOMAN DESCRIBES DEATH OF THREE ON PLANE IN LAKE

Mrs. Rennie, Rescued After Craft Crashed Near Traverse City, Mich., Tells of "Horrible Nightmare."

By the Associated Press.

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich., June 24.—Suffering from exposure and the shock of seeing her husband and two other men let go and drown in Lake Michigan, as she clung for a day and a half to the wreckage of their seaplane, Mrs. Charles Rennie, 27 years old, is under the care of a physician at her home here tonight.

Meanwhile coast guards off Frankfort were searching the waters about 15 miles off shore where the seaplane was wrecked when its pilot tried to alight on the water during a fog. They are seeking the bodies of Charles Rennie Jr., Traverse City business man; James Gillette, 28, owner and pilot of the plane, and Peter Keller, his mechanic..

Mrs. Rennie was picked up by a car ferry at 8:30 p. m. Friday from a raft which had been improvised from a piece of a wing of the plane and an air cushion from its cabin. She had been on the raft since Thursday afternoon.

Tells of Crash.

Mrs. Rennie told her rescuers on Ann Arbor Car Ferry No. 7 that the plane ran into dense fog soon after it left shore.

"'Timber' (Gillette) said he would land on the lake and taxi to shore," she said, "but the fog was so dense he couldn't tell when to level off, so he hit the water at an angle, bending the pontoons backward. We all took off our heavier clothing and the plane started to settle.

"Then we climbed out on the wings and the boys started to work. We could get only one piece of one wing loose and we took the two air cushions from the cabin, but lost one of them. By this time the fog had lifted and we could see land. The plane floated until 3:30 and then we started out on the raft.

"The boys started swimming and pushing the raft toward shore while I stayed on top and held my hand over a vent hole to prevent the water from running into the wing. The boys kept calling to each other to 'stick to it' and 'Timber' said: 'I got you into this and I'll get you out.'

"Started to Talk Queerly."

"It was around 5 o'clock that Keller started to talk queerly. We all tried to cheer him up, but it was no use. He hung on for a while and in the meantime 'Timber's' conversation grew rambling. Then Keller, in spite of all we could do, simply passed into a coma and disappeared. My husband and I held onto 'Timber' for a long time, but he finally slipped out of our grasp into the water. Then my husband climbed on top of the raft with me and we floated that way all night. We talked and prayed for help and then toward dawn, his talk grew queer and I feared what was coming.

Husband Last to Go.

"A moment later Rennie slipped off the raft into the water and sank.

"While we were on the raft together, we put our feet in the water and tried to paddle toward shore. We saw several boats and tried to signal them, but it was no use. Several times, after I was alone, I almost lost consciousness, but each time I would pull myself together and hang on, keeping my hand over the vent hole all the time. From then until I was picked up it was just a long, horrible nightmare."

Capt. A. L. Larsen of the Car Ferry, said the spot where the plane crashed was off his course but that the wind carried the raft into the ship's path just before nightfall. He heard Mrs. Rennie's cries for help.

Mrs. Rennie collapsed when taken into the small boat which put out from the ferry but recovered soon after she was taken aboard the ship.

5 BORDLEY WILL LAWYERS ARGUE THEIR CONTEMPT CASE

Arguments were made before Circuit Judge Baron yesterday on the petition of five lawyers who represented the defense in the contest of the will of Mrs. Blanche Bordley to dismiss the contempt citation against them. The citation was issued Dec. 15 by Judge Rutledge, about two weeks prior to his leaving the bench.

A preliminary writ of prohibition issued by the Supreme Court prevented Judge Rutledge from hearing the case but the writ was later quashed.

Judge Rutledge objected to language contained in a motion for a new trial which, he said, was "defamatory, abusive and disrespectful to the court."

The lawyers cited are Frank A. Thompson, Samuel A. Mitchell, Richmond C. Coburn, Ernest A. Green and Albert Chandler. Their counsel, Fred L. Williams and Rhodes E. Cave, attacked the sufficiency of the citation. They further raised the point that the citation was issued at what them termed a "vacation of court," which, they said, was irregular. In support of the latter they cited a decision of the St. Louis Court of Appeals.

Judge Baron took the matter under advisement.

JACKSON COUNTY OFFERS $500 REWARD FOR FLOYD'S CAPTURE

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 24.—Sheriff Thomas B. Bash today offered a reward of $500 "for information leading to the capture, dead or alive of Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd within the boundaries of Jackson County." The offer brings to $6500 the total of rewards offered for capture of the Oklahoma desperado in Missouri, Oklahoma and Ohio. The money will be paid, if earned, from the Sheriff's private funds.

Bash also offered a $500 reward for information which will lead to the capture of the machine gunners who participated in the slaying of four officers and their prisoner, Frank Nash, at the Union Station plaza a week ago.

Bash said he had information that Floyd had been hired as a killer in Kansas City; that he frequently makes this city his hide-out and that he has committed numerous crimes in Kansas City.

"I believe," the Sheriff said, "that Floyd participated in the slaying at the Union Station. I have definite information that he was in Kansas City the night before the killing and I feel that the Union Station crime was committed by machine gunners who were hired to do the job."

Social Life in the National Capital

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—WASHINGTON society this week swung into a more colorful summer season than the capital has seen in many a year. Setting up of much new Federal machinery caused it. New officials arrived, others had to stay, and their wives turned toward social activities.

The summer horse shows of nearby Virginia have taken on added impetus. And there are dances at the hunt clubs—the big one tonight being at the Fairfax Club on the 3000-acre estate of Smith Bowman, whose wife came from Kentucky's bluegrass regions, and whose two sons ride in all the horse shows.

These horse shows in Virginia start in May and keep on going until September. Boxes were rented a year in advance for last week's annual show at Upperville, one of the outstanding displays. Mrs. John Hay Whitney won several prizes there.

Mrs. Patrick Hurley, wife of the former Secretary of War, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Gen. Mitchell, Mme. Victor Maurtua, wife of the special envoy from Peru; Mrs. Karl Boy-Ed and her sister, Mrs. William Watkins, daughters of the last Bishop Mackaye-Smith, were among those who attended the show. The next big horse show will open at Culpeper July 4.

In London last night Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, saw her niece, Mrs. Paul Hays, presented at court, one of 13 American women thus honored. Others present were Miss Alexandra Bacon, daughter of the Representative from New York; Miss Helen Robbins, Miss Eleanor Preston and Miss Margaret McReynolds.

Secretary of the Treasury Woodin has leased the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schoellkopf, and Secretary of War Dern has taken "Highlands," once occupied by Gen. Pershing.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Navy Secretary, took a party of friends to Rapidan Camp, summer retreat the Hoovers passed on to succeeding administrations.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins have taken homes in Georgetown. Mrs. Ickes, member of the Illinois Legislature, plans to join her husband here during the summer, and he will visit their Chicago home.

Miss Perkins now lives next door to her friend, Mrs. Jouett Shouse. Mrs. Shouse will publish a book next fall, "Careers for Women," to which the first woman member of the Cabinet will write a foreword.

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth is at work on her memoirs to be published in book form. She expects soon to join her daughter, Paulina, in Cincinnati. She will visit the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago, then continue her literary labors at Whitefield, N. H.

C. E. VROOMAN TO HEAD FUND APPEAL FOR HUMANE SOCIETY

Solicitation to Save Organization from Dissolution to Be Conducted Partly by Mail.

Selection of the Executive Committee of the Emergency Fund Solicitation, organized to save the Humane Society from dissolution, was announced yesterday. Claude E. Vrooman, real estate dealer, is general chairman; Miss Mary Mitchell, vice chairman; S. I. Pautler, treasurer, and Eric H. Hansen, managing director of the society, secretary.

Hansen said solicitation would be conducted by mail and with volunteer solicitors. He explained that the Humane Society does not receive support from any established relief agency, and if funds are not contributed to carry on the organization in its present emergency, it will be forced to disband.

The society handled 18 cases of heat prostration of horses in the three-day period ending yesterday. It was necessary to destroy six horses.

THOMAS H. REED WHO MADE FIGHT FOR ANNEXATION IS HERE

Comments on Typhoid Cases and the Lack of Health Control.

Thomas H. Reed, director of the movement for merger of St. Louis County and the city in 1929-30, returned to St. Louis yesterday for the first time since November, 1930. He commented on the prevalence of typhoid fever arising from polluted water in the county, which caused several deaths.

A principal argument used by Reed in advocating the metropolitan merger, which failed, was the need for protecting health of the whole community. Disease germs, he pointed out, knew no political boundaries. He warned particularly of dangers due to lack of public health control in the Meramec River valley, where much of the present typhoid originated. Reed also was interested in the recent report of a committee of the League of County Municipalities, favoring co-operation among the suburban towns on public utility questions and other matters of common interest.

Reed is professor of political science at the University of Michigan and chairman of the Policy Committee of the American Political Science Association. He came here to confer with Dean Isidor Loeb of Washington University, president of the association. Reed also is chairman of the Committee on Civic Education by Radio of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education, and chairman of the Committee on Citizens' Council for Constructive Economy.

BOSTON TERRIER CLUB'S SANCTION MATCH TODAY

About 50 Pups to Be Exhibited at Claridge as Preliminary to Annual Dog Show.

The annual sanction match of the St. Louis Boston Terrier Club for pups from two months to a year old will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Claridge Hotel. About 50 pups will be exhibited, some from other cities competing.

The match is to get pups in competition to determine their value for the annual dog show usually held in January. They will be judged in classes, male and female, of two to four months old, four to six, six to nine, and nine to 12 months.

Cups will be given to the two dogs judged best in each class, and to the best male and female of the show. Ribbons and novelty prizes will be given to the next best pups. There is no entry fee and judging will be under rules of the American Kennel Club. Another cup will be given to a Boston terrier named "Buster," who recently aroused from their beds the family members of his owner when a fire started.

H. E. Slingerland, 3244 North Park drive, East St. Louis, is secretary of the club.

Barred from Davis Oil Estate.

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., June 24.—District Judge S. J. Clendinning ruled today that Mrs. Floy S. Davis of Pittsburgh, Pa., was barred by the statute of limitations from participating in the $100,000 oil estate of the late Mark E. Davis. Mrs. Davis, who alleged she was divorced secretly by Davis in 1915, said she would appeal. Davis died in 1927.

HOMES RE-ESTABLISHED BY MANY EX-JOBLESS

Citizens' Committee Reports Reunion of Families Separated by Unemployment.

Many homes, broken by unemployment, have been re-established during recent months, it was said yesterday by E. G. Steger, director of Citizens' Committee on Relief and Employment.

The relief agencies have gathered no statistics on the subject, he said, but have heard, during the past month particularly, from many of those they have been helping that they "were on their own again," and were ready to resume normal family life without assistance from relief agencies.

It was one of the bitter paradoxes of the depression, Steger said, that many families had to separate or double up in crowded quarters while houses and apartments stood vacant.

For young couples, Steger said, the problem was not so difficult although discouraging enough. Usually it was solved by the wife returning to her parents, while the husband went back to his. If there were children, they went, in most cases, with the mother.

Among older people a greater difficulty was presented. Many of these had no near relatives to whom they might go, and in increasing numbers they turned to the relief agencies for help, raising the cost of relief to a figure unprecedented in St. Louis, Steger said.

In every instance, Steger said, the relief agencies endeavored to hold families together, but even their best efforts did not succeed in all cases. Some husbands and wives simply decided to separate and shift for themselves, a course chosen by some rather than the supposed humiliation of asking for help.

He thought it would be many months before these newly re-established families could begin to think of buying anything but the most necessary articles as they are starting again virtually at rock bottom. Their clothing usually is worn, he said, and their furniture generally worn out or sold during their time of need.

PAGEANT TO BE PRESENTED IN WINTER GARDEN JULY 17-22

Feature of Exposition of Progress to Be Given by Board of Religious Organizations.

A pageant in which several hundred persons will participate will be given at the Winter Garden, July 17 to 22 as a feature of the Exposition of Progress to be presented there by the Board of Religious Organizations.

Mrs. Clyde McNay, chairman of the program and entertainment committee, said the pageant would contrast modern and ancient industry and commerce, education, recreation, home life and fashions. It will be directed by Mrs. Beulah Nyberg Hughes.

The committee, seeking to sell 75,000 tickets to the exposition in an advance campaign, had disposed of about one-third of that number, Mrs. Norman S. Brown said. The exposition was planned to raise about $25,000 needed to carry on the work of the Board of Religious Organizations during this year.

Death was caused by a skull fracture which Zarley sustained on June 10, when he was found unconscious on the driveway of his home in Joliet. Zarley was subject to fainting spells.

TUGWELL DEFENDS AGRICULTURE AND INDUSTRY LAWS

Assistant to Secretary Wallace Addresses Federation of Bar Associations of Western New York.

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, New York, June 24—Dr. R. G. Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, today said the new agricultural adjustment and industrial control laws are in his opinion constitutional, asserting they provide recognition of change in American economic life while the constitution was not designed as a bar to progress.

In an address before the federation of bar associations of western New York, he said the tendency of anti-trust laws has been to repulse the co-operative impulses of industry.

"What was sound and economically necessary was branded as wrong legally," he said, adding that the constitution in the past has been used "as a shy of holies within which the ugly practices of free competition had been hid from vulgar eyes."

"As the government 'interfered' in days of pre-competitive exploitations with bonuses for production, tariff, grants of natural resources, anti-trust acts and prescriptions for raising two blades of grass where only one grew before, I have felt that we are only being consistent now in undertaking to intervene in other ways to conserve and maintain the industrial system," he added.

"It is a government function, not only because this conservation is a matter of public interest, but because left to itself the industrial system seems incapable of preservation.

"In this era of our economic existence, I believe it is manifest that a public interest well within the function of government and well within the authority of government under our constitution commands the protection, the maintenance, the conservation of our industrial facilities against the destructive forces of unrestrained competition. Certainly, we should not be deterred in this effort to impose upon an era the obsolete economic dogma which may have been glorified in an earlier day.

"Today and for tomorrow our problem is that of our national economic maintenance for the public welfare by governmental intervention—any theory of government or economics to the contrary notwithstanding. Hence the national recovery act and the agricultural adjustment act."

CONTRACTOR SUES FOR $80,000, ALLEGING RESTRAINT OF TRADE

Lee T. Barrett Names Six Electrical Contract Firms and 30 Individuals.

Suit for $80,000 damages was filed at Clayton yesterday by Lee T. Barrett, former electrical contractor, who charges that his business was ruined by an alleged combination in restraint of trade, which he says operated here several years ago.

Named as defendants are six electrical contracting firms, Local Union No. 1 and 30 individuals. Mention is made of four electrical contracting firms, ousted from Missouri by the State Supreme Court two years ago for anti-trust violations, as having been parties to the alleged combination to fix prices and eliminate free trade.

Barrett charges the practices alleged caused him to lose contracts, and as a result he had to abandon his business, which was at 3240 Olive street. He resides in Pine Lawn.

"It is a government function, not only because this conservation is a matter of public interest, but also because enterprises cannot act collectively for preservation.

"In this era of our economic existence, I believe it is manifest that a public interest well within the function of government and well within the authority of government under our constitution, commands the protection, the maintenance, the conservation of our industrial faculties against the destructive forces of unrestrained competition. Certainly, the constitution was never designed to impose upon one era the obsolete economic dogma which may have been glorified under it in an earlier day.

Besides the proprietor and his wife, a clerk and two customers were in the store when the robber entered, exhibiting his revolver and warning them not to make an outcry.

LEADER OF AUSTRIAN HITLERITES ARRESTED

Dollfuss Government Prepares to Carry Out Order Suppressing the Nazis.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, June 24.—Alfred Frauengeld, leader of the Hitlerites in Austria, was arrested today as the Government moved to suppress the outlawed National Socialist Party. He was taken at Villach, Carinthia, where officials said he was planning to cross the border into Italy.

Measures of preparedness were discussed with army, police and gendarmerie officials by Minister of Security Emil Fey.

Anti - Government pamphlets dropped by an unidentified airplane over Linz yesterday excited the Vienna Press. The Pamphlets called for a "new fight on Dollfuss," to "assume whatever form and employ whatever weapons deemed necessary to achieve the goal."

They drew from Chancellor Dollfuss a reply in which he said:

"Not only we members of the Government but the entire law enforcement organization, with the police and the gendarmerie, are ready to defend the homeland with the last drop of their blood."

The Chancellor, who is functioning as a virtual dictator, disclosed that his life and that of his wife had been frequently threatened of late.

The National Socialist party was outlawed by the Government early this week after investigators declared it responsible for a series of bombings and other terrorist activity throughout Austria. Today telephones and mail boxes were damaged.

There was disorder at a mass meeting here tonight at which Chancellor Dollfuss was the principal speaker. As the Chancellor began his opening sentence a Socialist in the audience interrupted, shouting:

"Herr Chancellor: Obey the Constitution!"

The interruptor was immediately surrounded and badly beaten by members of the Heimwehr and others. After 10 minutes of tumult the police restored order and Dollfuss continued his address.

The Chancellor said the death penalty would be restored in Austria if necessary to quell the Nazi disorders.

"Bomb throwers and other disciples of Brutalities have guessed wrong," he said. "The government has everything that is needed to enforce its will and peace loving citizens may rest assured that further disorders will be prevented."

Meanwhile five Nazi deputies who were excluded from the Austrian diet lower house were arrested on charges of high treason.

TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY SEAL CAMPAIGN RAISED $59,210

Decline, 19 Per Cent From Previous Years, Is Least in Large City, Treasurer Reports.

St. Louis Tuberculosis and Health Society raised $59,210 in its last Christmas seal campaign, Byron Moser, treasurer, reported yesterday to the Executive Committee. The campaign was not closed formally until June 15 because of delayed payment of pledges.

The total obtained, Moser said, was 19 per cent less than that of the previous year. This decline was less than that in any other large city, the treasurer said.

Certain activities of the society were curtailed, Moser said, to balance its budget and make more funds available for work in the five tuberculosis preventoriums. During last school year, he said, the society had furnished 180,000 free meals at open-air schools.

GENERAL REFRACTORIES CO. RECEIVERSHIP SUIT DROPPED

Satisfactory Financial Settlement Made, Says Attorney for Sam Hatupin.

A receivership suit filed at Clayton Tuesday against General Refractories Co. by Sam Hatupin was dismissed yesterday. His attorney, Bernard Greensfelder, said a satisfactory financial settlement had been made.

Hatupin, an attorney, sued as the owner of $11,000 of an issue of $5,000,000 of notes by the company two years ago. The notes were not paid when they matured March 1, but the company offered to exchange income mortgage bonds for them. Hatupin objected to that refinancing plan and filed suit.

General Refractories Co., with headquarters in Philadelphia, has a fire brick plant in Brentwood, purchased several years ago from the Evens & Howard Co.

DISBARMENT SUIT SAYS LAWYER KEPT ORPHANS' MONEY

Attorney Benjamin F. Carpenter Jr. Accused of Withholding $4300 Due Sons of J. A. Oertli.

Disbarment proceedings were filed in Circuit Court yesterday by the Grievance Committee of the St. Louis Bar Association against Benjamin F. Carpenter Jr., attorney, on the ground that he has retained unlawfully about $4300 due the orphaned sons of John A. Oertli, a former city detective.

The suit states that $5951 was recovered by legal action from Carpenter's personal bank account in behalf of the orphans, John A. Jr. and Emmett M. Oertli. Carpenter, appointed guardian for the boys by Probate Court in December, 1930, received $10,268 in life insurance on the father, depositing the money to his personal account, according to the suit.

The attorney was removed as guardian in July, 1931, the petition states, and was ordered by the Probate Court to pay over to his successor, $11,194, after deducting a $1000 fee. The fee allowance subsequently was set aside, and Carpenter ordered to pay $12,194. He failed to perfect an appeal from the decree to set aside the fee, and the order still stands.

In addition to the money recovered by legal process, $1927 in the guardian's bank account, under joint control of himself and his surety, was paid to his successor. The discrepancy between what was collected by Carpenter's successor and what is alleged to be due the orphans was paid by the surety on Carpenter's bond, so that the guardianship estate has suffered no loss.

Carpenter, when asked for a statement, said he had taken issue with the court order ousting him as guardian, and regards himself as co-guardian with the boys' aunt, Mrs. Alice Reed, named by the Court to succeed him. His position, he said, is that he is not required to make a final accounting until the wards become of age, and, therefore, he cannot now be legally charged with owing the guardianship estate anything. The attorney said he was appointed guardian at the request of the boys, and he attributes the ouster action and charges brought by the Grievance Committee to disagreements he said he had with Mrs. Reed over the care of the boys.

Judge Hamilton issued an order in the case returnable July 11, at which time Carpenter says he will present a defense. He lives at 5982 Minerva avenue and has offices at 722 Chestnut street.

Oertli, a former member of the Democratic State Committee, was killed in a fall down a staircase three years ago, several months after his wife was found dead of gas poisoning at their home, 5536 Partridge avenue.

CHARGES FRAUDULENT DEAL IN WHISTLE CO.

Bankruptcy Trustee Sues to Set Aside Equipment Transfer to Vess.

Suit to set aside the transfer of $25,000 in equipment conveyed to Vess Beverage Co. by the Whistle Bottling Co., before the latter went bankrupt, was filed in Federal Court yesterday by Edward W. Tobin, trustee in bankruptcy for the Whistle company.

Tobin alleges the transfer was made to defraud and hinder creditors of the Whistle company. He asks for an accounting and for appointment of a receiver to operate the equipment for the benefit of Whistle creditors.

The Vess company, the petition alleges, was organized by James J. Donovan, vice president, and Ralph Seibert, a director of the Whistle Bottling Co. Its offices, and those of the Whistle company, were at 2916 Locust street.

Named as defendants are the Vess Beverage Co., Donovan and Seibert, James A. Ryan, president of the Whistle company, Leroy O. Schneeberger, its secretary, and four described as directors or stockholders, Vess Jones, Walted E. Finke, A. H. Hodges and N. J. Hodges.

The transfer was made, the petition alleges, in April, 1932, when the defendants knew Whistle Bottling Co. was insolvent. To facilitate the transfer, the petition states, a fictitious debt of $9500 was set up on the company's books in favor of Jones, and certain equipment was given to him in satisfaction of that indebtedness. Jones then transferred it to the Vess Bottling Co., the petition alleges. Promissory notes, the petition says, were given for other equipment transferred.

Ryan, during hearings before Referee in Bankruptcy Coles, told of transferring the equipment to Jones, holder of the formula for the soft drink known as Whistle whom Ryan called "the angel of the bottling company." The company always owed Jones money, Ryan said, at one time as much as $30,000.

Whistle Bottling Co. went into bankruptcy last January. It listed liabilities of $70,811 and assets with a book value of $100,736, chiefly equipment which was listed at $91,375.

ST. LOUIS SCOUTS SAIL FOR EUROPE SATURDAY

Party of 20 to Attend World Jamboree to Be Held in Hungary.

The 20 St. Louis scouts who will go to the scout world jamboree in Hungary this summer have entered a five-day special camp at the scout reservation at Irondale where they are receiving final instruction in camp craft, cooking and camp sanitation.

The scouts will return to St. Louis Tuesday and spend the day with their parents before going to New York, where they will sail Saturday. Accompanying them will be one scout from St. Paul; D. S. Leland, scoutmaster of the troop; Dr. C. E. Colgate, official surgeon; and C. H. Mills, activities director of the council.

Mills was appointed director of the stunts which the entire American delegation will put on during the two-week encampment. The St. Louis group will be met in Venice late in July by Col. H. D. McBride, commissioner of the St. Louis Council, who was appointed camp chief of the American encampment last week. The jamboree will be held the first two weeks in August.

The second scout delegation to the Chicago fair will leave tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock on a special train for a week's stay. They will be accompanied by M. N. Leavitt, field executive of the Suburban district, who supervised the first trip, and William S. Parks, of headquarter's staff. Parks is substituting for Mills.

A third trip to the fair has been tentatively scheduled for Aug. 21 to 26 and several scouts have already signed up. The complete cost of the tour is $39.96.

PUBLIC SCHOOL PLAYGROUNDS ATTRACTING 40,000 DAILY

Attendance for 46 Recreation Centers First Week of Season Sets New Record.

Record-breaking attendances marked the first week of the eleventh annual season of public school playgrounds, it was announced yesterday. Unofficial estimates placed the average daily attendance at the 46 playgrounds at 40,000. Last year an average of 37,000 children attended daily.

Inter-playground competition in seven playground games will begin this week with the first contests scheduled for Thursday and Friday. The various playgrounds are divided into leagues with, in most cases, four teams to a league. Competition is provided in volley ball, net hand ball, end ball and captain ball for girls, and baseball, horseshoes and dodge ball for boys.

The playground centers are open four, eight or 12 hours daily, providing a total of 396 play hours. They are supervised by a group of 350 men and women under the direction of Rodowe H. Abeken.

Five-Run

Melillo Gets Homer With McDonald E

By James M. C

It may be that if, in the course o Killefer had started Ed Wells agains Browns would have recorded another that Hank McDonald could stop the in the fifth and final game of the ser a pretty good pitcher but, in the third and exploded. The Yanks had reache runs and this helped the former leagu a score of 8 to 4.

The Yankees won three of the five games played and the teams are even for the season with five victories apiece.

Vernon "Lefty" Gomez was the Yankee pitching workman and the southpaw pitched together a fairly good job, holding the Browns to seven hits and scattering them efficiently except in the fourth and sixth. Gomez struck out seven men and walked only two. Wells permitted only one Yank run after he went on duty in the third.

Three Homers in Game.

There were three homers in the game. Walker hit one in the third off McDonald and Dickey did likewise off the same pitcher in the same frame. Oscar Melillo got a four-bagger in the fourth with two on, the ball getting by Walker and rolling to deep center.

Today, the surprising Boston Red Sox arrive for five games with a doubleheader to start the series off. Killefer's club, in the cellar, is two and one-half games behind the Sox so the series should determine the occupant of the dungeon.

McDonald looked pretty fair when he breezed through the first inning setting the Yanks down in order, but he and his support skidded in the second and the New Yorkers rather flukily collected two runs. After two were out, Lazzeri walked and Dickey singled to center. That part was legitimate. Then, Lazzeri, caught asleep at second, dashed for third and made it while Dickey moved up when Levey's throw hit Lazzeri. Lary's pop fly fell safe in center to score the two runs.

Wells Replaces McDonald.

McDonald passed from the picture in the third, when Walker and Dickey hit homers, Gehrig tripled, Sewell doubled and Lary singled, the result being five runs for New York. Wells then went to McDonald's rescue. Fortune smiled a bit on the Browns in the fourth. With one down, Campbell walked. Then, after Burns had filed out, Gullic got two bases and Campbell went to third when Walker muffed Gullic's drive. Melillo hit to center and when Walker missed a shoe-string catch, the ball rolled to the flagpole for a homer, Melillo scoring behind Campbell and Gullic.

A fourth Brownie run came in the sixth, the component parts being a Yank fumble, a single by Campbell and Burns' drive to Chapman.

Wells did some beautiful relief pitching after his entry, but Gomez also was pretty stingy and while the Browns "pecked away" at the New York left-hander, they did little damage—in fact, none. They threatened but that was all.

Wells held the Yanks runless until the ninth when Eddie Farrell once a Cardinal and subbing for Tony Lazzeri who turned his ankle

JUST when the American Davis cup team players had settled to the conviction they were certain to reach the challenge round, the team's captain spilled the beans.

Five-Run Inning Gives Yankees 8-4 Victory Over Browns

Melillo Gets Fluke Homer With Two On; McDonald Batted Out

By James M. Gould.

It may be that if, in the course of human events, Manager Bill Killefer had started Ed Wells against the Yankees yesterday, the Browns would have recorded another victory. But, Bill had an idea that Hank McDonald could stop the New Yorkers so Hank started in the fifth and final game of the series. For two innings, he was a pretty good pitcher but, in the third, he pre-dated Fourth of July and exploded. The Yanks had reached him for six hits and seven runs and this helped the former league-leaders win the decision by a score of 8 to 4.

The Yankees won three of the five games played and the teams are even for the season with five victories apiece.

WRAY'S COLUMN

One More River to Cross.

JUST when the American Davis cup team players had settled to the conviction they were certain to reach the challenge round, the team's captain spilled the beans.

CRAWFORD

Mr. Bernon Prentice, on landing in Europe, told reporters that Jack Crawford of Australia is the world's best tennis player; and that the hardest opponent for the United States is not France, but the winner of the European zone final—Australia or England.

We suspect that Mr. Prentice's statement was meant as a sort of spur to the competitive spirit of the American players in Europe. Nevertheless, there is not the slightest doubt that the Australian team is one of the greatest in the business. Its two aces are the youthful Vivian McGrath, a genuine prodigy from all accounts, and Jack Crawford, placed as No. 1 boy in the racquet world by Mr. Prentice.

France Still Formidable.

WE IN America will take exception to Mr. Prentice's ranking of the Australian since we know from past performances that Ellsworth Vines is consistently a better player than either Crawford the veteran or McGrath, the marvelous youth.

Still, only recently Crawford beat the great Cochet in the French championships, and he and his partner eliminated the strong Japanese players from the Davis cup. It would only be necessary for Vines to be off his game a trifle, on the day of the interzone final, to give the Australians the advantage.

However, despite Mr. Prentice, most of us will continue to believe that European zone final

55-YEAR-OLD GOLFER WINS BRITISH AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP

By the Associated Press.

HOYLAKE, Eng., June 24.—The Honorable Michael Scott, at 55 the oldest player ever to win the British Amateur Golf Championship, maintained the traditional uncertainty of this sporting classic by decisively beating Thomas A. Bourn, a 30-year-old countryman, today, 4 and 3, in the 36-hole final match.

Scott was a champion of Australia when Bourn was a babe in arms. He never had advanced beyond the semi-finals before and that happened a dozen years ago. The experts figured he should have been beaten by any of the youngsters he trounced this week, certainly by George T. Dunlap Jr. of New York, the brilliant American youth, who fell before the veteran in yesterday's semi-finals.

But Scott refused to be beaten, even though he surprised himself, his friends and his opponents. Quiet and dignified, in fact introducing something of the austere atmosphere of the House of Lords to the Royal Liverpool links, Scott played carefully and slowly all week. His correct and quite faultless style was rewarded by a triumph such as no man his age ever achieved before. Away back in 1902, Charles Hutchings, at 53, won the amateur crown.

Scott's principal ally was a hard, fast fairway which gave plenty of roll to his tee shots and enabled him to offset the more slashing game of his rivals and capitalize on his steadiness around the greens. He got better as the week went along, having his closest call when he barely beat Dr. William Tweddell, 1 up, and enjoying his biggest margins of victory over Dunlap and Bourn.

Among the first to congratulate Scott was John Ball, who won the amateur title eight times and reminded today's winner he still had "plenty of time" to equal that record. Ball and Harold Hilton, another famous ex-champion, were missing from the field for the first time since they rose to fame on these Royal Liverpool links of Hoylake.

Scott was never headed in today's final, followed by 5000 spectators, after winning the first hole from Bourn. The new champion was 5 up at the end of the morning round, due to his superior iron play and greater steadiness on the greens. Bourn rallied in the afternoon and it was a see-saw affair most of the time, but he was never better than 3 down and lost his best chances to make the finish closer by mistakes on the 28th and 30th holes. Bourn missed easy shots on these two holes, Scott went 5 up again and lost only one more hole before settling the contest on the 33rd green.

WILLIE TURNESA WINS AMATEUR GOLF EVENT

MAMARONECK, N. Y., June 24.—Willie Turnesa of Fairview, Elmsford school boy, won the Westchester amateur championship here this afternoon by defeating Richard A. Jones Jr., Westchester Hills, 3 and 2.

Turnesa, young brother of Phil, Joe and Mike, came through to win over Jones by shooting three birdies in the second round. At the turn they were even, with gross scores of 40 and 41, respectively. The new champion replaces Leonard Martin

War Glory in perfect condition. He broke well in motion, was sent to the front under wraps, galloped along to top of stretch, drew out and was only galloping at end. Jovius was allowed to trail far out of it for a mile, then moved up and easily disposed of Kerry Patch. Kerry Patch was eased back in early running, came around field entering stretch, closed gamely but hung badly at end. Good Advice was a keen factor from the start, followed pace closely for a mile and a furlong then quit. Union never was a serious contender. Edelweiss made her bid in the run down the back stretch, but weakened badly in the final quarter mile.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Samuel Riddle's War Glory, a son of Man O' War, duplicated the 1920 victory of his illustrious sire in winning today the sixteenth running of the $5000 Added Dwyer Stakes at Aqueduct.

Unlike Man O' War's triumph, in which the super horse just managed to defeat John P. Grier in one of the turf's greatest races, War Glory galloped away from his five rivals, four colts and one filly, over the testing one and one-half mile course.

Swinging along in front from the rise of the barrier, the chestnut son of "Red" never left the issue in doubt. Under the guidance of Johnny Gilbert, he kept a length in front of the field to the far turn, then, much in the manner of his daddy, pulled away and at the finish was merely galloping eight lengths in front of William Woodward's Jovius.

Another length to the rear trailed Lee Rosenberg's Kerry Patch, famous for his surprise victories in the $100,000 Belmont Park Futurity last fall and the Queens County Handicap over the Aqueduct course last Saturday. Then followed Good Advice, left alone to carry Mrs. James M. Austin's silks when Mr. Khayyam was scratched. Morton L. Schwartz's Union, third in the

LETTERS SAID TO ASK $5000 FROM SHARKEY

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, June 24—Three "crank" letters that threatened bodily harm to Jack Sharkey and demanded $5,000 from Johnny Buckley, his manager, were said to have been the real reason for the heavyweight champion's hasty flight from his Orangeburg, N. Y., training camp to his Newton home tonight by Jack Conway, his legal advisor.

When Sharkey sped away from his camp, he told his training staff that he had heard of the serious illness of one of his three small children. When he arrived home, he found them at play, safe and sound.

Conway, after Sharkey and his wife had started back over the road to Orangeburg, said that the first of the letters, which were mailed in New Jersey, arrived at the training camp last Monday. The other two were delivered on the following days.

The threats were written in semi-literate fashion and were branded as the work of cranks by New York detectives who visited the camp.

Conway said that the first letter was neatly printed in pencil and read:

"Now that this fight of Sharkey more to him and you, all we want is five grand before this week is over. Otherwise we'll get something belonging to him before the fight and Sharkey is done.

"If you keep quiet, say nothing only come across we will grant you everything will be O. K. and no need to fear anyone belonging to Sharkey will be harm.

"Otherwise we carry out our plans and Sharkey isn't feeling like fighting; also pay plenty besides. We are pretty fair giving your chance first. We are well prepared and everyone belonging to Sharkey well covered so its up to you, Buckley, $5000 in 5-10 bills, so if want to play fair now is your chance. Next letter will give instructions where to place money also will be watch from now still you pay as we know you and don't make a foolish move."

The second letter, Conway said,

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—James Otto Carleton, the skinny right-hander with the fire-cracker curve, broke the winning streak of the Phillies, the losing streak of the Cardinals and became the National League's leading pitcher this afternoon.

Tex silenced the heavy guns of the ferocious Phils in the second game of a double-header and defeated them, 5 to 1, for his tenth victory of the season, after Burt Shotton's sluggers had lambasted, mauled and maltreated Bill Hallahan, Dazzy Vance, Jim Mooney and Sylvester Johnson to win the opener, 10 to 7, for their seventh consecutive triumph.

Carleton pitched a masterful game. He was in a precarious situation in the second inning when Hurst singled and Schulmerich doubled with nobody out and in mild trouble in the ninth when he walked two men after Davis had singled with two out. But the slender Son of Texas pitched out of danger both times and the only run off his delivery was a tremendous homer that Wesley "Horseface" Schulmerich hit over the high wall in right center in the fourth inning.

After Hurst's single and Schulmerich's double in the second inning, Carleton turned in his best pinch pitching of the afternoon, striking out Knothe, Davis and Warner to make the two Philadelphia hits futile.

In the ninth, after Davis' single and passes to Warner and Pinch-hitter McCurdy filled the bases, the spectators stopped their rush for the exits and shouted hopefully, but Carleton threw his low sweeping curve to Fullis and Chick grounded to Durocher to end the contest.

Two big innings gave the Redbirds enough runs to keep Carleton out in front. Medwick doubled to

"Take $100,000 to Turn Pro? Yeah, Next Season, Maybe. Say, Who's Got It?" Asks Vines

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 24.—Ellsworth Vines Jr., the United States and Wimbledon tennis champion, told the Associated Press today he "might seriously consider an offer of $100,000 to turn professional after this season, but denied any such offer had been made to him, as reported in New York, and insisted he had no plans whatever to desert amateur tennis.

"There has been a lot of talk about my turning professional ever since I won the American championship for the first time in 1931," Vines said, "but I am still playing amateur tennis. I might seriously consider $100,000, but so far as I am concerned, today is the first time I ever heard that much money mentioned for professional tennis. I haven't had any such offer."

Asked whether he intended to continue playing amateur tennis, Vines replied: "Sure, so far as I know."

New York Saturday afternoon papers published stories that Vines would be offered a fat contract to go on tour next fall or winter, as a professional, with Big Bill Tilden and his troupe. According to one of Tilden's associates, Vines would be offered as much as $100,000, if he came through to the National Amateur singles championship for the third straight year; less money, if he should be beaten.

So far Vines has resisted all inducements to turn professional, while standing as the American No. 1 amateur and chief hope in the Davis Cup quest, but several of his friends revealed recently he would seriously consider a professional offer, if circumstances were favorable at the close of the 1933 summer season. They insisted, however, that Vines had come to no definite understanding with Tilden or anyone else in the pro game and had signed no contracts of any kind.

Before Tilden departed this month for Europe, he told the Associated Press: "The 'natural' in tennis competition is a match between Vines and myself. The chance for it, in an open championship, is gone for this year, but Vines may decide to turn pro."

GIANTS DEFEAT REDS, 5-2; ATHLETICS TRIM INDIANS, 6-2

BOTTOMLEY HITS HOME RUN TO SAVE DERRINGER FROM SHUTOUT

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Giants turned in their best stickwork of the week today to defeat the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 2, and to improve their position at the head of the National League standing.

The Terrymen rapped Paul Derringer and John Picus Quinn for an even dozen hits and bunched them in an effective fashion, getting seven in the fourth and eighth innings, to score two runs in each.

This swatting made it easy for Leroy Parmelee to turn in his sixth victory in eight starts. He allowed the Reds only six safeties and lost a shutout by tossing a home-run ball to Jim Bottomley after Harry Rice had scratched a single in the seventh.

Braves Get 14 Hits Off Warneke, Win 2-1

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, June 24.—The Boston Braves today slammed Lon Warneke for a total of 14 hits, but wasted so many that they had to go 11 innings to nose out the Chicago Cubs, 2-1. It was the Tribe's fourth win in a row, the second straight over the Cubs and the first success it has had against Warneke in two seasons.

Although he was hit in every inning, the Braves were unable to score on Warneke until the ninth, which Al Spohrer opened with a single. Dick Gyselman sacrificed him and Joe Mowry, pinch hitting for Pitcher Huck Betts, scored the catcher with a long single to right. This tally tied up the game, for Frank Demaree's homer gave the Cubs a run in the second frame.

VIRGIL DAVIS TAKES NATIONAL LEAGUE BATTING LEADERSHIP

By the Associated Press.

Virgil (Spud) Davis' activity with the bat in the Phillies' doubleheader against the St. Louis Cardinals led a day of heavy hitting for the Big Six yesterday and sent him past his teammate, Chuck Klein, into the National League batting lead and second place in the sextet. Davis made six hits in nine times up to raise his average 12 points, while Klein lost four with two hits in eight tries. Al Simmons and Joe Cronin each hit three out of four, while Heinie Manush's hitting streak finally was broken and he dropped to third in the American League. Jim Collins of St. Louis replaced Randy Moore as the third man in the National, hitting three out of seven for a .349 mark.

Cards Win, 5-1, From Phils, After Losing, 10-7

start the second frame, but feared that Collins' double to right center might be caught and had to stop at third. Medwick scored after Klein caught Allen's line drive and O'Farrell singled to right to score Collins.

Errors helped the Cards to make the score one sided in the seventh. Medwick, first up, was safe on Bartell's fumble and Collins, who bunted for a sacrifice, was safe on Hansen's wild throw to first. Allen's safe bunt toward third filled the bases and Rogers Hornsby was called from the dug-out to bat for O'Farrel. Rogers slapped a single to center, his fifth consecutive safety as a pinch hitter, and Medwick and Collins scored and Allen reached third. Durocher followed with a long fly to Schulmerich and Allen scored the final run of the game.

The Cardinals put up a game fight in the opening game to overcome the Phillies' lead but the enemy was in a vicious batting mood, collecting 18 safeties off four Redbird hurlers and if it had not been for Philadelphia errors, the contest would not have been as close as it was.

College Pitcher.

Johnny Jackson, a 21-year-old right-hander from the University of Pennsylvania, with a sophomore curve and a freshman tendency for doing the wrong thing whenever the chance offered, isseud seven bases on balls and made a balk, but despite all his mistakes and wildness, he would have breezed to victory without help, if his support had been at all respectable.

Fullis' double, a pass to Bartell, Hurst's triple, and Schulmerich's single gave the Phils three runs in the first inning, Jackson's pop double, Fullis' single and Klein's double added one in the second and doubles by Schulmerich and Davis, Knothe's single and three passes made the third inning good for three runs.

Hallahan was knocked out in the third and Vance forced in a run with a pass before he ended the inning.

Four Runs on One Hit.

Passes to Medwick and Wilson, and singles by Durocher and Frisch gave the Cardinals two runs in the second and that was all the scoring they could do until the sixth when Philadelphia errors drove Jackson to cover. Wilson opened the sixth with a walk, Durocher grounded out and Crawford, batting for Vance, was safe on Warner's wild throw, Wilson scoring. Bartell missed Martin's grounder and when Fullis also missed connections with the ball, Crawford scored and Martin reached second. Martin took third on Frisch's infield out and scored when Jackson, startled by Pepper's wild dash for the plate, committed a balk. Orsatti then walked and when Collins tripled to center, scoring Ernie, Holley replaced Jackson and struck out Watkins.

That put the Cardinals within one run of a tie, but with Mooney pitching, Fullis singled in the seventh, took second on Bartell's sacrifice and scored on Klein's twenty-third double of the season, a sock against the much dented and much-berated right field wall.

Hornsby Hits Homer.

Hornsby batted for Mooney and the Cards again were within one run of a tie when Rogers slapped a homer into the bleachers in left center, but in the eighth with Sylvester Johnson on the hill, Davis singled, Warner doubled and Fullis doubled to left center for his 100th hit of the year, sending Davis and Warner home.

Collins was hit by a pitched ball in the ninth and singles by Watkins and Crabtree filled the bases with one out, but Allen, batting for Wilson, popped to Bartell and Slade, for Johnson, grounded gently to Warner to end the contest.

With the Giants taking the measure of the Reds, the Cardinals lost ground in the race and are now two full games behind Bill Terry's surprising Manhattan band.

Redbird Notes

THE Cardinals will play their first exhibition game of the season tomorrow, meeting a semi-pro team at Camden, N. J. They depart tomorrow night for Boston where they open a series with the Braves Monday.

Frankie Frisch, Jimmy Wilson, Bill Hallahan and Pepper Martin, selected as members of the National League squad for the game with American League stars, have been instructed by President Heydler to report to John McGraw at Comiskey Park, Chicago, at 11 a. m., July 6.

Jackson started the first game by walking Martin and Frisch. Eleven of his first 12 pitches were balls and with a call of three and nothing on Orsatti, Shotton ran from the dugout and talked with the young pitcher. Jackson then found the plate, retired Orsatti and Collins on outfield flies and struck out Watkins.

After getting at least one safety in the last 17 games in which he had played, Orsatti went hitless in the first game of the twin bill. He also was hitless in the second game, running his hitless string to two contests.

The bargain attraction attracted about 15,000 customers.

Chick Fullis' five hits in the first game gave him the honor of being the first National League player to make 100 hits. His 100th safety drove in two runs in the eighth. It was a fly to left center that popped out of Medwick's glove for a double.

Between games the Baseball Writers 'Associations' most valuable player trophy for 1932 was presented to Chuck Klein, and a fraternal organization of which Jimmy Wilson is a member, gave him a chest of silver.

was about the same as the first one, except it directed Buckley to place the demanded $5,000 at "the reservoir and Sedgwick, by the rock pile under the rocks."

Conway agreed with Buckley that the author referred to Reservoir road and Sedgwick street, a corner near the Sharkey home in Newton. The third letter was a duplicate of the second.

Boston and Newton police disclaimed knowledge of the reported threats against Sharkey and the only official activity was a close guard on the boxer's home, where his children are being cared for by their maternal grandparents.

He also added that Sharkey's sudden home-coming would not disrupt his training for next week's title bout with Primo Carnera in Long Island City. Conway said that the titleholder reached the peak of condition several days ago and that he must cease all but the lightest kind of work to avoid going stale.

LINEUPS PICKED FOR FIRST DAY'S PLAY IN RYDER CUP MATCHES

SOUTHPORT, Eng., June 24.—One of the briskest golfing battles yet waged for the Ryder Cup, Anglo-American professional team trophy, is awaited Monday and Tuesday here. Lancashire and the North of England are making big preparations for the international tussle between Captain Walter Hagen's invaders and a strong British side directed by the veteran J. H. Taylor.

Arrangements have been made to handle up to 10,000 spectators for the two days of play, which will consist of four two-ball foursomes Monday and eight singles matches Tuesday. The Prince of Wales will be here for the final day's competition.

In four previous series, each country has been victorious twice on home links, and the British are confident of sustaining this record.

Captain Hagen met with Captain Taylor tonight and announced the pairings.

The two-ball foursomes Monday were arranged as follows: Hagen and Sarazen vs. Percy Allis and Charles Whitcombe; Olin Dutra and Densmore Shute vs. Abe Mitchell and Arthur Havers; Paul Runyan and Craig Wood vs. W. H. Davies and Syd Easterbrook; Ed Dudley and Bill Burke vs. A. H. Padgham and A. Perry.

In the singles matches Tuesday, Horton Smith and Leo Diegel, the remaining two members of the American team will compete, but the lineup was not announced.

FIVE-RUN INNING GIVES YANKS 8-4 VICTORY OVER BROWNS

Brownie Notes

MANAGER KILLEFER will put his best pitching foot forward against Boston in today's doubleheader for he has selected Irving Hadley and George Blaeholder to work the two games. Killefer is rather keen on getting out of the cellar and, at present, the Red Sox are barring the exit.

Manager McCarthy of the Yanks is plainly worried about the pennant-situation in general. Says he, "The boys aren't hitting as they should and the pitchers aren't clicking on the road. Maybe, we'll get going when we get home but we've two more stops in the West." Joe is so used to winning pennants that to be in second place even temporarily is rather upsetting.

The mascot-goat "Coma," is still operating. Yesterday, when the workmen went to get the field ready, they found "Coma" asleep in the wheelbarrow. It took more than moral suasion to get him out, too.

Jack Knott, Brownie pitcher, was in uniform for the first time in many days. Far underweight because of his illness, he will be unable to do any pitching for at least two weeks.

Oscar Melillo was moaning because his fellow countrymen, Tony Canzoneri, lost his lightweight title to Barney Ross. "Somebody ought to write Mussolini about such a decision," says Oscar.

SHARKEY

NEW YORK, June 24.

THE Jack Sharkey-Primo Carnera heavyweight championship fight next Thursday night at Madison Square Garden Bowl in Long Island City will not be broadcast, it was definitely decided today by William F. Carey, president of the Garden Corporation.

y the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The most izarre rivalry in all the fight business—the enmity of a white-eyed ailor and a circus freak—comes to ts natural conclusion in the battle it of the Madison Square Garden Bowl on Long Island, Thursday ight.

It may be the last stand of the ailor, Jack Sharkey, heavyweight hampion of the world, or it may be the end of the myth of the giant Primo Carnera, the mountain of a man who looks like some wierd mammalian throwback to the misty eras before civilization.

But whatever way the battle tide flows through 15 rounds of championship war, the faithful expected o storm the bowl to the number of 0,000 will look upon two of the most unusual characters the ring has ever seen, certainly the strangest contrast since spindley Bob Fitzsimmons, with the legs of a middleweight and the shoulders of a heavyweight, tackled the human rizzly, Jim Jefferies, at Coney sland 34 years ago.

Caused the Death of Schaaf.

Around the 265 pounds of Carnera's bulk, discovered in a circus de show in France where he was ending iron bars across his chest, as grown a legend of invincibility hat increased last winter when Ernie Schaaf, blond stablemate of Sharkey, died here after Primo nocked him out in 13 rounds.

Around that tragedy weaves one f the most spectacular of all the trange angles of a strange fight.

Sharkey owned half of Schaaf's contract, tutored him, planned some ay to retire as champion and ass his crown along to the quiet, lond youngster who like himself earned his early fighting in the United States Navy.

The night Schaaf went down nder a light left jab, the surface f his brain inflamed by an attack f influenza before he had entered he ring, Sharkey helped carry im to the corner, lugged him in is arms to the dressing room.

And it was Sharkey who met the pale-faced Carnera, coming fearfully into the room to see if there wasn't something he could do, met him with a snarl and an oath that ent the huge Italian stumbling way like a great collie dog that ad been whipped by its master.

Sharkey Out for Revenge.

So the time comes Thursday night, and Carnera will face a champion more venomous than at any time in a career that has run from the ridiculous in fighting to he sublime.

A creature of moods and fancies, ysterical sometimes either in victory or defeat, but always possessed at times of superb skill Sharkey in efforts against Harry Wills, Jimmy Maloney, Jack Dempsey, Max Schmeling, Tommy Loughran, and in the first fight with Carnera (whom he knocked down nd beat easily in 15 rounds) was great heavyweight.

With his ring career ending by is own work this September, with very bit of his training aimed toward a knockout victory, Sharkey may have found in the revenge of Schaaf the stimulus he needs to age a perfect battle.

He is well conditioned, weighing bout 205 pounds, while Carnera, who has dropped as low as 260, may have worked too long and too ard for this struggle.

The bettors, looking back to the Schaaf fight, and to Carnera's improvement, have cut the odds against Carnera to 6 to 5. When Sharkey gave the Italian a beating two years ago, he entered the ring 5 to 1 favorite.

rimo Pounds Four Sparring Partners

y the Associated Press.

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., June 4.—Primo Carnera went back today to the job of training for his 5-round title chance against Jack Sharkey, Thursday night, refreshed y a day of complete rest.

Full of energy, he lit into four parring partners and belted them round thoroughly through seven ounds of boxing, two each with Harold Mays, Umberto Aris and Arthur Huttick, and one with Jerry avelic. He was on the road early his morning for a six-mile jaunt nd finished the day, still eager to o, with 10 minutes of bag punching.

The same schedule tomorrow will ind up Carnera's heavy work. He ill coast through the early days next week.

NEW YORK, June 24.

THE Jack Sharkey-Primo Carnera heavyweight championship fight next Thursday night at Madison Square Garden Bowl in Long Island City will not be broadcast, it was definitely decided today by William F. Carey, president of the Garden Corporation.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The most bizarre rivalry in all the fight business—the enmity of a white-eyed sailor and a circus freak—comes to its natural conclusion in the battle pit of the Madison Square Garden Bowl on Long Island, Thursday night.

It may be the last stand of the sailor, Jack Sharkey, heavyweight champion of the world, or it may be the end of the myth of the giant Primo Carnera, the mountain of a man who looks like some wierd mammalian throwback to the misty eras before civilization.

But whatever way the battle tide flows through 15 rounds of championship war, the faithful expected to storm the bowl to the number of 0,000 will look upon two of the most unusual characters the ring has ever seen, certainly the stangest contrast since spindley Bob Fitzsimmons, with the legs of a middleweight and the shoulders of a heavyweight, tackled the human grizzly, Jim Jefferies, at Coney Island 34 years ago.

Caused the Death of Schaaf.

Around the 265 pounds of Carnera's bulk, discovered in a circus side show in France where he was bending iron bars across his chest, has grown a legend of invincibility that increased last winter when Ernie Schaaf, blond stablemate of Sharkey, died here after Primo knocked him out in 13 rounds.

Around that tragedy weaves one of the most spectacular of all the strange angles of a strange fight.

Sharkey owned half of Schaaf's contract, tutored him, planned some day to retire as champion and pass his crown along to the quiet, blond youngster who like himself learned his early fighting in the United States Navy.

The night Schaaf went down under a light left jab, the surface of his brain inflamed by an attack of influenza before he had entered the ring, Sharkey helped carry him to the corner, lugged him in his arms to the dressing room.

And it was Sharkey who met the pale-faced Carnera, coming fearfully into the room to see if there wasn't something he could do, met him with a snarl and an oath that sent the huge Italian stumbling away like a great collie dog that had been whipped by its master.

Sharkey Out for Revenge.

"When the time comes," choked Sharkey that night, blind with rage, "I'll take care of that guy for Ernie."

So the time comes Thursday night, and Carnera will face a champion more venomous than at any time in a career that has run from the ridiculous in fighting to the sublime.

A creature of moods and fancies, hysterical sometimes either in victory or defeat, but always possessed at times of superb skill Sharkey in efforts against Harry Wills, Jimmy Maloney, Jack Dempsey, Max Schmeling, Tommy Loughran, and in the first fight with Carnera (whom he knocked down and beat easily in 15 rounds) was a great heavyweight.

With his ring career ending by his own word this September, with every bit of his training aimed toward a knockout victory, Sharkey may have found in the revenge of Schaaf the stimulus he needs to wage a perfect battle.

He is well conditioned, weighing about 205 pounds, while Carnera, who has dropped as low as 260, may have worked too long and too hard for this struggle.

The bettors, looking back to the Schaaf fight, and to Carnera's improvement, have cut the odds against Carnera to 6 to 5. When Sharkey gave the Italian a beating two years ago, he entered the ring 5 to 1 favorite.

Primo Pounds Four Sparring Partners

By the Associated Press.

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., June 24.—Primo Carnera went back today to the job of training for his 15-round title chance against Jack Sharkey, Thursday night, refreshed by a day of complete rest.

Full of energy, he lit into four sparring partners and belted them around thoroughly through seven rounds of boxing, two each with Harold Mays, Umberto Aris and Arthur Huttick, and one with Jerry Pavelic. He was on the road early this morning for a six-mile jaunt and finished the day, still eager to go, with 10 minutes of bag punching.

The same schedule tomorrow will wind up Carnera's heavy work. He will coast through the early days of next week.

TENNIS PLAY TO OPEN TOMORROW AT WIMBLEDON

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 24.—America's No. 1 tennis ace, Ellsworth Vines Jr., was deprived of competition today against his fellow Californian, Lester Stoefen, as rain cancelled the London championship finals.

Vines, Helen Wills Moody and a strong cast of American tennis stars will start competition Monday in the Wimbledon championships, well-rested from a week of keen competition at the Queen's Club. Mrs. Moody also was a scheduled finalist today in the London tournament, but had no chance to decide the issue with Mrs. J. B. Pitman, English player. There will be no playoffs, because of the prohibition of Sunday competition and the conflict with Wimbledon.

Cliff Sutter, Keith Gledhill and Lester Stoefen all are considered strong contenders in the Wimbledon singles for the title now held by Vines. Other "seeded" favorites are Jack Crawford, Australian champion, and Henri Cochet of France.

GATEWAYS WILL TRY FOR EIGHTH STRAIGHT IN CONCORDIA LEAGUE

The Gateways, leaders in the Concordia League, will try for their eighth victory in as many starts this afternoon when they meet the Franklins at Concordia No. 1, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

V. Valendy, manager of the Gateways, announced that Johnny Tobin, once rightfielder for the St. Louis Browns, will join the team. Four former minor leaguers—Frazier, Brooks, Farrel and McCoy—and two St. Louis University representatives—Heitz and Savage—are members of the club.

MAX SCHMELING GOES TO BAVARIA TO REST

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 24.—Max Schmeling, the former heavyweight boxing champion, just returned from the United States where he was knocked out by Max Baer, left this morning for Garmischpartenkirchen, a famous Bavarian resort, for a rest.

Previously published cable dispatch today reported Schmeling had unexpectedly changed his plans, upon arrival in Germany, and booked passage back to New York.

The German's manager, Joe Jacobs, in Chicago, said Schmeling's pre-arranged program called for him to return to the United States in the fall, for fights in New York and Chicago, then possibly in Miami, Fla., next winter. Schmeling announced before leaving New York that he will marry Anny Ondra, German screen star.

will be won by the Americans, but that the real tough spot in the road ahead is the elimination of France.

Cochet has a habit of coming to scratch for the annual challenge round in his best trim. And when he's that, it takes a rare player to surpass him.

Mr. Schulte Vocalizes.

FRED SCHULTE, in Milwaukee recently, got the following off his chest, according to Sam Levy of the Milwaukee Journal:

"I got two good breaks in baseball. One when I was sold by the Brewers to the Browns; the other when the Browns traded me to Washington.

"Even if I was a Ty Cobb, I would never have amounted to anything with the Browns. No player can amount to much with that club. The trouble there is the ball game is run from the front office. They had me daffy there last year. One time on the road the manager got a wire to make me change my batting stance.

"The Washington club is run differently. That's why it is near the top and the Browns near the bottom."

So no players could make good with the Browns? Well, Fred, there's a Mr. Melillo who came to St. Louis from the same club you did. He made good and is still at it, while you—well, Fred, look up your record here.

It's a Long List.

THEN there's Sam West, with whom you swapped places. Sam is doing even a better job with the Browns than you are with the Senators. Jack Burns, Levey and Art Scharein blossomed out as real players as soon as they joined the Browns, and Rick Ferrell developed into a $100,000 asset while with the club.

Irving Hadley was just trading material when he came to the Browns—he's an ace today.

Long before Schulte the Browns brought out a number of great players and hitters, led by Sisler, Walter Gerber, Marty McManus, Baby Doll Jacobson, Urban Shocker, Kenny Williams and many others.

Perhaps there have been rough spots for some of the players on the Browns' roster; but those who loved the game and tried their best at all times managed to make an impression on the rest of the baseball world.

Schulte was with the club several campaigns, but there wasn't a voice lifted in the local bleachers to protest his going from our midst.

What, No Murderers' Row!

CONTRADICTING the prevailing impression that the all-star batting teams of the major leagues would prove murderous to opposing pitchers, unofficial figures for the National League group show that the team batting average of the 18 players chosen by ballot and by the league president is only .294. This is 11 points lower than the average of the Washington club of the American League, the best hitting outfit in the "big time."

Averages of two or three seasons ago showed five clubs of one league had batting averages above .300.

Unless the National League stars develop unexpected strength during the game, the American League hurlers need not worry.

The following averages, including games of last Tuesday, reveal that several formerly extraordinary hitters are now doing just so-so.

INFIELDERS.
Terry	New York	.276
Frisch	St. Louis	.318
Bartell	Philadelphia	.305
Traynor	Pittsburgh	.308
English	Chicago	.264
Cuccinello	Brooklyn	.232
Infield batting average		.284
OUTFIELDERS.
Klein	Philadelphia	.361
Martin	St. Louis	.349
P. Waner	Pittsburgh	.275
O'Doul	New York	.258
Berger	Boston	.304
Hafey	Cincinnati	.324
Outfield batting average		.312
CATCHERS.
Hartnett	Chicago	.294
Wilson	St. Louis	.294
Catchers' batting average		.270
Grand average, except pitchers		.294

PITCHERS.		W.	L.
Hallahan	St. Louis	9	2
Hubbell	New York	10	4
Schumacher	New York	8	4
Warneke	Chicago	8	6

The best hitting club that could be put in the field would, not counting the pitcher, be able to hit .317, a rather husky figure. On the whole, however, fans will be surprised to note the lack of a real "Murderers' Row."

Still Defective.

OFFICIALS who for years have been revising the rules under which pitchers are credited with winning baseball games, still have plenty of work ahead.

Thursday's Yankees - Browns game proved the inadequacy of the crediting system. Irving Hadley pitched eight innings of a ball game. He did a good job of it, although it was a terrifically hot afternoon. He struck out nine opponents and left the game at the close of the eighth inning with the score tied.

Blaeholder pitched the ninth inning and maintained the scoring status willed him by Hadley. Then the Browns negotiated a run with which Blaeholder had nothing to do. In fact he himself was thrown out at the plate.

But he got credit for winning the ball game, pitching one inning against eight for Hadley!

A screw loose there, Bo.

A few days ago Hallahan, with a lead of 10 runs, cracked and practically broke the morale of his club. Street allowed him to "take it" until late in the inning when Carleton was sent in. The team was "shot" by that time. Carleton pitched to only two batters, but was named the "losing" pitcher in the report. It was Hallahan's fault that the club lost.

Evidences of inequalities in crediting ball games are of almost daily occurence. The proper way to classify pitching merit is on the earned runs the hurlers allow. While this system is far more accurate, the fans like the "won and lost" columns in the averages and they have been retained on this account in spite of their misleading figures.

138 BOYS ENTER DISTRICT JUNIOR GOLF TOURNEY

Junior golfers to the number of 138 or more will open play Tuesday at Woodlawn Country Club for the District title left vacant when Joe Switzer, Sunset, passed the age limit of 21.

This tournament, which has been one of the most attractive golf events of the year for several seasons has drawn even a better field than usual this season, for there are a number of boys any one of whom has a chance to win, and it will take great golf to emerge victor.

Bob Cochran, former champion, will be unable to play as he is in Buffalo to compete in the national Intercollegiate championship there.

Among the outstanding entrants are Paul Jamison, Glen Echo, who gave Elliott Whitbread such a run in the recent district; George Schlapp, Algonquin, Princeton student and one of the better players among the juniors here; Buzz Swift, Sunset; Alanson Brown, Bellerive, Jack Berkley and Jimmy Benson, Frank Bredall, Woodlawn. All of these boys and several others must be considered in the running for the title in what promises to be a wide open struggle.

The qualifying round of 18 holes is scheduled for Tuesday; first and second round matches Wednesday, third round and semifinals Thursday and the 36-hole final Friday.

Kirkwood Plays Belleville in Trolley League

With a possibility of a three-cornered tie resulting in the Missouri-Illinois Trolley League between the Kirkwood A. C. Vess club and St. Louis Dairys, two important games will be played this afternoon.

In order for this tie to exist the St. Louis Dairys will have to come through with a victory over Kirkwood at Belleville, while at Kirkwood the Vess team will have to dispose of the Madison Hubtowners.

Should Kirkwood be successful against the Dairys and Vess lose to Madison, the Missourians will capture the first half pennant.

Jess Doyle, former major league twirler, who held the Vess nine to two hits last week, will go to the hill for the Dairys in the encounter with Kirkwood, while Jimmy Thompson, ace hurler of Kirkwood, is down to oppose the former Brownie.

At Kirkwood, the Vess club is favored over Madison. The previous meeting resulted in a 7 to 3 win for the St. Louisans. Bill Morris, pilot of Madison, will use Phillips on the hill, while either Glenn Barthleme or Lukemeyer will work for Vess.

Bob Fisher will take his Bly-Moss squad to Edgemont to face the Edgemont A. C. in the third league game. Bly-Moss is in third place in the race while Edgemont is in the cellar. Manager Fisher will use Blake on the hill with Johnny Harshany getting the assignment for Edgemont.

All games start at 3 o'clock.

Match Play Tournament.

Jimmy Manion has presented the idea of holding a match play open tournament to the St. Louis District Golf Association and has been appointed chairman of a committee of professionals and amateurs to consider the proposal and go ahead if it is decided that it is feasible.

Briefly, Manion's idea is to hold a six-day event the first week in October either at the St. Louis Country Club or Normandie open to all professionals and amateurs who care to compete regardless of whether they are members of the District.

The goal, of course, would be to provide needed revenue for the District Association and to that end tickets would be put on sale immediately, prizes to be determined by receipts.

With Manion on the committee are Ben Lahrman, president of the St. Louis District, Clarence Wolff, secretary, Sid Le Gear, Sidney Salomon and other prominent amateurs together with Ralph Guldahl, John Manion and Jimmy Fogertey, representing the professionals.

Professional Schedule Today.

Bill Schwartz, who is leading the St. Louis Professional League with five victories and no defeats opposes Orville White, Westborough, in the feature match of this afternoon's program at Westwood. In the same foursome, starting at 2:45 o'clock, Ben Richter, Triple A, will oppose Jim Cockburn, Westwood.

At 2:35, Jack Burns, Creve Coeur, plays Clarke Morse, Normandie, while Ed Duwe meets Les Scanlon, University City.

At 2:40 Walter Kossman, St. Clair, plays Jim Fogertey, Osage, and Francis Schwartz, Meadow Brook, meets John Manion, Sunset.

Meadow Brook golf club was admitted to active membership in the St. Louis District Association at the June meeting of the organisation at St. Louis Country Club Friday. Rock Spring Country Club, Alton, was admitted to non-resident membership.

The June handicap tournament of the district will be held at Algonquin, Friday.

Members of the City and County Bar Associations will hold their second annual golf tournament at Bellerive Country Club, Friday. Don Cramer, Normandie, won the tournament last year. The event is 18 holes of medal play on a handicap basis.

Chicago boys are showing considerable interest in the Western Junior tournament which is to be held at Normandie, July 11, 14. Six of the first seven entries received by H. C. Bartholomay, secretary of the Western Golf Association, 175 W. Jackson boulevard, Chicago, were from Chicagoans. The entry fee is $1 and must be in Bartholomay's hands by July 5.

DEMPSEY LEADS IN BIDDING FOR CANZONERI-ROSS RETURN BATTLE

CHICAGO, June 24—If Barney Ross keeps his promise to be a real fighting champion, he'll have plenty of chances.

No sooner had the spectacular Chicago boxer won the world's lightweight title from Tony Canzoneri at the Chicago Stadium last night than he and his manager, Sam Pian, were bombarded with offers to meet the jaunty New York Italian in a return battle for the crown. Promoters, grasping opportunity caused by one of the closest and most disputed decisions in years, figured a rematch was a "natural."

Promoter Jack Dempsey and the Chicago Stadium, which took it on the chin for approximately $10,000 because of last night's disappointing crowd of 11,204 spectators, appeared to lead the promotional brigade today in the skirmish to get the fight although Ross planned a long rest. September was regarded as approximately the month for the match.

Seldom has a decision split Chicago's boxing fans as the one that toppled Canzoneri from his throne last night and gave the title to the surprising Ross, a professional fighter of only a few years experience. Referee Tommy Gilmore, who called it a draw, stuck by his guns with the assertion that Ross did have a very slight shade but that no champion should lose his title on such a slender margin, Judges Edward Hintz and W. A. Battye, who gave the decision to Ross by four and six points, respectively, vigorously defended their scoring systems.

Meanwhile, Canzoneri and his manager, Sammy Goldman, shouted "Robbery" and Ross excitedly accepted congratulations. A canvass of experts and red-hot boxing fans showed a slight majority in favor of Canzoneri or a draw decision.

"I was jobbed and robbed," Canzoneri repeated with a wounded look on his face. "I thought I had won all the way. Ross is a good kid but he hasn't had enough experience. I want to meet him again —in New York—but not here. I'll never fight again in Chicago after last night's robbery."

Ross said Tony fought a great fight but "I think I won easily."

All Canzoneri got out of the match was a lost title and $30,000 in cash. Ross drew about $7,200, so the big loser was the Chicago Stadium, which denied reports that the fight had broken the new stadium promotional combine.

"The Chicago Stadium will keep right on promoting fights and come back with that return battle between Tony and Barney," said Promoter Joe Foley.

WAR GLORY, LIKE HIS SIRE, MAN O' WAR, WINS DWYER STAKES

Belmont Stakes, was fifth, and the Wheatley Stable's Edelweiss, the only filly in the race, sixth and last.

War Glory was the fourth son of Man o' War to win the event, while Fair Play, sire of the super horse, captured the race in 1908 when it was known as the Brooklyn Derby. American Flag won in 1925 and Crusader carried off the honors the following year, setting a new track record of 2:29 3-5. War Glory's time was 2:31 4-5. And Genie won in 1928.

Coupled as the Trainer James Fitzsimmons entry, Jovius and Edelweiss went to the post the 3 to 2 choice to win the purse of $4250. There was plenty of support, however, in the crowd of 10,000 for War Glory at 4 to 1. Kerry Patch was held at the same odds in contrast to 30 to 1 in the Queens County Handicap and 30 to 1 in the Futurity.

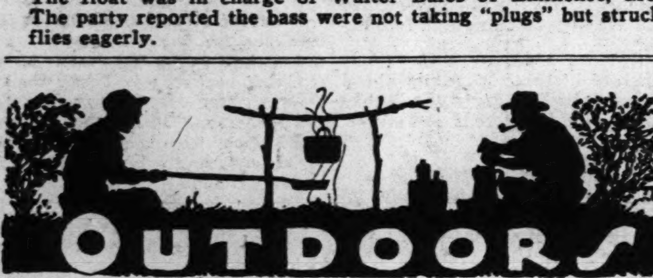
A Current River 3-Pounder

D. R. Fitzpatrick has just landed this fine small mouth bass on a fly, during a recent float on the Current River. The Post-Dispatch cartoonist and party reported fine fly fishing during a three-day trip from Round Springs to Van Buren. The float was in charge of Walter Bales of Eminence, Mo. The party reported the bass were not taking "plugs" but struck flies eagerly.



Fish and Game Fund Shrinks.

Frankly admitting that the Missouri Game and Fish Department today is facing its most serious financial crisis in years, Wilbur Buford, State Game and Fish Commissioner, this week sought the co-operation of sportsmen in license matters, according to Jefferson City advices.

Within six months of the last annual financial statement, when former commissioner John H. Ross turned over to the new administration a balance of $123,000 in park and game protection funds, that balance had been reduced approximately one-half.

The balance in both funds on June 20 was $89,056, against which is yet chargeable $20,000 which the Legislature appropriated out of the funds for other than park or game propagation purposes, and current expenses and salaries for June.

There has been a consistent decrease of revenue throughout the first half of this year, making necessary inroads on the two game department funds. A check-up June 20 showed a park fund balance of $41,486 and a game protection fund balance of $47,570.

$20,000 for Celebrations.

The Legislature appropriated, and the items released by Gov. Park, a total of $15,000 out of the game department funds for the Century of Progress exhibit at Chicago and $5000 out of the park fund for the Ste. Genevieve Centennial Celebration. It was at first believed that only $10,000 had been taken from the game department funds by the last Legislature, but a check-up last week of appropriation items released showed that amount to be doubled.

"Facing Financial Crisis."

"Every possible effort to maintain the present satisfactory game protection and propagation program will be made by the department regardless of the critical financial problem that is facing us," Wilbur Buford, State Game and Fish Commissioner said.

"There is little question but that the Missouri department today, with fixed operating costs and a marked decrease in revenue during the first six months of 1933, faces the greatest financial crisis in years. In order that we may meet this crisis we must have the full co-operation of all sportsmen in the State.

"Revenue cannot be increased much until the fall hunting season, but sportsmen can aid greatly by helping in the enforcement of license laws. If everyone who goes on stream or afield during the next few months obeys the license laws and has in his possession a license and sees that everyone he encounters hunting and fishing has the necesary permit I believe we can weather the summer with its low revenue income," Buford said.

Tightening of license law enforcement by Game Wardens is expected to be forthcoming in an effort to increase the sale of hunting and fishing permits.

Here's a Chigger Chaser.

That common chemical used by photographers, sodium hyposulphite which is better known as "hypo," makes a desirable addition to a sportsman's first aid kit. A saturated solution of this chemical can be used as a poison ivy remedy or when applied generally over one's body acts as a repellant of chiggers and wood ticks.

Wood ticks should not be pulled off of one's body when they become attached lest their heads be pulled off inside the skin and cause an infection. Ticks are body breathers and usually can be made to withdraw their heads when Kerosene is applied to them. This failing, a pair of hot tweezers will cause them to release their hold.

HUGHES AND HUFF TO MEET AGAIN HERE WEDNESDAY

Announcement was made last night by Jack C. Tippett, matchmaker for the Walter J. Hatzfeld American Legion Post, that he has signed Joe Huff, Elmer Koehler's popular South Sider, and Frankie Hughes, hard punching Clinton, Ind., welterweight, to trade blows in the feature 10-round match on Wednesday night's boxing card at the Battery A outdoor arena.

The scrap will mark the second meeting between the pair as they battled to a spectacular draw on the last boxing show of the season at the Arena.

Huff claimed a foul twice in the first battle but after thorough medical examinations no evidence was produced that Hughes had landed his punches below the belt. Hughes claimed he should have won the bout on a knockout either of the times it was proven Huff was not hit low.

Hughes, who is handled by Claude Jones, sends word here that he is training daily and has his solar plexus punch working to perfection. He states that blow will be his chief offensive weapon in the coming setto.

Ray Kiser, Cliff Greenwood, Peewee Jarrell, Young Russell, Gus Campbell, Rufus Miles, Mexican Joe Rivers and Speghett Decaro are some of the fighters Hughes has beaten.

In his two scraps with Allen Matthews, which took place in Indiana rings, Hughes won and lost decisions.

Huff entertained fans with some high class ring work here last winter in defeating both Nick Groglio and Gus Wilson's protege, Billy Hogan, twice. His last triumph was scored at the expense of Joe Red, shifty Arkansas battler.

Huff's left ear which was badly battered in his first bout with Hughes has healed.

OFFERS REPORTED FOR BUILDINGS ON MARKET STREET

Union-May-Stern Seeking Long Term Lease on Five-Story Structure at Seventh Street.

EXCHANGE STORE IS PLANNED THERE

Property of McNichols Furniture Co. at No. 1020 Also Mentioned in Possible Deal.

By Berry Moore

Offers involving Market street property, including the southeast corner of Seventh and Market streets and the six-story building of the McNichols Furniture Co., at 1020 Market street, were significant developments of the week in real estate.

The Union-May-Stern Co. is negotiating through the Oreon E. & R. G. Scott Real Estate Co. for a long term lease on the five-story building at the southeast corner of Seventh and Market for an "Exchange Store."

The building is situated just east of and adjoining the cut-off, which extends diagonally from widened Market street to Sixth and Walnut streets. It is the only remaining building on the Market street side of this block. The buildings on the east, including the six-story building of the Blanke-Wenneker Candy Co., were razed and the ground acquired for the cut-off. A triangular plot, or small plaza, has been formed at the southwest corner of Sixth and Market. The cut-off is dominated by the 12-story American Hotel at the northeast corner of Seventh and Market, and the 14-story American Annex at the southeast corner of Sixth and Market.

Building Remodeled.

The building sought by the Union-May-Stern has been remodeled and modernized, with 40 feet taken off its front to make way for the widening of Market street. It has about 30,000 square feet of usable floor space. The site has a frontage of 60 feet on Market with a depth of 95 feet on the cut-off and on Seventh.

The building is owned by the Smyth-Watts Realty Co., a holding corporation, which purchased it from the late Sheehan brothers. It was built for the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., which occupied it many years, under a lease. Arthur A. Fuldner, manager of the commercial leasing department of the Oreon E. & R. G. Scott Realty Co., is handling the negotiations for the building.

Several significant offers have been submitted for the six-story building of the McNicholls Furniture Co., at 1020 Market street, which has a commanding view of North Eleventh street. The building was recently remodeled with 40 feet taken off the front for the widening of Market. It contains 54,000 square feet. The first floor is 21 feet deep, including a balcony, which forms an attractive feature. The site has a frontage of 94 feet on Market, reduced from 135 feet with the widening of Market. The concern also has a large warehouse adjoining on Eleventh south of Market, which is also said to be involved in the negotiations. Henry McNichols, president of the concern, admitted that an offer for the property was under consideration. The concern was established by the late Henry McNichols.

The building is diagonally across from the new Civil Courts building, and is just east of the site of the new Federal building, at the southwest corner of Eleventh and Market, projects which have inspired renewed interest in this thoroughfare, further enhanced by the widening of Market street, according to real estate men.

Building Is to Be Started.

Work is to be started shortly on the new building of the St. Louis Daily Record, a legal publication, for which a site was recently acquired at the southwest corner of Tenth and Market. Plans have been prepared by Mauran-Russell & Crowell, architects, and the site has been cleared for the new structure, which will cost $225,000. Hiram B. Morse is president of the Daily Record Co.

The basement in the building at the southeast corner of Seventh and Olive streets, has been acquired under a long lease by restaurant interests, represented by Martin & Breitt. The space, 47 by 67 feet, will be converted into a cafeteria. The rental was not mentioned. The first floor corner store is occupied by a cigar and cigarette chain store. Strategically, the corner is regarded as well situated for an enterprise of this nature.

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. has renewed its lease of the concern's quarters at 6390 Delmar boulevard, in the building at the southeast corner of Delmar boulevard and Westgate avenue. The

The cut-off is dominated by the 12-story American Hotel at the northeast corner of Seventh and Market, and the 14-story American Annex at the southeast corner of Sixth and Market.

Building Remodeled.

The building sought by the Union-May-Stern has been remodeled and modernized, with 40 feet taken off its front to make way for the widening of Market street. It has about 30,000 square feet of usable floor space. The site has a frontage of 60 feet on Market with a depth of 95 feet on the cut-off and on Seventh.

The building is owned by the Smyth-Watts Realty Co., a holding corporation, which purchased it from the late Sheehan brothers. It was built for the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., which occupied it many years, under a lease. Arthur A. Fuldner, manager of the commercial leasing department of the Oreon E. & R. G. Scott Realty Co., is handling the negotiations for the building.

Several significant offers have been submitted for the six-story building of the McNicholls Furniture Co., at 1020 Market street, which has a commanding view of North Eleventh street. The building was recently remodeled with 40 feet taken off the front for the widening of Market. It contains 54,000 square feet. The first floor is 21 feet deep, including a balcony, which forms an attractive feature. The site has a frontage of 94 feet on Market, reduced from 135 feet with the widening of Market. The concern also has a large warehouse adjoining on Eleventh south of Market, which is also said to be involved in the negotiations. Henry McNichols, president of the concern, admitted that an offer for the property was under consideration. The concern was established by the late Henry McNichols.

The building is diagonally across from the new Civil Courts building, and is just east of the site of the new Federal building, at the southwest corner of Eleventh and Market, projects which have inspired renewed interest in this thoroughfare, further enhanced by the widening of Market street, according to real estate men.

Building Is to Be Started.

Work is to be started shortly on the new building of the St. Louis Daily Record, a legal publication, for which a site was recently acquired at the southwest corner of Tenth and Market. Plans have been prepared by Mauran-Russell & Crowell, architects, and the site has been cleared for the new structure, which will cost $225,000. Hiram B. Morse is president of the Daily Record Co.

The basement in the building at the southeast corner of Seventh and Olive streets, has been acquired under a long lease by restaurant interests, represented by Martin & Breitt. The space, 47 by 67 feet, will be converted into a cafeteria. The rental was not mentioned. The first floor corner store is occupied by a cigar and cigarette chain store. Strategically, the corner is regarded as well situated for an enterprise of this nature.

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. has renewed its lease of the concern's quarters at 6390 Delmar boulevard, in the building at the southeast corner of Delmar boulevard and Westgate avenue. The lease is for five years. The building, a three-story structure, is owned by Chain Stores Property, Inc., of which R. D. Brown of Indianapolis is president.

The Walgreen Drug Co. occupies the corner store, and Woolworth, an inside store of the building, under long leases.

HOME LOAN LAW MAY BE OPERATING WITHIN 30 DAYS

Corporation Machinery to Be Perfected and State Managers Appointed, William F. Stevenson Announces.

Small home owners desiring relief from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation will be obliged to mark time until managers of the corporation in each state are appointed by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board at Washington, James L. McQuie, member of the Des Moines Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said yesterday.

William F. Stevenson, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board at Washington, announced that it was hoped that the machinery of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation would be set up within 30 days.

McQuie explained that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, sponsored by President Roosevelt to provide emergency relief to home mortgage indebtedness, is authorized to issue $2,000,000,000 in bonds to obtain funds to carry out the purposes of the law. The bonds, maturing in not more than 18 years and bearing interest of not more than 4 per cent, will be secured by mortgages taken by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. The Government will guarantee the interest, though not the principal, of these bonds.

A home owner desiring to secure a loan, McQuie said, will apply to his State branch of the corporation. If his application is approved, the prospective borrower must secure the consent of the holder of his mortgage to accept the Government-backed bonds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in exchange for his lien. In connection with such exchanges, the corporation is authorized to advance cash to pay taxes and assessments on the real estate, to provide for necessary maintenance and repairs and to meet the incidental expenses of the transaction.

The face value of these bonds shall not exceed $14,000, or 80 per cent of the appraised value of the real estate. The home owner whose mortgage has been refinanced by the corporation will pay off the 5 per cent interest and the principal in monthly payments within 15 years. However, payments may be made quarterly, semi-annually or annually, at the discretion of the corporation.

Loans will be made only on real estate on which is located a dwelling for not more than four families, used by the owner as a home or held by him as a homestead, and valued at not more than $20,000.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation will be managed and controlled entirely by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Though administered by that board, it will have no connection with the Federal Home Loan banks.

The Home Owners' Loan Act repeals the section of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act which provided for direct loans to home owners. According to McQuie, this makes the Federal Home Loan banks purely rediscount banks for member institutions.

APARTMENT BUILDING SOLD IN BLUE RIDGE TERRACE

$70,000 Reported to Have Been Paid for 12-Suite Structure at 7557-63 Buckingham Drive.

An apartment building of twelve suites, at 7557-63 Buckingham Drive, in Blue Ridge Terrace, has been purchased by A. H. Klauber for an undisclosed investor. The reported consideration was $70,000. The Glick Realty Co., with offices at 822 Chestnut street, handled the negotiations. Miss Etta Marcus was the grantor of the title.

The apartments consist of five rooms, tile baths, electric refrigeration, etc., and there is a garage in the basement for the use of tenants. Total annual rentals approximate $10,000, according to Nathaniel M. Glick, who handled the deal.

The three-story structure occupies a lot 130 by 115 feet. It is of comparatively recent construction. Blue Ridge Terrace extends from Wydown boulevard on the north to Clayton road on the south, Glenridge Terrace on the east and Westwood drive on the west. It is the only part of the Moorlands not restricted against apartments and duplex residences. So far construction in Blue Ridge Terrace has set a high standard.

Other Apartment Deals.

Purchase contracts have been closed for two large West End Apartments owned by the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, as was announced yesterday by Louis A. Maginn, loan correspondent of the company. Locations of the buildings and names of the purchasers will be withheld pending execution of deeds. The Prudential has also disposed of several flats and "Pinco" homes, for which deeds are being drawn.

Maginn announced that prices on all the real estate owned of the Prudential company in St. Louis would be increased 10 per cent July 1. The list includes a wide variety of residences and apartments, as well as building holdings, recently acquired by the Prudential company under mortgage loans, and which, it is said, are available at attractive prices.

Negotiations are under way for a large Lindell boulevard apartment, owned by an estate, represented by the Henry R. Weisels Co. The consideration is said to be around $175,000. The apartment is sought as an investment.

Brewery Transactions.

Transactions in brewery properties, carrying large rehabilitation plans, were events of the real estate week. The Gast brewery, comprising six buildings and an entire block at Broadway and Hornsby street, was purchased by a syndicate represented by Love & Co., Inc. The purchase price was $100,000, according to William R. Cady, vice-president and real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., which represented the bondholders of the Independent Brewing Co., the grantors of the transaction.

The syndicate is composed of John A. Love, Alexander T. Gast, Otto Rassfeld, John M. Heller, Eugene Freund, I. N. Rosenfeld, O. V. Ellis, William Healy and A. A. Christopher. In this connection the Gast Brewery Co. has been formed, with Alexander T. Gast as president, to operate it. About $80,000 is to be spent in rehabilitation of the plant, which is expected to be on a production basis Sept. 1. Draught beer will be manufactured exclusively.

Negotiations have been concluded for the American Brewery buildings, occupying an entire block at Broadway and Dorcas streets, also owned by the bondholders' committee of the Brewery company represented by Cady. The purchasers, whose names are withheld, are said to be a Chicago group, which has made a large outlay for rehabilitation of the plant. The price involved for this plant has not been disclosed.

CINCINNATI LANDLORD CANCELS $200,000 OF DELINQUENT RENT

W. P. Devon, Who Has 800 Tenants, Notifies Those in Arrears That Debt Is Wiped Out.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., June 24.—William P. Devou, 76 years old, has canceled debts of $200,000 owed to him by occupants of 500 pieces of property, it was learned today. Notices of cancelation of all delinquent rents, as of June 1, are being received daily by many of the 800 families, more than 90 per cent of them Negroes, that rent his West-End property.

Devou, said to be a millionaire, gained wide publicity in former years by his controversies with city officials over housing restrictions. For years Devou's horse, on which he made his rounds, collecting rent, was a familiar figure in Cincinnati. Several years ago, however, horse and rider fell and Devou was injured so seriously he gave up riding. Later he arranged with a bank to take over management of his properties, but he still maintains an active interest in them and often supervises repair work or other construction.

Devou said many of the tenants had not been able to pay rents for many months, and that he canceled the debts at the suggestion of the bank.

Keynes, Noted British Economist, Former Ardent Free Trader, Comes Out for Economic Nationalism

Rivalry of Many Nations, Each Prying Into the Home Markets of the Others, More Conducive to Irritation Than Good Will Since Mass Production Is Now Possible in Almost All Lands and Climes.

WHO HE IS:

JOHN MAYNARD KEYNES caught the attention of the world with his prophetic book, "The Economic Consequences of the Peace," in 1919. It had a profound influence on subsequent economic thought touching reparations and other problems growing out of the war.

Keynes was born June 5, 1883, and was educated at Eton and King's College, Cambridge. He is a fellow and Bursar of King's College, editor of the Economic Journal, secretary of the Royal Economic Society and member of various learned bodies. He was in the India office of the British Government before the war, in the Treasury, 1915-19, and was the principal representative of the Treasury at the Paris peace conference. He has written extensively on economic subjects.

BY CHARLES G. ROSS,
hief of the Post-Dispatch Washington Bureau.

WASHINGTON, June 24.

HE distinguished British economist, John Maynard Keynes, the vindication of whose prophecies in "The Economic Conse- ences of the Peace" raised him to the stat- e of a major prophet in the eyes of many mericans, has deserted the cause of free ade and espoused the opposite doctrine of tional self-sufficiency. He gives the rea- ns for his conversion in a remarkable ar- e in the current issue of the quarterly Yale iew.

Keynes' thought is closely similar to that Prof. Raymond Moley, Assistant Secretary State and the President's friend and ad- ser, who is now on his way to the troubled onomic conference at London. Another no- ble American parallel to his conclusions is und in the writings of the Harvard dean, allace B. Donham, who observed ruefully in recent speech that his views had made him most an outcast intellectually and moral- "

Keynes strikes somewhat the same note in reference to the "pain and grief" that the idency of his remarks will bring to many his friends.

He was brought up, Keynes writes, believ- g in free trade as almost a part of the oral law. He recalls that as late as 1923 preached that free trade was based on in- putable fundamental truths. He does not w challenge these bases of his old faith. t the "orientation" of his mind has anged, and he believes that many others ve experienced a similar change.

He has come to believe that not economic ernationalism but national self-sufficiency he way to peace in the world. On this int his views coincide strikingly with Don- m's.

Said the Harvard dean in a speech at the harton Alumni Institute in March: "Im- essed by the importance of peace in a world ently involved in almost universal war, we nnot ignore the fierce competition which ll be a necessary corollary if we keep in- easing this economic interdependence. . . . host of intelligent and idealistic men and men, in spite of the disillusionment of the t 15 years, still believe the only way to event another world war is the road of in- national co-operation leading to gradual ation of a superstate. These lend their werful support to current theories. I think s the one sure road to another world war."

angers in Foreign Trade.

Says the Britisher Keynes: "We are paci- t today with so much strength of convic- n that, if the economic internationalist uld win this point, he would soon recapture r support. But it does not now seem ob- us that a great concentration of national ort on the capture of foreign trade, that e penetration of a country's economic struc- re by the resources and the influence of for- n capitalists, and that a close dependence ur own economic life on the fluctuating nomic policies of foreign countries are safe- ards and assurances of international peace.

"It is easier, in the light of experience and esight," continues Keynes, "to argue quite e contrary. The protection of a country's sting foreign interests, the capture of new rkets, the progress of economic imperialism these are a scarcely avoidable part of a eme of things which aims at the maximum international specialization and at the max- m geographical distribution of capital erever its seat of ownership. Advisable do- stic policies might often be easier to com- s, if the phenomenon known as 'the flight capital' could be ruled out.

"The divorce between ownership and the l responsibility of management is serious thin a country, when, as a result of joint ck enterprise, ownership is broken up ong innumerable individuals who buy their erest today and sell it tomorrow and lack ogether both knowledge and responsibility wards what they momentarily own. But en the same principle is applied interna- nally, it is, in times of stress, intolerable— m irresponsible towards what I own and se who operate what I own are irrespon- le towards me.

"There may be some financial calculation ich shows it to be advantageous that my ings should be invested in whatever quarter of the habitable globe shows the greatest marginal efficiency of capital or the highest rate of interest. But experience is accumulating that remoteness between ownership and operation is an evil in the relations among men, likely or certain in the long run to set up strains and enmities which will bring to nought the financial calculation.

"I sympathize, therefore, with those who would minimize, rather than with those who would maximize, economic entanglement among nations. Ideas, knowledge, science, hospitality, travel—these are the things which should of their nature be international. But let goods be homespun whenever it is reasonably and conveniently possible, and, above all, let finance be primarily national. Yet, at the same time, those who seek to disembarrass a country of its entanglements should be very slow and wary. It should not be a matter of tearing up roots but of slowly training a plant to grow in a different direction.

"For these strong reasons, therefore, I am inclined to the belief that, after the transition is accomplished, a greater measure of national self-sufficiency and economic isolation among countries than existed in 1914 may tend to serve the cause of peace, rather than otherwise. At any rate, the age of economic internationalism was not particularly successful in avoiding war; and if its friends retort that the imperfection of its success never gave it a fair chance, it is reasonable to point out that a greater success is scarcely probable in the coming years."

Mass Production Easy for All.

He believes that at one time, when countries differed in the extent of their industrial equipment far more greatly than at present, the advantages of a high degree of national specialization were considerable.

"But I am not persuaded," he continues, "that the economic advantages of the international division of labor today are at all comparable with what they were. I must not be understood to carry my argument beyond a certain point. A considerable degree of international specialization is necessary in a rational world in all cases where it is dictated by wide differences of climate, natural resources, native aptitudes, level of culture and density of population.

"But over an increasingly wide range of industrial products, and perhaps of agricultural product also, I have become doubtful whether the economic loss of national self-

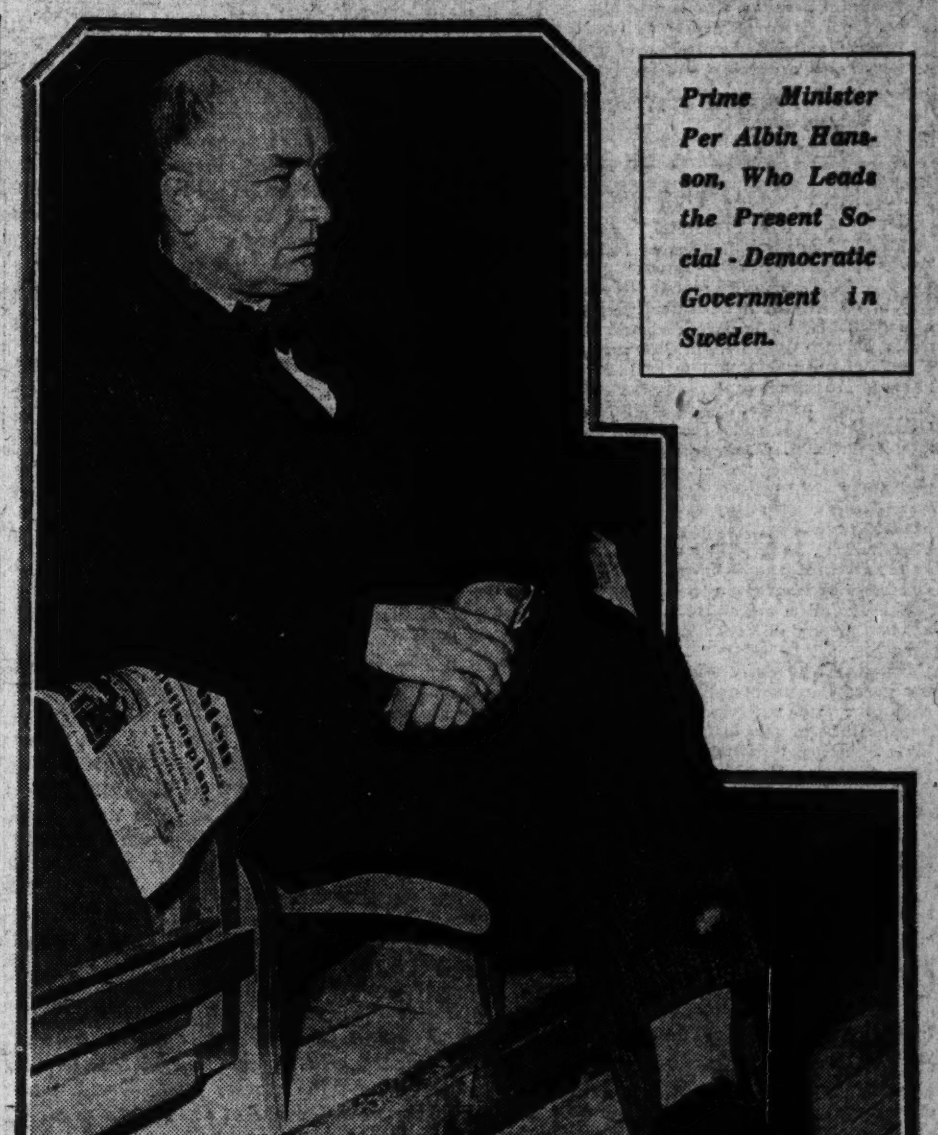
Scandinavian Countries Taking a Middle Course Between American Capitalism and Marxian Communism

Sweden, Norway and Denmark Have Devised National Industrial Policies Which Employ the Conflicting Elements of State Control and Private Initiative for Social Objectives, With Marked Success.

In Sweden, Controlling Portion of Railways, Telegraph and Telephone Service Is Publicly Owned—Government Also Owns and Operates Mines and Forests—Has Many Millions Invested in Industry Which Yield Annual Profits of More Than 6 Per Cent.



Prime Minister Per Albin Hansson, Who Leads the Present Social-Democratic Government in Sweden.

Article I

By M. W. CHILDS
(Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.)

STOCKHOLM, June, 1933.

THE development of the Scandinavian countries during the past 120 years has been to a certain degree independent of the rest of Europe. They have taken part in none of the wars that have wracked the European continent during that period and they have settled their own controversies in a peaceable fashion.

While there is a certain national rivalry among them, all three, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, live in peace and a measure of co-operation. And thus isolated from the more violent storms of European nationalism, they have evolved what may be considered in many respects a new form of economic life. By a gradual process—by cautious evolution and not by sudden and violent revolution—they have modified many of the essential features of capitalism, achieving in this manner new economic forms. The Scandinavian countries, in the present stage of development, stand midway between the wholly uncontrolled capitalism of America before the crash and the arbitrary, Marxian communism that prevailed in Russia before the drastic, practical modifications introduced a year ago by Josef Stalin. In effect it is a compromise between these two radically opposed systems that has been achieved.

New Economic Form.

In the United States the acquisitive human being was left entirely alone to develop the fatal and destructive greed of an Insull. In Russia at the outset there was imposed upon the human being an arbitrary system in which the diverse needs and desires of individuals seem to have been ignored. Here in Scandinavia it has been recognized that man is both a social being, living in a community, and an individual. As new economic forms have been worked out, there has been achieved again and again a working and satisfactory compromise between state control and private initiative, between bureaucracy and private exploitation, between the selfishness of the few and the demands and needs of the many. This is a significant contribution which other and larger nations, now in a state of flux and chaos, may well consider.

The process of socialization of natural resources and chief economic functions has gone forward unevenly in the three countries. Denmark has developed agricultural co-operatives to a higher point than Sweden. Sweden has developed retail co-operation farther than the others. But these inequalities offset each other and the three countries have arrived at approximately the same point of development in what may be a transition between capitalism and a new form of economic life. A form, it should be added, which perhaps none of the old tags, socialism, state capitalism, state socialism, will fit.

State Undertakings.

Because Sweden is larger and her industrial life more varied, I have chosen to show in this article and the three articles which follow the nature of Sweden's economic evolution, with occasional references to the other two countries. It should be understood throughout that what has happened in Sweden has also happened in Norway and Denmark. Here in brief are the major facts that point toward socialization:

The state had invested in business undertakings in 1929, the last year for which complete figures are available, $613,452,000, on which it received in that year a return of 6.08 per cent. (This, it must be remembered in a nation of only 6,000,000 population, distributed sparsely over a large area, much of which is not tillable.)

The state's activities are many and varied.

It owns and forests at a profit nearly one-fourth of the forest area of Sweden.

It controls and directs the operation of about one-third of the mines.

It owns and operates at a profit railway, telegraph and telephone systems, and it in part controls, through subsidies, airplane and steamship lines.

It generates 34 per cent of the electricity used; municipalities generate another 15 per cent. This 50 per cent constitutes all but about 20 per cent consumed by domestic users. And of the 30 per cent used by industry much is generated on a co-operative basis.

It controls and derives a considerable profit from the sale of tobacco and liquor and the broadcasting of radio programs. It is now proposed to make the importation and wholesaling of coffee and the manufacture and export of arms and munitions also state monopolies.

Co-Operative's Work.

Through large co-operative organizations the citizens themselves have taken over important economic functions as follows:

Co-operative societies own and operate an estimated 10 per cent of all industries; for the most part manufacture for domestic consumption.

The co-operatives have between one-third and one-half of the wholesale and retail trade of the nation in food, shoes, clothes and certain other commodities.

Co-operative societies, together with the cities themselves, have built and sold, on a co-operative basis, between one-fourth and one-third of the housing in the two principal cities.

Co-operatives control an estimated 40 per cent of agricultural marketing.

This is to list only the chief points. In many other ways both the state and the co-operative movement have entered the domain of private business. There is now a project under way for a unified system of state theaters in Stockholm and in the provinces, a project both cultural and economic in nature. The state controls and operates two different types of lotteries. The chief co-operative society has taken over an increasing proportion of all forms of insurance. In diverse ways significant economic changes slowly come about.

Dependent on Exports.

Probably the chief theorist of the Social-Democratic party, now in power, is Ernst Wigforss, Minister of Finance in the Cabinet. He has this to say of the future:

"With the present world uncertainty, it is difficult for the Social-Democratic party of Sweden to fix a definite program of socialization. We are a small country and we are dependent upon our exports to a far greater degree than the United States. I believe you exported about 10 per cent of your goods, while we exported more than 20 per cent.

"Up until the present crisis, it was the opinion of the party that socialization should progress gradually, step by step. In view of present world conditions, there is doubt now as to whether such a gradual program can be accomplished. Many have come to the belief, and not only Social-Democrats but Liberals and members of the Farmers' party, that a more decisive and comprehensive change is necessary.

"Before the worst effects of the crisis, our party had discussed, not officially but informally, the socialization of certain of the major export industries, particularly the wood pulp industry, which is vital to Sweden. I believe the Royal Commission on Socialization, which has been considering the whole question for several years, has also considered this phase of the process of socialization. I am of the opinion that their report will recommend the socialization of certain heavy industries. But within the past two or three years we have been faced with such urgent problems that we have not felt that it was the proper time to present a comprehensive program to the voters. With so many uncertainties it is impossible to fix a long-term course. Next month we may take a drastic step that we had never contemplated a month ago, just as now in America you are moving in a direction that a year ago no one dreamed possible."

The Scandinavians have never been greatly concerned with economic theories and concepts. They are a practical people, given to solving problems as they arise in a practical way. It is strong condemnation to say of a man in public life, "He is impractical." It is frequently said in praise of Prime Minister Per Albin Hansson, "He is a very practical man." That is high tribute.

Although Scandinavia is close to both Russia and Germany, extremists of right and left have never had much influence. The Communist party in Sweden, which is small, is split into two factions, a Swedish faction and a Moscow faction. While there is some reflection of German Fascism here, in "The Fighting Front," a group of young conservative hot-heads, it is as yet unimportant. There are few fanatics and few who advocate the suppression of views radically contrary to their own. A feeling of pride in the institutions of democracy pervades Swedish life, a sense that the integrity and intelligence of the whole people will be a trustworthy guide in even the most difficult and perilous times.

Sweden is a true democracy. The structure of her parliamentary system of government is very much like that of England. The progress toward socialization listed in the various points above has taken place in a democracy in which a king is the nominal ruler. This political structure has proved flexible enough to allow these important economic changes.

"A Human Flag."

The royal family serves a definite function in present day Sweden. And there is a feeling, even among the Social-Democrats, that a king might continue to have a useful function if the state were completely socialized. In this point of view is a frank recognition of the need of human beings for color, for display, for show, for a living symbol of the dignity and honor of the state. The king, in a democracy such as Sweden, has been called with aptness "a human flag." There was a debate in the parliament not long ago that illustrates the attitude toward the crown.

Each year when the question of the appropriation for the royal family is brought up, the radicals, Social-Democrats, Communists and Liberal Republicans, have a field day of oratory in which they denounce royalty and all its works in the strongest terms. That happened this year, as every year, and one Communist in the parliament, Ture Nerman, used language of violent denunciation. He is, it should be explained, an intellectual, a poet, who wouldn't, in the words of one of his friends, "harm a rabbit." At the end of Nerman's speech, the oldest Republican member of the parliament arose to reply. This was Carl Lindhagen, a former Mayor of Stockholm.

"Well, I've listened to many speeches on the crown," said Lindhagen, "and I've made many myself, advocating the abolition of the crown. But I think our bloodthirsty friend goes a little too far. The king is like Santa Claus. We know when he puts on that red robe and that high crown that he is just one of us, but we like to see him dress up in those fine clothes."

The parliament voted the appropriation, as it always has in the past. The royal family of Sweden is not expensive. The last appropriation for the households of the King and the Crown Prince was $209,400 at the present exchange (taking the Swedish crown at 20 cents instead of its normal value of 26.8). This covers the upkeep of two palaces which are also in part museums, it covers certain public gifts, public appearances and public costumes.

Conscientious Royalty.

The opinion in Sweden is that royalty earns its income. The members of the royal family take their job conscientiously for the most part. They recognize that, as symbols, they must lead exemplary lives. King Gustav V, who was 75 years old on June 16, has permitted many of the burdens of public office to fall upon his eldest son, Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus. The latter works for many causes, for temperance, for public health, for the preservation of historical monuments. He knows certain fields of archeology as well as the experts. He is so conscientious that he keeps his calendar of public duties filled days in advance. It was Ivar Vennerstrom, a Social-Democrat, the present Minister of Defense, who said recently that if Sweden were to become a republic, he would back the Crown Prince for the first president.

Royalty seems to have on the whole a sound conception of its position in Sweden. The first of the royal line, Jean Baptiste Bernadotte, one of Napoleon's Marshals, was elected heir to the Swedish throne in 1810. Members of this same Bernadotte family, distant relatives of Sweden's rulers, may still be found, living in most humble circumstances, in France, and the royal Bernadottes have never lost sight of their modest origin. They are in a sense inconspicuous. The public sees them on public occasions, on festival days, but otherwise they have little direct part in the life of the nation.

How near to completion the process of socialization of resources and industry can go within the present political structure is a much debated question. The majority of Swedes are so unconcerned with theory that they are either indifferent to or prefer to ignore the implications of what has happened in the direction of state ownership and co-operation. The Royal Commission on Socialization, mentioned by Wigforss, has been considering the question for more than 10 years. Conservatives charge that the commissioners, who are mostly Social-Democrats, have several times purposely delayed the re-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Chicago Parliament of Faiths.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

RELIGION today is rapidly developing into a way of life, rather than a system of belief, to be defended and propagated by sword and fagot, law and coercion. The major religions of the world, named in the order of the number of their respective adherents, are Buddhism, Christianity, Islam, Hinduism, Judaism, Shintoism, Confucianism and Jainism. These great faiths, continuing the traditions of international fellowship, which began with the World Parliament of Religions at Chicago's first World's Fair in 1893, have joined hands with lesser creeds in a new Fellowship of Faiths, and have sponsored an international congress of faiths which is now convened at the Century of Progress Exposition, in Chicago.

Building bridges of understanding over the great chasms of religious intolerance, prejudice and ignorance is the avowed purpose of the new Fellowship of Faiths. It is bringing together spiritual leaders from every part of the world, to counsel and plan together for the common tasks of today. It aims to co-ordinate the spiritual heritage of all nations—distilled from a million years of human vintage—into an all-embracing fraternal oneness, a unity wherein diversified cultures may meet on neutral and holy ground for the common good of man.

The delegates to the current congress of religions are determined that religion shall no longer be a divisive and reactionary force in the world; and that the conflicts between contemporary creeds and dogmas are of less importance than the building of a new cultural, economic and political order—a united, classless and warless world. Co-operation—the law of all orderly progress and the life blood of civilization—is the keynote of the nascent foundation of faiths.

A "faith," as defined by the congress, is any type of spiritual confidence, conviction or philosophy which is molding the life of an earnest, thoughtful and high-minded portion of the human family. This is the most liberal interpretation of religious faith ever to come to the notice of the world. It not only includes the agnostic Southern Buddhist and Confucianist, but the Humanist, who has exalted humanity to the throne of God. It is a great circle of love and understanding which takes in all men. Heresy and infidelity are swallowed up in mutual respect, sympathy and service.

At the sessions of the World Fellowship of Faiths (which are to take place frequently until Aug. 27 and then daily for three weeks), there is to be no comparison of creeds or dogmas, no competitive parade of superior religions and races; but rather, a focusing of the highest inspiration of each on the fundamental problems of all. The souls of men are sorely wounded, perplexed and disunited, and the congress is seeking, not a uniformity of religious creed, but a common spirit of understanding and appreciation—a true unity enriched by cultural variety. Here the representatives of organized social groups from remote parts of the earth are meeting on the common ground of mutual help, and each, on terms of equality, is making his peculiar and significant contribution to human advancement.

Important records on the book of humanity are being written this summer, at Chicago, by the spiritual leaders of men. All believers in world fellowship and peace—regardless of race, creed or political affiliation—are invited to take part in this profound undertaking. The Parliament of Faiths controls no army or navy; it has no recourse to material weapons; but, like Gandhi, is relying on the sword of an unconquerable idea, the idea that all religions, cultures and nations will become distinct but harmonious notes in a perfect symphony of a world at peace.

Crowded Suburban Busses.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT looks as if the suburban bus lines are going to ignore the lesson they should have learned from the demise of the suburban street car lines. I commute to St. Louis on the Vandalia Bus Line, which runs over Illinois Highway No. 11. Every morning and evening, passengers are standing between Fairmont City and downtown East St. Louis.

Not long ago, I counted in the narrow aisle 19 persons, not including a baby about a month old, in its mother's arms. If the bus managers think it is more comfortable to stand in a bus than in a street car, they are mistaken. You didn't need to stoop over in a street car.

All this discomfort on this particular line could be eliminated if one bus was assigned to make the East St. Louis-Fairmont City circuit regularly during the morning and evening rush. It need not cross the river to St. Louis or go farther east than Fairmont City. The present condition is unfair to the Fairmont City commuters, and also to the longer distance riders, who should not be inconvenienced by the crowded aisles. Such a policy is penny wise and pound foolish.

REGULAR COMMUTER.

The New Deal and the Square Deal

Now that the special session of Congress has adjourned and the administration's plans for recovery are becoming effective, it may be well to consider what the attitude of the country is to be toward this amazing adventure.

It is beyond dispute that powers of the greatest peril to democracy have been granted by Congress, as it is indisputable that when the Roosevelt administration assumed power it was confronted by one of the greatest problems in the history of the United States. The President has said that the country was dying by inches. What could be done to arrest a process of decay and demoralization which at the very outset of the presidential succession had closed every bank in the country?

The people are familiar with the desperate remedies prescribed for a situation that had not been matched in the Republic since the great depression which began in 1837 and lasted till 1845. In that depression the banks closed twice, once for a period of a year. It is not claimed, so far as we know, that the Roosevelt administration itself assumes to know how far its remedial acts may succeed. The President has been quite frank to the country in his refusal to predict success. He has contented himself with expressing the hope that the recovery program may succeed.

It must be realized that this has been a new experience for the United States. We have had something like 11 noteworthy depressions, but none of them caught the country at the top of its stride as did the great depression from which we are just emerging. We had accelerated the tempo of life during and after the World War to a pitch hitherto unknown in any nation. We had become both rich and reckless. We were seized upon by the delusion that prosperity could be made something both permanent and illimitable. Nothing was more typical of this psychosis than the suggestion of John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, that a great investment trust be organized by all the people, in order that they might live upon the dividends at a minimum of physical effort.

It was from this sublime height that we were plunged by the depression into the slough of despond. There were no precedents in history to indicate the way out. The enormous complication of modern life and the innumerable wheels within wheels fashioned by our mechanistic civilization propounded problems beyond our comprehension. It was as difficult to say what the causes of the depression were as it was to designate the cures. Great students of political economy threw up their hands. Montagu Norman, head of the Bank of England, said the problem was too great for him. Asked how long the depression would last, John Maynard Keynes begged for time. Devising his own list of causes, Prof. F. W. Taussig of Harvard confessed that perhaps no colleague agreed with him.

It was this stupendous riddle to which the Roosevelt administration essayed the difficult role of Oedipus. It has now been in control of the Government for approximately four months. It possibly has made some mistakes, but the country does applaud it for having had the great virtue of action. The administration moved when the country could no longer stand still. It followed the advice of Mr. Keynes by setting out at once to cheapen money upon the one hand and institute upon the other a vast system of public works. It also accepted the suggestion of the economists who insisted that industry would have to be planned. It is being planned. It took the farm experts at their word and put the experts themselves in charge of all agriculture with powers worthy of the Czar. It met the challenge of international experts by joining 65 other nations in conference at London. The people wanted beer, and they got it. They wanted economy, and they got it. They wanted Federal relief from debt and foreclosure, and they got it.

This is the New Deal which President Roosevelt said he would give the country. The country is beginning to pick up. To quote Longfellow, "She moves, she stirs, she seems to feel the thrill of life along her keel." President Green of the American Federation of Labor says that 1,200,000 idle people have been put back at work. The price of farm products has risen more than 25 per cent. Commodities are up, business is improving, stocks and bonds are higher than they have been for three years, and the volume of revenue flowing into the Federal Treasury rises with the volume of business. The business index has risen 20 points. In a word, the times are better. The country has taken new heart and new hope. It has been rallied from the doldrums. It is coming back.

What should our attitude be toward a government which is applauded the world over for having dared to move? Partisanship has largely disappeared. The administration program has enjoyed the support of both Democrats and Republicans. Some of the best thought of the session was supplied by the Republican Progressives. The press, regardless of party faith, has in the main stood stanchly by the administration. The people wanted action. Three million young people were coming into the workaday world in June by way of the schools and colleges. What were they to do? The farmer was broke, his farm default. The home owner was broke, his home default. There was a plague of receiverships in the land as devastating as any of the plagues of Egypt. The shadow of want fell darkly upon a nation which three years before had been in ecstasy. The people wanted a leader, and when they got one, they did not care what his party was.

Nevertheless, some of the Republican leaders would have the people believe that the administration is ruining the country. We are sorry to observe that this seems to have been adopted as a political tactic. The implication in most of these criticisms is that the country would have been better off had it let the depression cure itself than it possibly can be with so many emergency remedies, some of them of doubtful constitutionality, many of them without precedent. They assert that democracy in the United States, like democracy in Rome, is passing into the hands of dictators.

Is this really giving the New Deal a Square Deal? The people who have been running the United States controlled the Government throughout the post-war period. They had three successive Presidents. They controlled Congress. They were in command wherever power was exerted. They had their chance to do with the United States what they would, and when they went out of power, the plight of the country was such that it was unnecessary to debate it. They lost control of the Government by default.

The people who are running the Government now are for the most part the critics of the prior order. Do they understand political economy better than their predecessors? We do not know. We hope they do. If they were right in their objections to the politics of their predecessors, they have an opportunity to prove it. Meanwhile, it would be in our judgment the part of good sportsmanship for our Republican brethren to give the New Deal a Square Deal.

To paraphrase the President, the country is reviving by inches. Since the national economy is of immensely more importance to all of us than the fortunes of any political party, there is little popular patience with growling. If it was true, as the President said, that we cannot ballyhoo ourselves out of the depression, it must be equally true that we cannot growl ourselves back to it.

A Way to Curb Child Labor

Secretary Perkins has suggested that the industrial codes now being drafted under the recovery act be so drawn as to forbid child labor. It is an admirable proposal, which should be adopted to end one of our greatest industrial evils, the exploitation of children. Such a procedure would mean speedy action in relieving the condition of most exploited child workers, without waiting for action by the states, ratification of the child labor amendment or passage of a law by Congress. The continuance of child labor through the depression has meant, in addition to the harmful effect on the children themselves, the displacing of about 1,000,000 adults from jobs.

Discussing the best age limit, Miss Perkins said that 15 is the minimum age set by most state labor laws, but that 16 would be a more desirable limit. The 1930 census figures show 667,118 gainfully employed children between the ages of 10 and 15, a total that probably has increased meanwhile. Raising the limit to 16 years would embrace about 1,000,000 child workers. The National Child Labor Committee's code of minimum standards is suitable for adoption in industry, providing as it does for barring children under 16 from labor, except light work after school hours, and for regulation of the working conditions of others up to 18. It sets the maximum work week at 44 hours, which might be reduced under the present program, compels permits for employes up to 18, forbids night work and dangerous occupations.

A large part of child labor is employed in agricultural pursuits, largely under parental supervision, and this could not be reached under the industrial codes. However, exploitation is not so widely prevalent in this field, although bad conditions exist in some branches of industrialized agriculture, such as sugar beet growing, berry picking, tobacco raising, etc. The work of farm children who are hired out and of those who work with their parents under contract systems are the phases most in need of regulation. In this field, the Child Labor Committee's code provides for compulsory school attendance, a minimum age of 14 for children employed away from the home farm, a maximum eight-hour work day and prohibition of dangerous work. Further legislation probably would be necessary to reach these groups.

It would be one of the New Deal's major social reforms if it could bring about, under its recovery act, the abolition of this blot upon American industry. Such conditions as disclosed in the recent children's strike in Pennsylvania, where, for instance, one 14-year-old boy was found to be earning 87 cents a week in a shirt factory, are a disgrace to our society. Industry can help set its house in order by accepting Miss Perkins' suggestion.

Missouri Is Ready to Go on Road-Building

Missouri has been allotted $12,180,306 from the Federal Government for road construction under the public works provision of the National Industry Recovery Act. The money will be available July 1.

The Highway Department, according to Chief Engineer Cutler, is prepared to award approximately $4,000,000 in construction contracts early in July; plans are drawn for a further letting of $1,500,000 within a month; and plans for the remainder of the allotment will be ready in August.

The prime object of the recovery act is to put men to work as quickly as possible. Action, swift and effective, is the sine qua non. To that end, the administration of public works has been given almost unlimited powers as to what projects will be prosecuted, and how, in order to increase employment and purchasing power. It is the Government's hope and determination to show substantial results by fall.

Missouri's road construction program, as financed by the recovery act, will furnish employment for some 10,000 men for a period of six months. This estimate applies only to labor directly employed on the roads and in the Highway Department. Its beneficial effects will, obviously be felt in other lines: in material, drayage, freightage and along all the avenues visited by the revived consuming power of men employed.

While the first consideration is jobs and increased purchasing power, the rare opportunity to modernize their road systems will be furnished the states. Missouri's case is, presumably, typical. Many of our highways are too narrow—particularly those leading into the big centers of population. It was quite impossible in the early days of the highway movement to foresee the development of automobile traffic. That traffic has swept beyond the capacity of our road plant. It will continue to expand and flourish as prosperity returns. Wider roads are required not only by the cities but by the country, which has been brought into a continuous partnership with the cities. In connection with this work, however, we must not overlook the importance of building new hard-surface highways in rural regions now possessing only mud roads, nor the essential and life-saving measure of grade-crossing elimination. Our Highway Department is, of course, aware of conditions and knows what ought to be done.

Another important feature in the program may be mentioned, namely, the decision that contracts will not be let as cheaply as possible. The lowest bidder will, of course, win, but the bids will have to comply with the specified stipulations as to wages, hours, manual employment, etc. This is not only correct procedure from the viewpoint of sound public policy, but it is necessary procedure if the best results are to be produced. The Government insists that labor must be decently paid, which is a just attitude, to be sure, and good economics as well. No "sweat-shop" stipends will be tolerated.

Action is the watchword and Missouri is ready.

ANDREW JACKSON, THE BORDER CAPTAIN. By Marquis James. (Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

THERE is an old saying that may still be heard when the cultural status of some backwoods community is touched upon, to the effect that the people there are "still voting for Andrew Jackson." It is the echo of an old uproar, and more than half its meaning has been lost in the lapse of a century. As repeated now, it is merely a stereotyped comment on the crudity and ignorance of some isolated community; but the noise of which it is a far-flung echo was the first great clamor of an outraged seaboard aristocracy against the growing power of the West.

The first political triumph of the marching frontier spirit that has made America a great nation seemed to the conservative society along the Atlantic a triumph of ignorance, crudity, dangerous radicalism; and it was the fate of Andrew Jackson to be the very incarnation of that frontier spirit in his time. Even now, no doubt, most of those who think of Jackson casually are likely to think hazily of an ignorant, even an illiterate, man, who became President through some popular hysteria; one who was both crude and violent and whose domestic relations were somehow a bit shady. The historians have known better these many years, but the vague impression undoubtedly persists.

Those who may have shared that vague impression will find this second masterly biography by Marquis James a book of revelation; and even those who may be familiar with the facts of Jackson's life and character are likely to agree that never before has the man seemed to come alive as here.

The writing of biography must be both a science and an art—a science in the collection, valuation and classification of all available data; an art in realizing the vital human values that may emerge from a synthetic relationing of the data. The power of the master biographer is in the last analysis creative; as truly so as is that of the genuine poet or of the master realist in the realm of the novel; for each is dealing with the stuff of life which, so long as it is viewed as fact alone, is meaningless; the living truth and meaning are emergents not apprehensible by scientific means.

Marquis James is both the scientist and the artist. There is ample evidence in his acknowledgement of sources that his original researches have led him well beyond any previous biographer; for he has discovered much new material, including a collection of 1200 Jackson letters which have not yet been published.

And what a story he has told, with what convincing vividness in every detail! It is the tale of a living man for whom the reader must feel both admiration and affection in the final view; one whose very faults were a part of the groundwork of his virile virtues; a man who was all man, and who, far from being the ignorant roughneck of contemporaneous detraction, was very much the knightly gentleman at heart, with a mental equipment quite sufficient for a career that obviously revealed not little of the element of true greatness. This conclusion is to be reached by no process of sentimental whitewashing, but by a sympathetic consideration of the facts in keeping with the mood and background of his time and country.

But even more than the story of a man, this is the tale of the turbulent, questing frontier spirit of a nation during the first stage of its westward march across a continent, the complete story of which is one of the greatest sagas in all history. The story begins in 1767, and pauses at the end of the present volume in 1821, when the hero of the Creek War, the victor of New Orleans, the ex-Governor of Florida, regarding his career as ended, had retired to his estate, the Hermitage, wishing only for a peaceful old age.

Even so, the story seems completed with a fitting climax. But a second volume, dealing with the quarter of a century of increasing fame that still remained to Jackson, is promised; and certainly all who read the present volume will look forward eagerly to the appearance of the second.

SUMMER GOES ON. By Lawrence Lee. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York City.)

ALTHOUGH the author of this collection of verse is known to magazine readers and has issued privately printed volumes, this is his first regularly published book. Beyond question, he has a genuine lyrical gift, perhaps to be described as exquisite rather than powerful. When he shall have outlived the erotic period, it will be possible to judge his caliber as a poet. He is a teacher at the University of Virginia, and is connected with the famous Lee family.

LIFE'S PLACE IN THE COSMOS. By Hiram Percy Maxim. (D. Appleton & Co., New York City.)

THE inventor of the Maxim silencer, after describing in the current orthodox manner of science the origin of the earth and the evolutionary process, finds that the human race "has not progressed much in intellectual development for the past 20,000 years"; but he holds the better hope. Our present knowledge of life's place in the cosmos, he admits, is composed chiefly of "vacant spots," but if we continue to collect facts, we may yet make the grade and be able to answer "this greatest of all mysteries."

It seems hardly to have occurred to him that our difficulty in understanding might possibly be concerned with the difference between quantity and quality. If this should be true, no multiplication of the wrong thing would be likely to result in the right thing.

WHITEMAN'S BURDEN. By Margaret Livingston Whiteman and Isabel Leighton. (The Viking Press, New York City.)

"PAUL WHITEMAN, 300-pound King of Jazz, was on his knees (although how he found them is still a mystery) before a red-headed movie actress. 'Babe,' he began hopefully, 'when do you say we get married?' 'I'll marry you,' Margaret Livingston (that's me) promised, 'on the day that I am able to put my arms around you.'"

So begins the diverting tale of the wooing of Paul Whiteman, as told by his wife with the aid of an accomplished ghost writer. corrigible devotees of romance might that a mere hundred pounds of flesh little thing to thwart true love, but wh being married to a man commonly ref to as the "Covered Wagon"?

NEW POSTOFFICE PLAN AND DETAILS; WORK BEGINS SOON

BIDS TO BE ASKED FOR ABOUT AUG. 1

Space Allowed for Stone Terraces and Steps, Lawns and Shrubbery at 18th and Market Sts.

Plans and description of the new $4,275,000 Postoffice announced yesterday, disclose an imposing structure of classic design and simple lines, to fit the civic scheme for development of Market street as a downtown showplace.

On the south side of widened Market, between Twentieth and Eleventh streets, will be, in order, Union Station, the new Postoffice, at Eighteenth street; Municipal Auditorium, now going up; Municipal Courts Building, City Hall and the new Federal Building, under construction. On the north side will be Union Station Plaza, Memorial Plaza and a view across to Central Library and Civil Courts Building.

White stone walls are specified by the architects, Klipstein & Rathmann of St. Louis. The building will be three stories high, with ornamentation outside in carved stone, bronze, aluminum, marble and granite. The principal entrance will be on the Market street side, where the chief feature of the facade will be a colonnade of 20 columns.

Construction to Start This Year.

Construction is to be started this year. Federal officials intend to call for bids about Aug. 1. The public works bill, which became effective June 16, authorized the $4,275,000 expenditure for building and equipment and the Government announced the same day that this would be one of its first undertakings. The Government owns the large site.

The new structure will replace the present Postoffice, opened in 1912, which will be torn down to make room for part of the new building after enough of the new one is finished to permit transfer of activities. The site is bounded by Eighteenth, Market and Seventeenth streets and Clark avenue.

There will be space for stone terraces and steps, lawns and shrubbery to make the new building attractive, as it will stand 60 feet back of Market and shorter distances back of Eighteenth and Seventeenth. Due to the southward slope of the site, most of which has been cleared, the Clark side of the building will be somewhat lower than the northern portion.

Broad Streets All Around It.

The Postoffice will be surrounded by broad streets. Market is 100 feet wide and Clark 80 feet. Eighteenth is to be made 80 feet wide, between Chestnut street and Clark, and Seventeenth is to be made 80 feet wide, between Market and Clark. Seventeenth formerly was Moore street, a narrow lane a short distance east of the old Seventeenth. The city will abandon the old Seventeenth, between Market and Clark, and Walnut street, between Eighteenth and old Seventeenth. The present Postoffice occupies the block bounded by Walnut, Eighteenth, old Seventeenth and Clark.

While the site fronts 404 feet on Market and has a depth of 752 feet, the building will front 323 feet on Market and extend south 480 feet. There will be a walled yard on the Clark avenue side for Postoffice trucks. Ground-floor area of the structure will be 154,000 square feet and the cubic content 11,500,000 cubic feet, making this one of the largest buildings in the city. Height on the Market side will be 60 feet and on the Clark side 75 feet.

On the First Floor.

General postal activities, with the customary public windows, and sorting and handling of first-class mail, will occupy the first floor. There will be a public corridor 25 feet wide, with five doors to Market, one to Eighteenth and one to Seventeenth. Services to be available from the corridor will include wholesale and retail stamp sales, money order, postal savings, registered mail, customs, foreign section, mailing department, parcel post, general and special delivery and lock boxes.

Offices will be provided in the northern portion of the second floor for the Postmaster, his assistants, superintendent of mails, Postoffice inspectors, inquiry and claims section, medical unit and examination rooms. Workrooms for the Railway Postoffice will be arranged in the southern part of this floor.

On the third floor will be offices of the Railway Postoffice, the general money order department and the postal cashier. There will be an interior court about 200 feet square providing light and air for the two upper stories. Unassigned space will be available on those floors for future office expansion.

New Tunnel to Be Built.

Six passenger and eight freight elevators will be installed. A new tunnel to Union Station, under Eighteenth street, will be built. It will be 42 feet wide and 240 feet long. In it and the building there

Six passenger and eight freight elevators will be installed. A new tunnel to Union Station, under Eighteenth street, will be built. It will be 42 feet wide and 340 feet long. In it and the building there will be a conveyor system for handling mails. The tunnel will connect with the mail dispatching room in the sub-basement.

Other facilities in the sub-basement will include a room for handling furs—St. Louis is a world fur market—storage for mail sacks and Treasury Department equipment, and the mechanical equipment section. A mezzanine of the sub-basement will have mechanical supply shops, storage rooms, record rooms and a post card sub-agency.

Most of the basement proper will be devoted to handling parcel post. An indoor "street," 80 feet wide and 428 feet long, will be built along the west side of the basement, for use of postal trucks. It will have an entrance on Eighteenth street. Total length of loading platforms for trucks on this driveway and on the south side of the building will be 660 feet, accommodating 66 trucks at a time. Other units in the basement will be the dead letter section, auction room, print shop, postal cashier's stock room and mechanical supply department.

As well as serving as the Postoffice for St. Louis and the St. Louis County suburbs, this structure will be a center for railway mail for the Southwest and for distribution of postal supplies, machinery and equipment for the Southwest.

Flat Roof for Landing Field.

The flat roof will permit of future construction of a landing area for mail airplanes. Plans are being rushed to completion by the architects. Excavation and foundation contracts may be awarded before details of superstructure plans are finished.

Acquisition of the additional site needed was completed last year by condemnation. It cost $1,413,249. The present Postoffice cost about $1,142,000 to build and its site, purchased in 1903, cost $356,748. Talk of erecting additions started as early as 1919. There has been general agitation for this since 1923 on the part of Postoffice and civic interests, due to the growth of postal business here. The advent of parcel post made the old building unsuitable. Until a few months ago the plan for new construction was understood to be a comprehensive addition to the present building.

HISTORY OF STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO R. E. LUND

Message About Manufacturers' Association Head Was Wired by Correspondent of "Labor."

A Washington dispatch, published Wednesday, related that a reporter told Gen. Hugh S. Johnson that he "had a telegram from President Lund of the National Manufacturers' Association, in which he states that you told him you will not countenance unionization of labor in any place where it is not organized."

"Mr. Lund is mistaken," replied the administrator of the industrial control act, who was holding his first press conference.

Robert E. Lund of St. Louis, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, immediately notified the Post-Dispatch that he had not sent such a telegram to anyone. Inquiry at Washington disclosed the telegram mentioned to Gen. Johnson was sent to "Labor," a Washington railroad publication, by a St. Louis correspondent who wired that Lund had issued such a statement in St. Louis.

Lund said he did not know the correspondent and had held no conversation with him. Addressing the Industrial Recovery Conference Committee of the Associated Industries of Missouri June 16 at Hotel Statler, Lund said: "The efforts of labor organizers to extend their organizations will receive no encouragement from the administrator."

Closing Time for Foreign Mail.

Closing time for parcel post to Germany and Great Britain and full European mails will be 9 p. m. tomorrow at the main postoffice, Eighteenth and Walnut streets.

Keynes Comes Out for Economic Nationalism

sufficiency is great enough to outweigh the other advantages of gradually bringing the product and the consumer within the ambit of the same national, economic, and financial organization.

"Experience accumulates to prove that most modern processes of mass production can be performed in most countries and climates with almost equal efficiency.

"Moreover, with greater wealth, both primary and manufactured products play a smaller relative part in the national economy compared with houses, personal services, and local amenities, which are not equally available for international exchange; with the result that a moderate increase in the real cost of primary and manufactured products consequent on greater national self-sufficiency may cease to be of serious consequence when weighed in the balance against advantages of a different kind. National self-sufficiency, in short, though it costs something, may be becoming a luxury which we can afford, if we happen to want it."

For all these reasons, he parts company with his friends of the old internationalist school. He undertakes to give the reasons for his change "in terms with which they may sympathize." One reason is the proved failure of "the decadent international but individualistic capitalism, in the hands of which we found ourselves after the war."

This capitalism "is not intelligent, it is not beautiful, it is not just, it is not virtuous—and it doesn't deliver the goods. In short, we dislike it, and we are beginning to despise it."

Hence the various countries of the world are abandoning the old presumptions and embarking on experiments. Russia is no longer alone in this respect. Italy, Ireland, Germany are turning toward "new economic gods." Even Great Britain and the United States "are striving, under the surface, after a new economic plan."

The point of the argument is this: "We each have our own fancy. Not believing that we are saved already, we each should like to have a try at working out our own salvation. We do not wish, therefore, to be at the mercy of world forces working out, or trying to work out, some uniform equilibrium according to the ideal principles, if they can be called such, of laissez faire capitalism.

"There are still those who cling to the old ideas, but in no country of the world today can they be reckoned as a serious force. We wish—for the time at least and so long as the present transitional, experimental phase endures—to be our own masters, and to be as free as we can make ourselves from the interferences of the outside world."

New World in the Making.

He does not wish to be understood as indorsing all that is being done throughout the world in the name of economic nationalism.

"But," he adds, "I bring my criticisms to bear, as one whose heart is friendly and sympathetic to the desperate experiments of the contemporary world, who wishes them well and would like them to succeed; who has his own experiments in view, and who in the last resort prefers anything on earth to what the financial reports are wont to call "the best opinion in Wall street." And I seek to point out that the world towards which we are uneasily moving is quite different from the ideal economic internationalism of our fathers, and that contemporary policies must not be judged on the maxims of that former faith."

He warns against three dangers in the various movements toward national self-sufficiency. The first is "the silliness of the doctrinaire." "An experimental society," he explains, "can afford to give nothing away to soft-headedness or doctrinaire impracticability." If it is to survive safely, it must be more efficient than the old order. The second danger is haste. "The economic transition of a society is a thing to be accomplished slowly. We have a fearful example in Russia today of the evils of insane and unnecessary haste."

Free Criticism Essential.

The third and worst risk is "intolerance and the stifling of instructed criticism." In the process of setting up a new economic order, "bold, free and remorseless criticism" is essential. Russia, he says, has made the mistake of crushing independent thought.

"Let Stalin," he concludes, "be a terrifying example to all who seek to make experiments. If not, I at any rate, will soon be back again in my old nineteenth-century ideals, where the play of mind on mind created for us the inheritance which we today, enriched by what our fathers procured for us, are seeking to divert to our own appropriate purposes."

Scandinavian Countries Take Middle Course

port of the commission because the heads of the party were not really in sympathy with socialization. But the Social-Democrats deny this. They take the attitude that so long as socialization could go forward quietly, without provoking violent controversy, they preferred not to raise the issue, which publication of the report might have done.

Modest Prime Minister.

The attitude of the Prime Minister, Hanson, is typical of the Socialist attitude and, one may add as an opinion, of the attitude of the mass of the people. Per Albin, as most of his associates speak of him, is a solid, simple appearing man with a square face and an habitually grave expression. He is of a modest background, self-educated, an editorial writer on the Social Democratic paper in Gothenberg earning about $2000 a year before he took his present office. When he took office, and until a month ago, he lived in a two-room flat. Now he has moved to a five-room cottage in a working-class suburb of Stockholm. He sits in his office, furnished in the clean, dignified style of modern Sweden, and talks with an occasional gleam of humor illuminating his face.

"We have been occupied with specific problems, both in and out of office. We have scarcely developed an ideology. As you know, perhaps, our professed aim, the motto of our party, is a simple one. It is 'Comfort in the home for all classes.' It has been true, and it is still true, that the wage standard in Sweden has been higher than in any other country in Europe, and likewise the living standard has been higher. I should even venture the opinion that our living standard, the average living standard, is now higher than in the United States. Our standard of wages has been very little affected by the depression.

"But we are faced with a serious problem of unemployment and we have even less time than before for theory. We propose to solve that problem by a plan which is relatively more drastic than any government has yet undertaken. This is a year's program.

"In Our Own Way."

"If the situation is not improved at the end of a year, then we shall have to consider more radical steps. It is obvious that if capitalism fails now completely, we shall have to take over industry at one stroke. It will not be to our advantage to take over industry in a failing condition. We have had during the present crisis to take over industries, railway lines and banking interests that have been failing. And we have regretted that this has been necessary. It would be far more desirable to advance by slow steps to the all but complete abrogation of the function of the capitalist. We can't control here in Sweden the direction of the world, and so we must be prepared for what may come. But we hope that we can develop, as we have in the past, our own way, at our own pace."

The cost of the unemployment program referred to by the Prime Minister, to be discussed in the fourth article of this series, will necessitate doubling the present inheritance tax. The highest rate at present, applied to the largest fortunes where there is no direct heir, is 20 per cent. Under the proposed plan this would be 42 per cent. And this should be contrasted with the high in England, which is about 50 per cent.

The Social-Democratic unemployment program has drawn unusual opposition from the capitalists in Sweden, and with good reason. For it is the first serious threat against the large fortunes that are engaged in finance and heavy industry for export. The process of socialization has left these fields almost untouched until the present; it has been concerned almost entirely with the domestic life of the people.

Powerwful Capitalists.

Sweden has a small but very powerful group of capitalists who dominate the two fields, finance and heavy industry. Sweden had Ivar Kreuger, too, but Kreuger, it is recognized, for all that he went beyond the bounds of the law, was a type of international financier whose mode of operation was characteristic of the boom period. The Kreuger crash caused less dislocation in Sweden than it did in America and elsewhere.

One family in Sweden is powerful above all others. It is said that the Wallenberg family controls 70 per cent of heavy industry, shipping and export. The Wallenberg Bank, Stockholm's Enskilda Bank, has an important part in international finance. Not long after the Social-Democratic Government announced its drastic unemployment program, Markus Wallenberg, younger brother of the present head of the family, Knute, the second generation to possess great wealth and power, issued a public protest. This action on the part of a private banker was so unusual that Wallenberg's statement was printed in virtually every newspaper in Sweden. There are many who believe that the next two years will see a dramatic struggle between the Social-Democrats and the Wallenberg family. The outcome may well determine whether the socialization of Sweden is to continue or whether it is to be confined to those functions that directly touch the life of the citizen, leaving for the capitalist entrepreneur the profit from international trade in money and goods.

Got Forests in 1752.

But it is the development up to the present that is of interest here. State ownership is deeply rooted in the Swedish past. It was in 1752, when for the convenience of small landholders a general survey and re-allotment of the land was begun, that the State acquired the bulk of the 10,793,900 acres of forest that it now owns. (The total land area of Sweden is 102,000,000 acres.) In addition the state administers 741,000 acres belonging to the state church, and 1,976,000 acres belong to the municipalities. Of the balance of the forest area—and more than half of Sweden is covered by forest—farmers' forests constitute the greater part. Private companies, engaged in lumbering and the wood pulp industry own 15,511,600 acres. Legislation forbids these private companies to increase their holdings through purchase from other classes of owners.

In contrast the state is constantly increasing its holdings, particularly in the south, where the most profitable forest areas are located. The primary aim has been to secure tracts large enough to form independent units for forestry. Small wooded estates have been acquired only when they have adjoined other state forest lands. These purchases have been made for the most part with funds from the sale of small farms that have belonged to the state. Much of the state's forest area is in the North, situated in the interior and in the higher mountain areas where it is of slight value at present.

Profits in Lumber.

In the lumber business the state competes on equal terms with private companies. On the amount of its gross income the state pays local taxes to the various provinces in which the forests are situated, as well as the general tax to the central government. Together, these amount to about 10 per cent of the gross income. In 1926 the state forests yielded a profit of $3,024,000 and in 1928 a profit of $4,320,000...

The Board of Crown Lands and Forests in Stockholm administers the state forests so as to secure a continuous yield of timber. District foresters, trained in special forestry schools, are directly in charge of the work in each of 606 districts. The forester follows a working schedule laid down by the board, but this schedule allows considerable latitude for his own judgment. The board fixes the total amount of timber to be cut in each district.

As the state administers its own forests to secure a continuous yield of timber, so by law it requires the large capitalist owners to reforest, limits the amount they may cut, and carefully supervises the use of this vital natural resource. There are early precedents, the first forest law dating from 1600. The private owner has the strongest incentive to safeguard his property, one section of the law requiring the owner to reforest if the original timber is destroyed by fire, pests, storms or other accidents. There are special laws regarding "protective forests" at the timber line in the mountainous areas at the north and special laws protecting forests along the seacoast, which are difficult to regenerate. The motive throughout, in the administration of state-owned lands and in the regulation of those privately owned, is to prevent a gradual decrease in the yield of timber which might cause serious difficulties in the economic life of the country.

Although the state is in the timber business in competition with private companies, it has not entered into direct competition with private mining corporations, despite the fact that it owns the mining rights to the largest iron ore deposits in the country. The state has chosen to set up instead a curious economic structure that, over a period of years, worked very well. This will be found typical throughout: When it is advisable or necessary, the Government does not hesitate to enter into business undertakings; but when, for one reason or another, it is thought unwise to put the state into business, there has been worked out a scheme whereby private nitiative functions on a basis of limited reward to serve the state. This working combination of elements, borrowed from various economic systems, is one of Sweden's contributions. It is the system used, with some variations, in the several state monopolies to be discussed in the second article of this series.

The reason Sweden did not enter mining operation was explained to this writer as follows: The administration of the state forest areas is carried out by relatively few employes, trained men on a civil service basis. In contrast, operation of the great iron mines owned by the state in northern Sweden requires a large number of employes, a majority on the basis of common labor, many of them technical experts commanding high salaries. The argument was that if the state undertook this process, these employes would all be on civil service; there would be a greater possibility for bureaucratic corruption and laxity, with resulting inefficiency in operation.

Therefore the state delegated the operation of its mines to a private company. When the arrangement was worked out with the Grangesberg-Oxelosund Co., the state kept 50 per cent of the shares. The company took a long-term lease, specifying an annual royalty, on the state's mines at Kirunavaara and Gellivara, in the extreme north of Sweden. Up until the time when the exports of iron ore shrank to nothing, toward the end of 1930, this arrangement worked out very well.

Three Sources of Profit.

The state derived profit from three sources. First came the annual percentage royalty from the contract with the company. Next came the profit from the shares in the company which the state owned—that is 50 per cent of the total profits of the company. And lastly the state earned a profit by hauling the ore over the state railway line from the mines to the two ports, Lulea and Narvik, the latter in Norway. This last source of profit was so great, despite the very advantageous rate which the state gave the company, that the state was able to electrify the railway line between the two ports. It is farther north than any other electrified line in the world, a fact of which the Swedes are proud—they are proud that this was an achievement of the state.

Provinces and towns both levied high taxes against the Grangesberg-Oxelosund company. By means of these taxes model mining towns have been created. There, far to the north where in the middle of winter the sun scarcely rises at all, where there is at most an hour or two of daylight, one finds excellent public libraries, public baths and gymnasiums and public lecture and concert halls. The homes are all electrified, many of them heated by electricity and equipped with the latest labor-saving devices.

At present the most severe unemployment is in this region. It is the major problem of the Government. Last year there occurred in the mining area the only violent labor strife in Sweden's history. Although it had put its own economic house in order, Sweden, like every other country in the world, has suffered severely from the almost complete disruption of world trade. But because the internal economy of the country was in many phases unified and controlled, the nation was able to meet the emergency with greater ease, a larger measure of resiliency, than in those countries in which capitalism had run wild. That will be apparent in the discussion of state monopolies and state ownership of power, communications and other vital services in the article that follows.

COTTON AT HIGHEST LEVEL OF THE BULL MOVEMENT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Cotton at week-end rose to the highest levels of the bull movement. October contracts climbed to 9.75 or 9 points net higher and 65 points above the low price reached on the recent reactions. Closing quotations were firm and within a point or two of the best at net gains of 9 to 10 points. Spot quiet, mids, 9.60.

Small early gains reflected steady Liverpool cables, continuance of dry hot weather over the greater part of the South and firmness in the grain and stock markets. This advance attracted realizing but it was absorbed on reactions of a few points and the market firmed again, reaching the best prices of the day in the late trading when buying was stimulated by the strength of grain. July sold up to 9.47 and December to 9.90, while March sold up to 10.14, or 5 to 10 points above the previous high prices touched at the end of May.

Houses with Liverpool and Japanese connections were early buyers while in addition to trade and commission house purchases there was considerable covering or rebuying by recent sellers. The South was credited with selling a little cotton at the advance, but offerings from that source were not large, and except for realizing there appeared to be comparatively little pressure against the market. Liverpool reported buying there on the unfavorable weather reports from the South.

ZINC AND LEAD ORE PRODUCTION INCREASED

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., June 24.—Production of zinc and lead ore in the Joplin district continued to mount this week. With prospects of a sharp increase in mining activities after the July 4 holiday. With several units opened within the last few days, 12 mills, having a potential production of 1000 tons of zinc ore a week, are being prepared for opening within the next two weeks.

Ore prices were unchanged this week, but the market remained firm. Zinc brought $30 a ton, while lead brought $47.50 for small lots, $50 for carload shipments, and large tonnages commanded as high as $52.50 a ton.

The zinc purchase was reported at 2920 tons, with smelters going without all needed supplies. The combined value of zinc and lead shipments this week was $261,140, the largest since January, 1931.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Steel mill operations this week reached an estimated 50 per cent of capacity operating rate for the first time in more than two years as buyers increased specifications for second quarter releases prior to anticipated price advances in the third quarter. Mills generally were refusing to accept specifications beyond July 1 except with clauses protecting them against higher prices through provisions of the industrial recovery act. Structural awards increased and the outlook was said to favor even heavier releases through public works programs. Pig iron prices were steady on a moderate demand.

Although tin prices were highly irregular, reflecting rapid fluctuations in sterling exchange, quotations earlier in the week went to new highs for the year and an active business was put through. Demand was stimulated by increased operations of tin plate mills, which are now working at full capacity. Recent active buying and deliveries are reported to have improved the world statistical position, and are expected to be reflected in decreased visible supplies at the end of June, according to trade reports.

Copper held steady at the 8-cent level for electrolytic in the Connecticut Valley with business moderately active. Increased demand for finished products combined with the possibility for higher prices through the recovery act has attracted buying by fabricators. There was also a disposition noted to anticipate forward needs.

Lead ruled relatively quiet and unchanged during the greater part of the week, inasmuch as consumers had placed orders for July deliveries, but when smelters opened books to receive August orders buying by many consuming branches was resumed. May statistics revealed little change in the net position, as increased shipments had been offset by larger production by secondary smelters.

Zinc was steadier after recent offerings at concessions were absorbed and consumers found limited quantities available at the advances. Reports of increased schedules by branches of the steel industry using zinc as well as the possibility of higher ore quotations because of decreasing stocks, caused sellers to hold firm.

Antimony was quiet with quotations nominal in absence of any more than moderate filling-in business.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Financial markets did a lot of jockeying this week, but, due largely to the buoyancy of grains, finished well up in front of the procession.

While the Associated Press-Standard Statistics average for 90 selected stocks was still around two points under its peak of the year, it showed a net gain of five points at 84.1. At the end of the week, however, the share market displayed indications of being a trifle weary and the trading volume dwindled noticeably.

Although currency stabilization uncertainties tended to engender an attitude of caution on the part of the more aggressive speculative share traders, wheat, corn, cotton and rye were spurred to new high prices of 1932 or longer by a combination of bullish circumstances. Wheat and rye were the star performers, the former with a gain for the week of 8½c to 9¾c a bushel and the latter with an advance of 8⅝c to 11c a bushel. Corn stepped up 4½c to 6½c a bushel and cotton moved forward $2.50 to $2.75 a bale. Bar silver, however, eased ⅛ of a cent an ounce.

In the case of the grains, reports of heavy crop damage brought a rush of buyers and an extensive covering of short commitments. In addition, further ammunition for the advance was provided by news from London indicating that representatives of the world's leading agricultural nations showed signs of reaching an agreement on restriction of acreage. At the same time, the Washington administration apparently was standing firm in its announced intention of raising commodity prices.

Less Attention to Dollar Drop.

For the first time since the upswing in stocks, the inflationary implications of a dropping dollar in foreign exchange markets failed to furnish the customary motive power necessary for shares to break through top resistance levels. The result was that proponents of the advance were forced to pay more attention to the improvement in business and industry and other optimistic domestic factors.

Sharp recessions following rumors of a currency stabilization agreement at the London economic conference were quickly recovered, but the official announcement of the American delegation that the United States would not approve pegging of the dollar at this time did not bring the booming rallies that it might have caused in previous weeks. There seemingly was still some opinion that America, Great Britain and France might get together for a little quiet stabilizing at agreed rates without public fanfare.

Freight carloadings for the week ended June 17 made the best showing of the year and exceeded the similar 1932 week. Steel production was around 50 per cent of capacity, electric power output was at its year's peak and retail trade picked up encouragingly. The American Federation of Labor also reported that some 1,600,000 of the jobless had been returned to work since March.

Grains Feature Week-end.

Grains provided the chief action in week-end markets. Stocks dragged listlessly until the late dealings when another mild buying flurry appeared, but the close was somewhat spotty notwithstanding a small net gain for the 90-share average.

Wheat, corn, oats and rye surged to new tops for the season and cotton also edged into new high ground, although only small gains were needed to achieve the latter record. Bonds were fairly firm.

Steel stocks hardened during the late upturn. Bethlehem was especially agressive, up more than 2 points net; United States and National Steels each added a point. Railway equipments were stronger than the carriers themselves, Lima and American Locomotives, Pullman and Baldwin firming a point or better. Textile company representatives also did well; Munsingwear, Pacific Mills, Celanese and American Woolen were leaders. Kress jumped 4 points and Crown Cork 3. Du Pont, Dome and U. S. Smelting improved a point, but National Biscuit, Sears Roebuck, Allied Chemical, American Telephone, International Telephone and American Tobacco "B" were losers to the extent of fractions to more than a point. General Motors finished strongly, up a major fraction.

Sales totaled 1,696,390 shares, one of the smallest Saturday volumes in weeks.

Grains continued to benefit by reports of crop damage and failure.

Freight Loadings Up.

Freight loadings for the week ended June 17 reached a new 1933 peak, being 23,385 cars above the previous week and 69,533 over a year ago. The percentage increase as compared with 1932 was 13.4 and total volume, 587,931 cars, was about 65 per cent of the average for the past fifteen years. June earnings, it would appear, should be considerably better than May's. Gross for last month, as reported to date, ran about even with a year ago, although net operating income, due to reduced costs, gives indications of being nearly double May, 1932.

Fluctuations of the dollar were relatively narrow, though French francs firmed somewhat. Saturday dealings are normally light and today was no exception to that rule.

Estimates of probable steel mill activity next week mentioned another expansion in operating ratios. Uncertainty as to third quarter prices is a strong stimulant to the prolonged spurt. Apparently there is to be no decision on those quotations until the industry's "code" under the Recovery Act is formulated and a decision reached on the wage rise question.

Day's 10 Most Active Stocks.

DOLLAR FAIRLY STEADY IN THE EXCHANGE MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The American dollar held fairly steady in foreign exchange markets today despite currency stabilization uncertainties both here and abroad.

The British pound sterling advanced moderately at one time, but finished unchanged at $4.22¼ for cables. French francs were up only .01 of a cent at 4.89 cents and Belgian belgas and Swiss francs firmed 1-20 of a cent each. Dutch guilders, German marks and the Scandinavians held to their previous rates. Canadian dollars eased one-eighth of a cent to 90¼ cents.

European currencies again scored heavily at the expense of the dollar in the week's dealings in foreign exchange. Pressure on the dollar was intensified by repeated intimations of those who were assumed to have authority to speak for the Government that no indorsement would be given by the administration at the present time to any movement for dollar stabilization under international agreement.

British sterling and the gold currencies soared to new high levels, the former to a post-gold standard top and most of the others to the widest premiums over dollars in many years. French exchange was unsettled momentarily by rumors, which brought forth quick official denial that the country might depart from the gold standard.

The swift advance in sterling had some influence on the Far Eastern currencies which were generally firm. The Canadian dollar also gained moderately and South American exchanges showed increased activity on a rising scale of rates.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

LONDON, June 24.—A generally good tone prevailed on the stock exchange today. Trans-Atlantic issues were strong on overnight Wall street news and gilt-edged securities were steady. Oil shares were firm while kaffirs recovered partially from an early decline. The closing tone was steady.

PARIS, June 24.—Exchange closed.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, June 24.—Wheat futures advanced more than 3c on the local and Chicago boards at week end session in the wake of unofficial reports that heat and drouth had damaged grain crops in west and northwest, even more severely than had been estimated previously. Winnipeg wheat closed 1½@1⅝ net higher.

Liverpool wheat closed ⅝d to ⅞ higher.

July wheat opened at 81, up 1; September, 82⅜, up ⅜, and December 86, up ½.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Increasing by leaps and bounds, speculation for higher prices, whirled all grains wildly upward at week end, outdoing top records unequaled since 1930.

Wheat sped skyward 3⅛ cents, and crossed to well above 90 cents a bushel for May contracts, which beginning on Monday will be added formally to the list of quoted active deliveries. Buying of wheat and other grains was on the largest scale witnessed in years, a result mainly of unofficially reported widespread crop damage and further severe losses expected because of extraordinary drouth and heat.

Indications were reported that United States cereal yields this season would prove the smallest in a generation. Nebraska official advices suggested that small grains throughout that state were beyond redemption. Immense general buying started almost as soon as trading opened, with wheat, corn, oats and rye all at new peak quotations for the season. Leading authorities said overnight scattered rains were totally inadequate, and that effects of abnormal drouth and heat were practically unrelieved. Maximum temperatures of 111 Southwest added to anxiety.

Waves of profit-taking sales failed to check the onward sweep of prices until just before trading ended for the day. At that state, an extreme setback of a cent a bushel from the top level took place, but the market as a whole continued strong. Houses with eastern connections were especially aggressive on the purchase side, although each new bulge in prices swept the market to a fresh high point. Announcement that harvesting of new wheat had extended northward into Illinois was altogether without effect as a bearish influence.

No general breaking of the drouth and heat was indicated by the official forecast of next week's conditions.

Corn and oats chiefly borrowed strength from wheat.

Provisions finally responded to grain price upturns despite weakness of hog values.

Oats sold at 40 cents for the first time in several years when the December delivery climbed to 40⅛.

Rye was as bullish as any of the other grains and at times climbed even faster than wheat with all deliveries well above 70 cents. Rye was the first grain to sell at more than twice the quotations current at this time last year. The December reached 78⅜ cents.

CASH WHEAT 93 1-2C A BUSHEL IN SOUTHWEST MARKET

By the Associated Press.

Wheat graded No. 1 dark, with 11.6 protein content, brought 91¾ cents on the Hutchinson, Kan., Board of Trade.

From the lows around the first of the year there has been a recovery of [illegible] cents a bushel.

Sharp Rye Rise at Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, June 24.—Coarse grain futures soared upward with wheat prices in today's short but hectic session of the Winnipeg grain market, with rye featuring the action in that pit and flax a close second.

Boosted by buying of an undetermined nature from seaboard interests, rye climbed to the highest price levels since September, 1930, closing at the session's highest point, 5⅝@9c above Friday's finish. July at 63⅛, October 65 and December at 68⅛.

Flax, always a wide mover, advanced 5⅝@7c, mostly in sympathy with the gains in other grains.

NEW YORK RUBBER MARKET

NEW YORK, June 24.—Crude rubber futures opened irregular; July, 5.91c bid; Sept., 6.25@6.26c; Dec., 6.59@6.60c; Jan., 6.69c.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Crude rubber futures closed quiet. July, 6c nominal; Sept., 6.28c nominal; Dec., 6.55@6.57c; Jan., 6.64c nominal. Smoked ribbed spot closed 6c nominal.

Dry Goods Market.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Wool goods mills are finding it necessary to decline business through inability to guarantee deliveries. Cotton goods were firm today with the demand for spots and July deliveries active. Silks sold more freely. Burlaps were firm on a high basis. Rayon prices tend upward. Production at the end of June in many divisions is exceedingly high for this period.

MODERATE GAINS MARK MOST OF BOND LIST

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The bond market jogged along at a steady pace today, and, despite some minor profit-taking interruptions, finished with moderate gains in most departments.

Sales totaled $6,712,000, par value, which was about a normal Saturday's business. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues, after holding unchanged in the previous two sessions, advanced two-tenths of a point to 77.9. This average was up 1.2 on the week.

Railway loans generally drew a cheerful following in response to the freight car loadings report for the week ended June 17, which showed the best gains for any week this year and a substantial increase over the similar period last year.

Carrier gainers of fractions to a point or more included some issues of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago & Northwestern, Cincinnati Union Terminal, Erie, Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville, New York Central, Nickel Plate, St. Louis Southwestern, Southern Pacific, Southern and Union Pacific.

While the utilities were inclined to mark time, a number of the industrials improved. Among the latter were bonds of Warren Bros., United Drug, Sinclair Oil, Shell Pipe Line, McCrory Stores, Midvale Steel and Botany Mills and Armour & Co.

United States Government securities were dull but firm. Foreign obligations were also quiet and irregular. Some of the Germans and French rallied moderately, but loans of Japan, Italy, Colombia and Dutch East Indies lost a point or more.

NARROW CHANGES ON CURB AT WEEK END

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Price changes in curb stocks were relatively narrow today except in a few inactive issues. Moderate reactionary tendencies were apparent shortly after the opening, but the closing trend was upward with only a few scattered losses.

Deere & Co., unaffected by the sharp advance in wheat prices, closed unchanged. Aluminum Co. of America and Swift & Co. dipped slightly, while Electric Bond & Share was a soft spot among utilities.

A point loss in Humble Oil was offset by a similar advance in Standard Oil of Ohio. Other oil shares were fractionally improved.

Mining issues shares closed steady to slightly highetr.

Transfers totaled 296,000 shares, compared with 247,000 last Saturday.

Fine Roads Prove Greatest Motoring Hazard, Expert Finds

Good Brakes, Careful Driving Needed More on Them Than Anywhere Else.

"One of the greatest dangers for a motorist is the broad straight, smooth highway," said W. T. Palmer, traffic expert, addressing a "brake clinic" of automobile fleet operators and service station owners.

"Nearly all drivers are careful on bad roads," said Palmer, who is an official of the company making Rusco brake linings. "But when the average motorist gets out on a fine, wide, smooth highway, he relaxes his caution and increases his speed. The newspapers and the insurance statistics tell the rest of the story.

"The height of carefulness, both in mental attitude and in car condition, is required on the wonderful roads we have throughout the country.

"Almost twice as many persons are killed on fine state highways as at intersections, curves, railroad crossings or any other of the so-called danger spots—all needlessly and all because of careless driving or car neglect.

"In almost 100 per cent of automobile accidents, the predominating cause is the failure of drivers to exercise a proper sense of responsibility by assuring the safe condition of their vehicles or by operating them properly in our increasingly fast highway traffic.

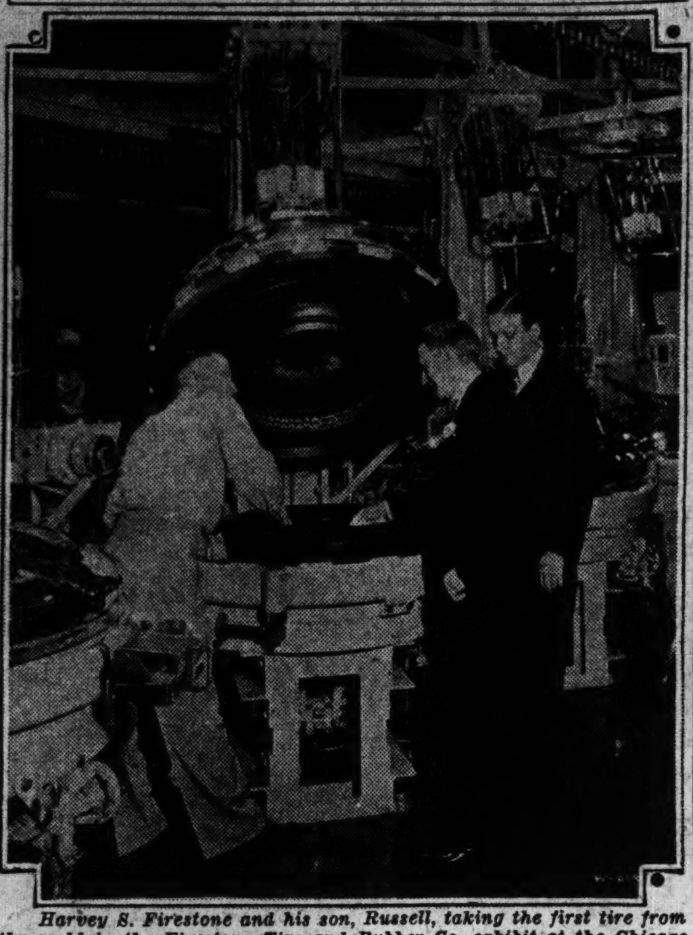
"As the speed of our traffic has gone up, the mechanical condition of millions of our cars has gone steadily down for the past three years. According to the American Automobile Association, there are 8,000,000 cars now operating on our roads with brakes, steering gears, tires and lights in a serious and dangerous condition of wear or disrepair.

"Thousands of valuable lives, thousands of automobiles, millions of dollars and innumerable hours of grief and suffering, would be saved in this country annually if every motorist would adopt this simple, inexpensive rule: Never go on a paved highway with a car with worn or out-of-adjustment brakes, steering gear, tires or lights and, once there, let caution be doubled instead of relaxed."

Road Mileage in United States.

There are slightly more than 3,000,000 miles of rural roads in the United States, with 330,000 miles in State highway systems and the rest local, county or township roads. Nearly 75 per cent of State highway mileage is surfaced, 33 per cent of it high type. Only 21 per cent of the local road mileage is surfaced and not more than 5 per cent is high type.

Making Tires at Chicago Fair



Harvey S. Firestone and his son, Russell, taking the first tire from the mold in the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair. Visitors to the Firestone exhibit see tires made before their eyes—from the 50-ton mixing machine which prepares the rubber through the "gum dipping" process to the vulcanizing and finishing of the tire.

Packard Exhibit Instrument Weighs Visitors' Signatures

Visitors at the Packard exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair are having the novel experience of learning the exact weight of their signatures.

A delicate balance, identical with several used daily in the laboratories of the Packard Motor Car Co.'s factories, is used to determine the weight of the signature of each visitor. A card is weighed. Then, after the signature has been written on it, the card is weighed again. The difference shown on the balance is the actual weight of the ink used in writing the signature.

The scale which, in its exactness, is typical of hundreds of fine precision instruments used in the making of Packard cars, weighs in millionths of a pound. It even weighs the dot of a pencil on a piece of paper.

Ford Opens Exhibit In a Chicago Hotel For Duration of Fair

The Ford Motor Co. has opened a display in the Congress Hotel, on Michigan boulevard, Chicago, which will continue for the duration of the Century of Progress Exposition. Visitors in Chicago are invited to see this display.

Those who desire to see how Ford cars are built are invited by the company to visit the Chicago assembly plant at 12,600 Torrence avenue. Company busses and cars operate between the plant and the display in the Congress Hotel, providing free transportation for all who wish to visit the plant.

Cards of introduction to officials in charge of the Ford display in the Congress Hotel will be supplied by any St. Louis Metropolitan Ford dealer to car owners planning to visit Chicago during the summer.

Cadillac Salesman Wins State Amateur Golf Championship

Chester F. O'Brien, a member of the new car sales force of the Oliver Cadillac Co., Cadillac and LaSalle distributers at 4100 Laclede avenue, is the possessor of the large silver trophy which is emblematic of the State amateur golf championship. This he won on the Westborough Country Club course during the week of June 13-18. In addition to the trophy of which he retains permanent possession, he won the large annual cup donated by the golf association. This cup, which he will hold for a year, must be won three times in succession to become the property of the winner.

O'Brien, who is 25 years old, has been a consistent performer in local amateur golf circles for 10 years. When in his 'teens he won the Municipal City Golf tournament. In 1928 he was runner up for the State title. He will compete in the national amateur championships in July in Cincinnati.

Automotive Service Men Hear Talk on Proper Piston Rings

Thursday evening, the Fleer Petty Auto Supply Co., Koochook Co., Kirn Auto Supply Co. and the H & H Machine & Motor Parts Co., sponsored an engineering meeting for the benefit of automotive service men at the German House, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues.

The principal speaker was Harry Potter, service engineer of the Sealed Power Corporation, Muskegon, Mich. Potter started in the automobile business in 1904, worked in all branches of the business, and for 10 years has been working with the car manufacturers in an engineering capacity on problems of increasing gas and oil mileage through the use of proper piston rings.

Potter's talk was based on manufacturing methods to build piston rings for the modern engine and causes and remedies of engine troubles.

The meeting was attended by 350 service men.

ALL EYES ON DODGE

Everybody is Talking Pontiac!

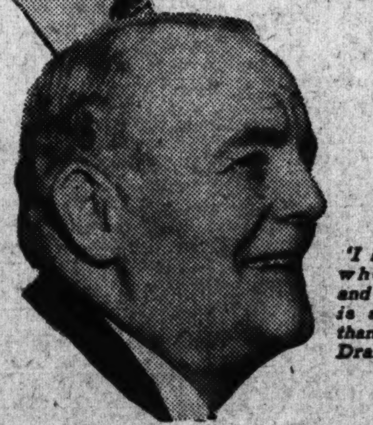
"Pontiac's appearance makes me feel proud of it—it is so smart and trim—very modern."

"Pontiac makes a hit with me because of its Straight Eight performance. I get away first every time."

"I like it because its weight and strength make me feel safe and it is so comfortable and easy-riding."

"I'm strong for Pontiac because it is so economical—easy to buy and easy to own."

"I like my new Pontiac because I use it in business every day, and I need a car that's got durability enough to 'take it.'"



"I like my comfort when on a trip—and our new Pontiac is so comfortable, thanks to Fisher No Draft Ventilation."

"BALANCED VALUE"

15 miles or more to the gallon is what owners say the Pontiac Straight Eight gives them. And Pontiac continues to do so, even after thousands of miles of use.

Such operating efficiency can come from only one thing—and that is Balanced Design, which means that each part is scientifically balanced and related to all the others—so that all strains are equalized for uniform life and durability. This in turn means Balanced Value.

For example, Pontiac's pistons are electroplated to insure tight fit and long wear, and they are balanced to an eighth of an ounce. Connecting rods, crankshaft and pistons are tunneled for positive, metered oil supply to insure long life. The crankshaft is doubly-balanced; main and crankpin bearings overlap; which, with Pontiac's exclusive harmonic balancer, eliminate vibration.

Owners really begin to appreciate this, after, say 25,000 miles, when they realize how fine their Pontiac is still running and how little it has cost them.

Take a demonstration. You'll agree then that Pontiac deserves its increasing sales.

Be sure to ask for a copy of the booklet, "What do you mean—Balanced Value." It is free.

Remember it takes all of these qualities: Economy—Durability—Comfort—Safety—Performance—Appearance (not only some of them) to make a modern car.

Fleet of 158 Ford V-8s Costs Firm 3 Cents Per Mile

Depreciation, Insurance and All Operating Expense Included in Figures for Six Months.

Careful accounting saves large sums in the operating costs of automobile and truck fleets, say officials of the St. Louis branch of the Ford Motor Co., making public cost figures for six months V-8 operation by the Morton Salt Co.

"It is possible to reduce operating costs and judge purchase of new equipment by installation of an accurate accounting system," say Ford officials. The experience of the Morton Salt Co. is that of many other large operators of motor vehicle fleets. Wirt Morton, vice president, informing the Ford Motor Co. of the six months operating costs, wrote:

"The Morton Salt Co. operates a fleet of 158 V-8 automobiles which, according to its very accurate accounting system, traveled a total of 1,965,067 miles in the last six months of 1932.

"The actual cost per mile, after per

Automotive Service Men Hear Talk on Proper Piston Ring

Thursday evening, the Fleer Pet-ty Auto Supply Co., Koochook Co, Kirn Auto Supply Co. and the H & H Machine & Motor Parts Co sponsored an engineering meetin for the benefit of automotive ser-vice men at the German House Jefferson and Lafayette avenues.

The principal speaker was Harr Potter, service engineer of th Sealed Power Corporation, Mus-kegon, Mich. Potter started in th automobile business in 1904, worke in all branches of the business, an for 10 years has been working wit the car manufacturers in an engi-neering capacity on problems o increasing gas and oil mileag through the use of proper pisto rings.

Potter's talk was based on manu-facturing methods to build pisto rings for the modern engine an causes and remedies of engin troubles.

The meeting was attended by 35 service men.

Fleet of 158 Ford V-8s Costs Firm 3 Cents Per Mile

Depreciation, Insurance and All Operating Expense Included in Figures for Six Months.

Careful accounting saves large sums in the operating costs of automobile and truck fleets, say officials of the St. Louis branch of the Ford Motor Co., making public cost figures for six months V-8 operation by the Morton Salt Co.

"It is possible to reduce operating costs and judge purchase of new equipment by installation of an accurate accounting system," say Ford officials. The experience of the Morton Salt Co. is that of many other large operators of motor vehicle fleets. Wirt Morton, vice president, informing the Ford Motor Co. of the six months operating costs, wrote:

"The Morton Salt Co. operates a fleet of 158 V-8 automobiles which, according to its very accurate accounting system, traveled a total of 1,965,067 miles in the last six months of 1932.

"The actual cost per mile, after adding together operating costs, variable costs and fixed costs, for the entire fleet was $.0318 per mile per automobile. The cars on which these costs apply were in service an average of six months each as of Dec. 31, 1932, and were used in every section of the United States.

"Depreciation on these automobiles is figured at a flat rate of $187 per year per car. Most of the units in the Morton fleet are tudor sedans with a few panel types included.

"These Ford V-8s have made it possible," says Morton, "for our salesmen to do 30 hours' work today, compared to what they could do in 10 hours in the old days of railroad transportation, at no greater cost per mile than railroad transportation. Salesmen thus have been able to build up old contracts as well as extend the market into new retail outlets."

Farming on Rubber Tires

Goodyear farm tractor tires speeding up farming operations on the farm of William Schultze at Gumbo, Mo. Designed for maximum traction in earth and resistance of ground slippage, these Goodyear tractor tires also make it possible for a farmer to use his tractor for hauling on paved roads from which steel-tired tractors are barred. A tractor fitted with these pneumatic tires has more power available for useful work, it is claimed, because of lowered rolling resistance, is easier to operate, rides more smoothly, and performs farm and hauling operations at higher speeds at lower operating cost and with longer tractor life.

Output of 30 to 40 Rubber Trees Used In Each Modern Car

With increasing use of rubber in automobiles, yearly output of 30 to 40 rubber trees is required to supply tires, tubes and parts for one modern car.

In 1925, the average car used about three pounds of rubber parts in addition to the rubber in tires and tubes, whereas 1933 models carry 30 to 60 pounds of rubber parts, according to research engineers of The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

More than 90 per cent of modern automobiles use at least 30 to 40 pounds of rubber made up into 11 or 12 classes of parts, ranging from spark plug caps and door bumpers to torque spring insulators and engine mountaings.

Improvement in engines and fuels, and with introduction of new silent running tires making for extramely quite operation, have necessitated use of rubber insulation to reduce body noices formerly drowned out by engine and tires.

Rubber insulation is also important in breaking up synchronization of vibrations and noises between engine and body caused by high speed performance and use of all steel bodies.

Prominent among uses for rubber in automobiles other than in tires and tubes are floor mats, fan belts, spring bumpers, window channels, bushings, body shims and hydraulic brake hose.

Goodyear engineers believe more and more rubber will be used in body and fender construction. It is entirely possible that there will be more replacement of solid steel parts with rubber, perhaps replacing the car's entire spring mechanism with rubber.

Hudson and Essex Ventilating System Proved in Hot Spell

"The hot wave which has just made itself felt throughout the country has furnished a real practical test of the ability of the ventilating systems on current automobiles to provide comfort for the car owner under torrid conditions," says R. C. Frampton, of the Hudson-Frampton Co., distributor of Hudson and Essex Terraplane cars.

"The combination of open windshield, ventilating deflectors, turned outward to act as wind scoops, and the opening of the cowl ventilator, provide a coolness in the front compartment which has never before been possible. The side deflectors, acting as wind scoops, complete the work of the open windshield in providing a breeze which makes every spot in the front compartment cool and airy.

"In a recent test at the factory in Detroit, with the thermometer hovering around the 100 mark—in fact the hottest June day on record at the Detroit Weather Bureau—a test was made with a Terraplane eight standard sedan, with all combinations of ventilating adjustments made possible by the equipment installed on this car as stock equipment. It was found that by far the greatest amount of air was drawn in through the open windshield. In fact, quite adequate cooling was secured with the windshield and cowl ventilator open.

"With the wind deflectors turned inward, however, to act as scoops, conditions were perfect, and areas not reached by the windshield breeze, due to deflection caused by the cowl, were reached by the wind drawn in through the deflectors. The result was that not a dead spot was to be found in the car, and it was possible to drive in comfort under heat conditions which would normally render the occupants of the front compartment extremely uncomfortable."

New Firm Succeeds So. Side Chevrolet With the Same Set-Up

C. E. O'Meara, zone manager for the Chevrolet Motor Co., announces the appointment of the South Side Chevrolet, Inc., succeeding the South Side Chevrolet Co., Inc., 3645 South Grand boulevard.

J. E. BURGER.

The new company, of which Joseph E. Burger is president and sales manager, and Marvin P. Yates vice-president and general manager, will continue the same setup that was for nine years the South Side Chevrolet Co.

M. P. YATES.

Burger has been with the Ralston Purina Co. for 13 years in its sales promotion department.

Yates has been for many years sales manager of the William R. Warner Co. of New York and St. Louis.

The firm is carrying a display of all the new Chevrolet cars.

Old Cars in Corsets.

Foreign countries are the destinations of huge quantities of old automobiles from the United States for conversion into various articles from corsets to small bungalows.

Standing beside it is C. F. Kettering, vice-president in charge of research for General Motors. At the right is a 1904, one-cylinder Cadillac coupe, the first closed car built by Cadillac.

Hupmobile Cars Equipped With New Ventilating System

A ventilation system operated by draft deflectors has been developed by Hupmobile engineers and ventilation specialists, and is available on all current models.

The system, a Hupmobile-Dole design, provides draftless ventilation in cool weather, as well as windshield breeze so desirable in hot weather. By a simple adjustments, the deflectors can be made to act as wind scoops, thus sending an additional flow of air into a car.

The deflectors are mounted at the leading edge of the front window, where they have full control of the air stream which is created by the motion of the car. By various adjustments of these deflectors, full control of ventilation is secured. The deflectors not only perform efficiently, but are designed to blend with the form of the body and to contribute to the grace of contour.

Big Business in Motor Busses.

Of the 104,000 motor busses in the United States last year, the 32,213 listed as common carriers transported 1,736,000,000 passengers and covered 1,797,000,000 miles, grossing in revenue $348,800,000.

U. S. Rubber Co. for Years Seldom Off 24-Hour Day

According to Matt J. Herold, district manager of tire sales for the United States Rubber Co. in St. Louis, for several years his company has scarcely been off the 24-hour day. It has been the rule, rather than the exception, for its factory to run night and day.

"For the past several months," Herold says, "production has been crowded to the very limit. May was one of the biggest months in our history and we have expectations of an even greater production in June. This applies equally to our Detroit, Indianapolis and Los Angeles factories.

"A substantial number of sound dealers have been added to the sales organization throughout the United States during the past year, adding a total potential annual sales volume of about $2,500,000.

"Steady employment has been enjoyed by the workers of our company during the past few years. Salaries suffered little change. In fact, recent salary increases of many other companies were simply restorations of pay cuts our workers never had to take. All of this may be attributed to an increase of 78 per cent in factory efficiency, in face of price declines of 54 per cent, a small part of which price decline has been retrieved as a result of recent price advances."

Cleared of Traffic Dangers.

Because of traffic dangers, the town council of Beallsville, Pa., forbids any person to roll a hoop or ride a bicycle, scooter, kiddie car, tricycle, or to roller skate or slide down hill on streets or sidewalks.

A MESSAGE TO ALL FORD WORKERS

You and I together are credited with having created "mass production." We use it to make more things in less time at lower cost. By it the people have more and better goods at cheaper prices. Workmen earn higher wages with less strain—not less work. The level of American family comfort has been visibly elevated.

Industry never harms a country: harm comes from elsewhere. But Industry bears the brunt of it. After the slump came, we increased our $6 minimum wage to $7 a day, which continued for 22 months. Today our wage rate is the highest in our line. But Industry still suffers for something she did not cause. Between making and using things, something outside Industry has stepped in to prevent the maker from making and the user from using.

We pioneered the 8-hour day, the 5-day week, a minimum wage that has always exceeded the market rate. Relations between employees and the Company have always stood on a just and human basis. We are as interested in social progress, and possess as sensitive a social conscience as any reformer whose theories have never met the test of a pay-roll. We pay for doing what we think is right. And we achieved these industrial decencies not by regulation or compulsion, but by being free of financial control and "gentlemen's agreements"—free to do what we saw was right and necessary.

We have no fears of what is ahead. We can make good motor cars under any just system. I think industry will spread out. Big factories, crowded industrial centers, will dissolve. Instead we shall have workshops in village and country. Nearness to the land will prevent the worst shocks of economic change. The benefits of "mass production" can be retained without the evils of massed industrial crowding. That is the next step.

You and I are able to take this next step because of what we learned in taking the present one.

Rip Van Winkle Wakes Up

Shades of Joe Jefferson and Robert Planquette, Dead These Many Years, Will Hover Among The Trees in the Forest Park Stage While the Ghost of Washington Irving Watches With Them The Operatic Version of the Famous Old Comedy.

IT has been 40 years or more since Robert Planquette, the French composer of "Chimes of Normandy" wrote the music for the light opera "Rip Van Winkle" which, with the book given a musical comedy twist for an introduction and with Planquette's original score, the Municipal Opera will present tomorrow night on the stage in Forest Park. Widely proclaimed as a world premier of the opera it is hardly that for Planquette saw his work produced in London and Paris before he died, 30 years ago. It was given in New York earlier. At that time for English speaking theater goers there was but one Rip Van Winkle—Joe Jefferson—and this country and England refused to accept the operatic version or any other version for that matter which did not present Jefferson in the role which he had made famous. In Paris, however, Planquette's work, standing alone on its splendid music, was an immediate success. The modern book—the original for Planquette's score was written by H. B. Farnie, an Englishman—is by John Trevor Scholl and Edgar B. Smith.

Going back beyond Planquette's time it has been more than 100 years since St. Louis first saw "Rip Van Winkle" on the stage. It is far more than 20 years since Joseph Jefferson last played that famous character to delight St. Louis audiences, but as the story will be told on the stage tomorrow night—a story of Washington Irving's tale upon which Jefferson based his classic comedy—it is essentially the same old Rip who appears, for the librettists, despite their adaptation of the story with the modern note, have kept faithfully to the lovable Rip Van Winkle, that vagabondish ne'er-do-well, who wandered off into the Catskill Mountains, caroused with Hendrick Hudson's ghostly crew, and slept for 20 years.

STICKING to dates, it was precisely 102 years ago next Friday—on June 30, 1831—that St. Louis saw its first presentation of "Rip Van Winkle" in dramatic form. The theater was the old Salt House on Second street, near Olive, the occasion the benefit of Mrs. Noah M. Ludlow, whose husband, one of the first dramatic pioneers to visit St. Louis, and later famous as a manager here was then managing a touring company for James H. Caldwell of New Orleans. It is reasonable to believe that Ludlow played Rip on that occasion, for he was a fine comedian. The play had been originally produced at Albany, N. Y., May 26, 1828, with Thomas Flynn as Rip and Charles B. Parsons the Derrick of the cast. Parsons played Rip in Cincinnati, under Ludlow's management a few months later. In October, 1829, William Chapman produced his version of "Rip Van Winkle" in Philadelphia. Chapman was Joseph Jefferson's uncle and a member of that famous family of actors who first navigated a show boat on the Mississippi River. Later Joseph Jefferson's father, Joseph Jefferson, the second—the famous Joe was the third of that name—played the role with success. It was not impossible that Washington Irving saw him in the role, for he admired that old actor.

The first famous player of Rip was James H. Hackett, in his later years more famous for Falstaff, in which character Ben de Bar, famed in the old St. Louis theaters, was his only rival. Following him in the character was Charles Burke, step-son of the second Joseph Jefferson, and young Joseph's half-brother, who using the Chapman-Jefferson version created his own play. That, in turn was the basis of Joseph Jefferson's classic comedy. For one day, reading the "Life and Letters" of Washington Irving, the then young Joseph encountered a word of praise for his father as an actor and for himself. He thought of Burke's play and read Irving's story. Then he wrote his version of the play that made him so great a figure of the American stage, but it was remodeled several times and once with the help of Dion Boucicault, before it assumed its finished and classical form, which is the basis of the operetta which Municipal Opera presents tomorrow night.

FOR this occasion Scholl and Smith have interwoven a modern note in their book for Peter van Winkle, nicknamed "Rip," a radio announcer, lives in suburban Bungalow Manor, where his wife has social ambitions. He comes home tired but scheduled by his wife for a costume party at the home of Mrs. Knickerbocker, descended from an old Dutch family. Peter manages to evade the summons, as do his daughter and her beau, and the sympathetic and modern young cavalier gives his prospective father-in-law a drink from his hip-flask before he and the daughter, leaving Peter at his ease, are off to a night club. It is powerful post-Volstead stuff, the schnapps in that hip-pocket flask. Peter sleeps and dreams he is indeed old Rip van Winkle.

And then follows the story as we all know it — the story of Irving's original tale as translated to the stage by Jefferson.

Joseph Macaulay, one of the finest acting-singers to grace the big Forest Park stage is to play Rip. He was especially engaged for the present summer season with reference to that particular role, and for months has been steeping himself in the Jefferson tradition.

The role of Mrs. Van Winkle, Rip's shrewish wife, will be sung by Nancy McCord with Helen Arnold as their daughter, Meenie. Deerick Beekman will be in the hands of Leonard Ceeley, while Doris Patston will be Katrina, Allan Jones the Hans and Henry Rabke Hendrick Hudson.

Prominent in the score will be Rip's "Echo Song," his song with children's chorus "Where Is My Girl," his trio with Meenie and Hans "The Marriage Contract," Gretchen's "Letter Song," the chorus "King George," sung by the villagers; the "Chorus of Cowards" and the "Nine Pins" chorus sung by Hendrick Hudson's crew.

Young Faversham to Be a Leading Man

Philip Faversham will be Barbara Stanwyck's leading man in the film version of Donald Henderson Clarke's novel "Female," which will be started as soon as Miss Stanwyck has concluded her co-starring tour with Frank Fay in "Tattle Tales."

A son of William Faversham, Philip has been signed to a long-term contract and he already has played a prominent role in support of Leslie Howard and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. in "Captured," which soon is to be released. Barbara Stanwyck's most recently completed picture is "Baby Face," scheduled for national release on July 1.

Former Star Now Extra.

Julanne Johnston, former screen leading woman, plays an extra part in "Midnight Club" with Clive Brook, George Raft, Allison Skipworth and Helen Vinson.

THE WEEK'S NEW FILMS

By Nie

IF THE movie producers have overlooked the point of the play, "I Loved You Wednesday" in making it into a cinema drama for the Fox this week, they have, nevertheless, provided an entertaining picture, after the screen manner, and it is so delightfully played by the lovely Elissa Landi, Warner Baxter and Victor Jory that it ranks high among the lighter of the season's offerings. In passing it may be remarked that the title, which is meaningless to most picture fans, comes from, "And if I loved you Wednesday, what is that to you? I do not love you Thursday, so much is true." The idea in the original play was that a little student ballet dancer tries, after five years, to recaupture the happiness of some months spent in Paris with a fellow student who, unfortunately, has a wife. Realizing that he will return to his wife as he always has done, she goes away on a yacht with a man of the world who has no ideas of matrimony and who is quite likely not to love her Thursday. The picture, on the other hand, has the yachting gentleman hurrying her away to a wedding ceremony at the finish and making her an honest woman and one who will be loved, truly, every day in the week from then on. As the smart man-about-town—he is really a man about the world for Vicki, the dancer, meets him in South America, goes with him to New York, writes to him while he is helping to build the great Boulder Dam, and finally returns to see him again in this country—Warner Baxter is excellent. Jory, too, is fine as the married man lover and just to see Miss Landi is alone worth the price of admission.

Another Triangle.

THERE is something of the same sort of situation in "When Ladies Meet" at Loew's. Maybe you remember the story for this was the play which wound up the Casey Stock Company season at the Shubert Theater a month or so ago. There is a married man who is making love to a young author and an honest young boy friend who finally shows the writer the error of her ways by bringing about a meeting with the married suitor's wife. The picture is inclined to be too conversational and rather slow to get under way but, along about the middle when it speeds up it is pleasiing and amusing. It, too, has advantage of a genuinely fine cast. Ann Harding is the long suffering wife and Frank Morgan the philandering husband while Myrna Loy is the love hunting other woman who does not realize until the last minute that Robert Montgomery is right at hand ready to supply all the happiness she can use for the rest of her life. Pretty good company that and, in addition, Alice Brady, fresh from the stage, is well cast in the role of a rather simple and blundering friend of every one concerned.

An Honest Copper.

WILLIAM POWELL, in "Private Detective 62," at the Ambassador, is a plain clothes copper—if you can imagine Bill ever wearing any very plain clothes—who specializes in checking up on the carryings on of gay husbands and wives to provide divorce evidence. A gentleman at heart as well as in dress Bill sickens of his work when he is assigned to get something on Margaret Lindsay. Margaret was a nice and rich lady who liked to gamble but after the private detective had taken her in hand, proved that she had nothing to do with a murder case and saved her $45,000 or so, she was ready to take him out of his profession forever and make a diplomat out of him or something. It's pretty good meller of the rather conventional sort and gets exciting at times.

Fortune Telling.

HOW the fake crystal ball operators do their stuff is cleverly told in "The Mind Reader" at the Missouri with Warren William shining brightly as a carnival faker who rises in the world to become the adviser of silly women the country over. He is not always right in his guesses. Sometimes he causes suicides and breaks up the wrong homes. Also he manages to make a mess of his own marriage to pretty Constance Cummings but Connie loves him through thick and thin and even at the finish, when Warren goes off to jail to serve eight or ten years for manslaughter, the customers are led to believe that she will camp at the hoosgow gates and that happiness, though delayed, is in the offing. Also on the Missouri's program is the old Paul Whiteman musical film, "The King of Jazz," which has been taken from the shelf, dusted off and put in circulation once more. A sort of glorified screen vaudeville it is as handsome in its photography as it was three or four years ago.

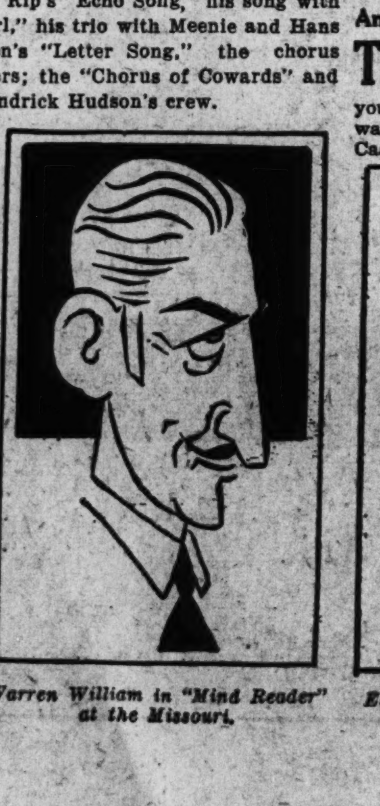
Parlor, Bedroom and Bath.

"EX-LADY" at the Grand Central introduces Bette Davis as a star in a role of a girl who didn't believe in matrimony, but who got married anyway and ran into a lot of trouble. Clever at times in its suggestiveness it is not meant as entertainment for children—or did the movie magnates have the youngsters in mind as prospective audiences? The other feature at the Grand Central is "Tomorrow at Seven," one of those mystery mellers which invites you to try and guess who the murderer is.

Lew Ayres in a New Movie.

With Lew Ayres cast in the starring role, "In the Money," a film drama of a plumber who gambles his way to a fortune, went into work at Universal studio last week. Murray Roth and Howard Emmett Rogers wrote the story. Roth is directing and the large supporting cast includes Ginger Rogers, Charles Grapewin, Shirley Grey, Merna Kennedy, Tom Dugan and Arthur Vinton.



Warren William in "Mind Reader" at the Missouri.

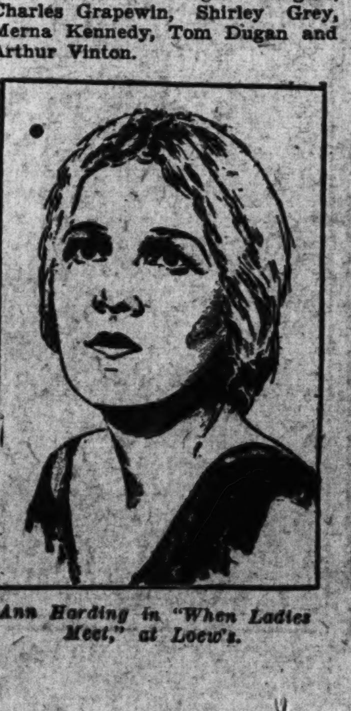
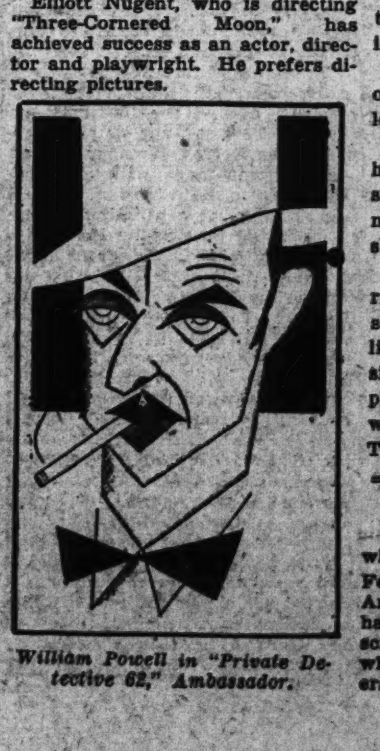
Bette Davis in "Ex-Lady" at the Grand Central.



Ann Harding in "When Ladies Meet," at Loew's.



William Powell in "Private Detective 62," Ambassador.

Katharine Cornell To Do Shakespeare

Katherine Cornell has announced that her plans for next season are three-fold: she will make her first appearance in a Shakespearean role; she will take her first step toward establishing a repertory company, and she will make a coast-to-coast tour, primarily to visit cities in which she never before has been seen.

"Romeo and Juliet" has been selected by Miss Cornell for her debut in Shakespeare. This tragedy will be staged with great simplicity, stress being placed upon the play rather than upon the pharaphernalia. Last winter the actress made her first appearance in a classic role in "Lucrece," but not even in her early days in stock has she ever acted in Shakespeare. With "Romeo and Juliet" as her new production of the year, she also will produce Bernard Shaw's "Candida" and Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," thus offering three well contrasted dramas.

According to her present plans, she will open her season late in November on tour and then travel to the Pacific Coast, via St. Louis, visiting a number of one-night stands. She will not be seen in New York until next spring.

Blue Melodies for The Highland's Bill

"A Revue in Blues" is the title of the offering to be presented by Harry Lange and his Musical Merry makers as the feature of the entertainment program at Forest Park Highlands this week. The 54-minute program will embrace blues melodies from 1910 to the present time. The secondary feature of the bill will be the "Buchmann Follies," a song and dance presentation, with Clyde Bormann, banjoist, as master of ceremonies.

Director, Actor, Author.

Elliott Nugent, who is directing "Three-Cornered Moon," has achieved success as an actor, director and playwright. He prefers directing pictures.

A Schoolmarm Goes Cinema

How Kay Clark Gave Up Teaching to Become Sheila Terry and Discovered That the Mills of the Hollywood Gods Grind Exceedingly Slow and Not Always So Very Well—Now She is Headed Upward Again With a Part in Bill Powell's Picture.

By H. H. NIEMEYER.

LAST winter, out in Hollywood, we told Sheila Terry, a nice little movie girl, that we would write something about her one of these days but, somehow, we never got around to it. Now Sheila is on exhibition here this week along with Bill Powell in "Private Detective 62" down at the Ambassador and seeing her in the film yesterday brought her story to mind. As a matter of fact there are two stories of her life as far as it has gone to date, of Sheila Terry. Only one of these stories has received circulation thus far because interviewers have always questioned her about the life of Sheila Terry and neglected to inquire about Kay Clark.

They are both one and the same girl, and when you get the history of Sheila Terry from her own lips, it is a straightforward story of theatrical struggle with the conventional climax of ultimate recognition and success.

If you happen to ask her the story of Kay Clark, she will answer: "That's something else altogether," and launch into a vastly different recital of time, tide and fortune,

There had to be a beginning to all this, and on this point there is no dissimilarity in the two stories—she was born only once, in one place and at one and the same time. In other words, Sheila Terry was born Kay Clark on a farm near War Road, Minnesota, on the day of March 5, 1910. When the two characters in the one person parted company is a matter on which she herself is a little hazy, but it all came about on account of the conflict of her own will, in the abstract sense, and a will, in the legal sense, which a more than proverbial uncle made.

"ONE of my very earliest desires was to go on the stage"—it was Kay Clark talking this time—"but my folks had me trained to become a school teacher on the insistence of a rich uncle who was that way about education. I certainly do not regret the training nor the later experience of teaching, for it gave me an understanding and appreciation of many things which I would otherwise have missed."

Things happened in Kay Clark's life in just the same manner that it happens in story books: The rich uncle died, and when his will was deciphered it was discovered that Kay would come into a tidy little sum providing she became a school teacher. The minimum amount of educational service stipulated was two years. So Kay Clark, with a burning desire to become an actress, spent two years teaching country school.

Somewhere just before this, Sheila Terry stepped into the picture. Kay Clark would have a strange interlude and go in for a spell of dramatic training under the name of Sheila Terry. She didn't want to get the two names mixed, but used one when she went in for the things she wanted and the other for the things her folks and well-meaning uncle thought would be good for her.

The scene of her dramatic training shifted from Minnesota to New York. It was while she was in the Big City visioning her forthcoming stage debut that the news was wired that Uncle's will had been opened and read. The 17-year-old embryonic actress had to pack up and hunt for a job as a school teacher. Luckily, she had received her teaching credentials just before departing for New York, so from 1927 to 1929 Sheila Terry was packed away in the old trunk in the attic.

NOW enters the menace although Sheila isn't so sure that it wasn't a hero. The "tidy little sum" which her uncle had left her was invested in some safe stocks—and it is well-known history what the year 1929 did to that commodity.

And so Kay Clark died a painless death. She hasn't been revived since then, although Sheila contemplated it several times when the going was a little tough and the theatrical world either turned a cold shoulder on her or shrugged in a disinterested manner.

Her first real job was an engagement with a stock company in Toronto in which she played for about seven months. Armed with this experience, she blithely turned up in New York City one sunshiny day all set to crash Broadway.

This story isn't very dramatic for the simple reason that she didn't have to starve until she got a break. She didn't walk the streets from one theatrical agency to another, the rain soaking through her torn shoes, the sting of the wind and the snow coming through her thin coat while her indomitable will carried her bravely through the crisis.

THE fact of the matter is she asked for a job and got it. She ate regularly, lived comfortable and her shoes were always in good repair.

What's more in the six months during which she played in New York she rose to the point where she played the feminine lead in "The Outsider," which, and for an obvious reason, happens to be her favorite stage role.

Also, there is really no Cinderella angle to this story as far as her entry into movies is concerned. Sheila was doing quite well on the New York stage when a Warner Bros. executive approached with a "How about a screen test?" proposition.

Sheila isn't simple enough to try to make people believe that she met the offer with indifference. She confesses that she grabbed at the chance, made the screen test and then waited breathlessly while it was shipped to Hollywood where a decision would be made.

Sure enough, back came the order: "Ship one Sheila Terry, f. o. b New York," or words to that effect, and Sheila Terry was launched on a movie career.

The ironical part about the whole situation was that whereas she had started out fighting her own battle to get anywhere on the stage, she had made an instant success; but when the movies thrust greatness on her, she went out to Hollywood to be lost, or mislaid, in the shuffle for about a year.

She had a nice little part in her first picture, "Week End Marriage" and in "Big City Blues," but from then on came a series of secretary roles where she would have one scene and perhaps only one line to say, such as: "This way, madam," or "will that be all today, sir?" Several times during her past year in Hollywood she contemplated resurrecting Kay Clark and going back to Minnesota. Now, with parts coming her way again, she is pretty content to be Sheila Terry.

Five Writers on Marx Film.

Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby, who wrote the dialogue for "Horse Feathers," and Edward Kaufman, Arthur Sheekman and Nat Perrin, have been named to work on the screen adaptation of "Duck Soup," which stars the Four Marx Brothers. Production starts next week.

Leslie Howard Sails.

SALESMEN WANTED

THE MAJORITY OF MEN WHO READ THIS ADVERTISEMENT HAVE NO DOUBT SCANNED NUMEROUS ADVERTISEMENTS HUNDREDS OF TIMES, SEEKING SOMETHING IN THEIR PARTICULAR LINE OR PERHAPS HOPING THAT THEY WILL GET "SOMETHING FOR NOTHING."

Men, there is no such thing as "something for nothing" these days, and if we continue to center our thoughts on doing nothing but the things we are accustomed to, isn't it the truth that we get very little out of life? This is no time for a man to want to do the same old thing when there is no chance for him to progress. If you are not making $40, $50, $75 or more per week, and you have been in that business any length of time, and have diligently and honestly applied yourself, ask yourself whether that job affords you any opportunity. Then I suggest that you come in and talk with me. It costs you nothing to do this.

I have had the pleasure in the last few months of employing dozens of men all through Missouri, Iowa and Eastern Nebraska, who today, are making real money every week.

We are in the finest business in the world, doing business with the finest people. Our company is the largest of its kind in the world. This company has been established here a number of years, and when this unique product of ours was introduced, these men welcomed it with overwhelming joy and enthusiasm, and they are today making more money than ever before in St. Louis and vicinity.

These men are happy and contented, not because they have to work hard, but because, while they have to work and do work hard, they get well paid—also a number of men in our organizations in nearby cities, in Springfield, Ill.; Des Moines, Davenport, Kansas City, Omaha, etc.

We have something that is unique in construction, marvelous in performance and was never heard of until recently manufactured and introduced by our company. Our men are making $40 to as high as $125 per week and up, and I want 12 good men, who can furnish good references, to come and talk with me, also talk with our men. Let them tell you about our business—if you have the qualifications they have, meet them; watch them do their work. See them make money every day, and the kind of money you would be happy to make. Go to their homes and meet their families, if you care to, and find out for yourself the real truth and opportunity of our business. It costs you nothing.

If you are sincere of purpose, interested in permanent success, willing to work hard, can furnish good references, I welcome you to call between the hours of 9 and 1 on Monday morning, at 561-564 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive streets.

A. J. SCOBIE.

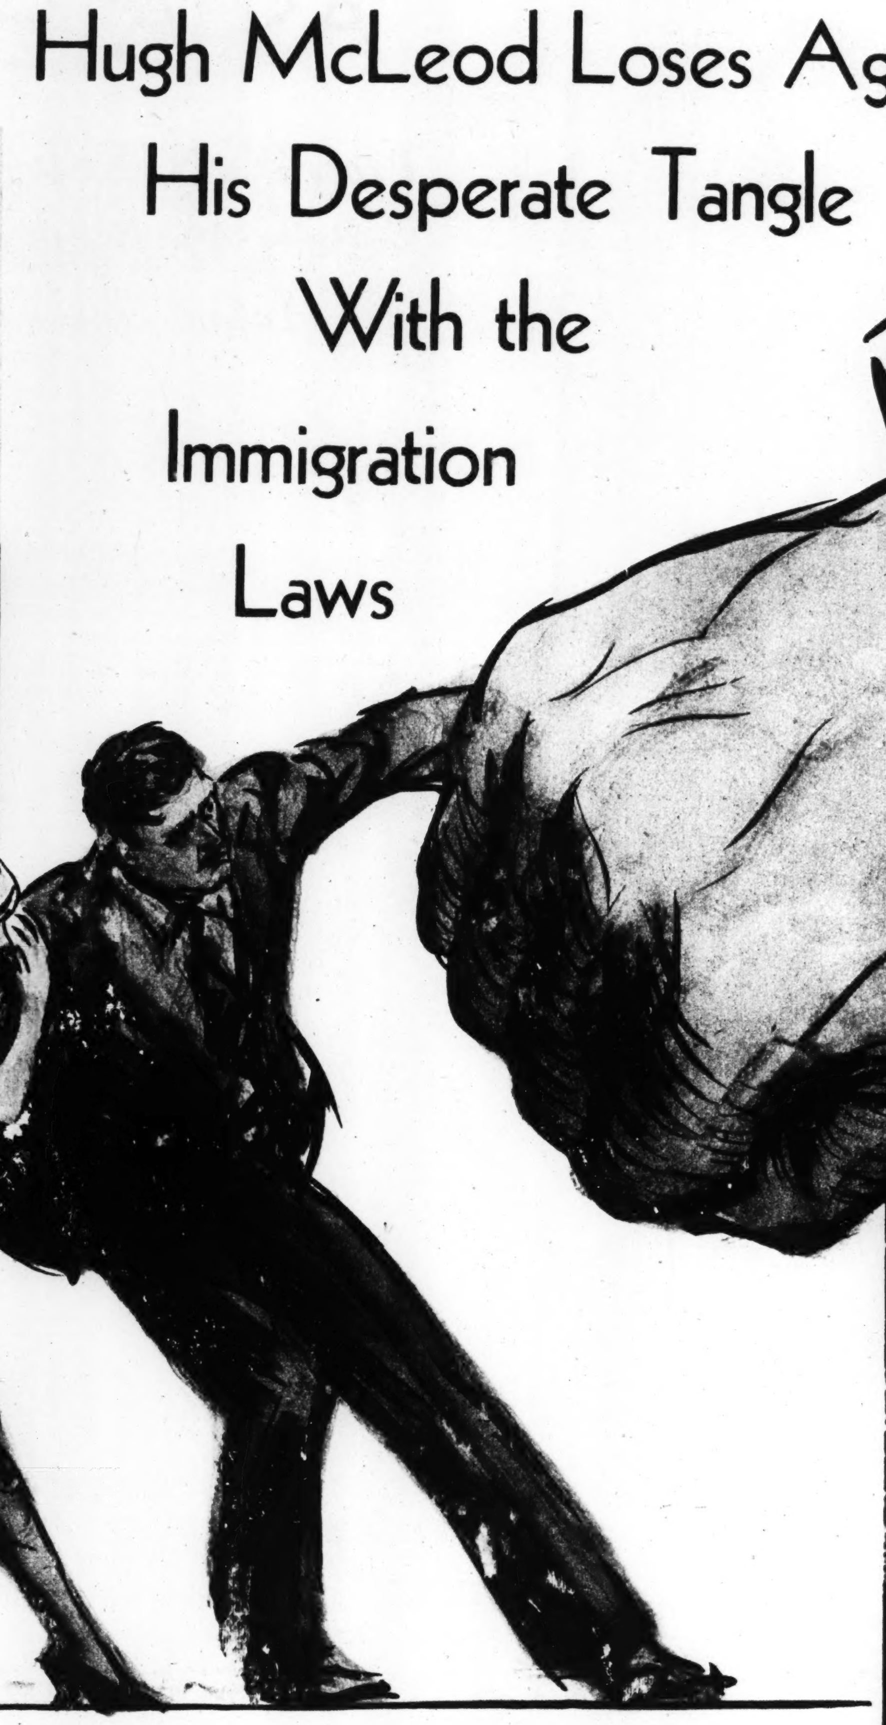
Hugh McLeod Loses Again in His Desperate Tangle With the Immigration Laws

Hugh McLeod as he said good-by to his 5-year-old son at the time of his recent arrest.



The Unhappy Plight of the Man Who Has Been Deported Twice and Now Faces a Prison Sentence Because He Wanted to Be With His Wife and Child.

SAN FRANCISCO.

HUGH McLEOD was good enough as a fighter to win three decorations for bravery in the World War, but he was not good enough to win his fight with the United States Immigration authorities for the right to stay with his wife and child. He has lost for the third time. Now he not only faces deportation again. He faces a term of 18 months in the Leavenworth Penitentiary. Coming back into this country and trying to earn a living for a wife and son after being twice deported is something the immigration authorities will not tolerate. So McLeod is in jail here awaiting transfer to the Federal prison and when he is through there he must be shipped back to Scotland as an undesirable alien. Meanwhile, his wife and 5-year-old son will have to depend on themselves and on charity, as they are already having to do, for their support. They can't understand it all.

"Why does the United States Government do this?" Mrs. McLeod tearfully inquires. "Men are being sent to jail for deserting their wives and children and for refusing to support them. Yet here is my husband who risks everything because he does not want to desert us—because he wants to work to feed and shelter us—and they send him to prison. It is more than I can comprehend."

Among all the tragic cases of families torn apart by the immigration laws and by officials who construe it as their duty to enforce the law literally, the case of Hugh McLeod has attracted more attention perhaps than any other of recent years. And among all these cases it is doubtful if there is one complicated by more unusual angles.

As the matter now stands, the wife is the only one of the three members of the family who is acceptable both to the United States and Scotland. McLeod cannot stay in this country and the 5-year-old son, having been born in America, cannot remain permanently in Scotland. McLeod, deported first two years ago, has tried to solve the dilemma by stealing back into this country illegally. His present predicament now demonstrates the doubtful wisdom of that course.

A native of Scotland, Hugh McLeod came to Canada before the war. During the conflict he served with distinction as a soldier in the Canadian forces and, on his return to Canada after the cessation of hostilities, served as a policeman in Winnipeg. Eight years ago, he crossed the border into the United States on a vacation trip to San Francisco, and in the course of that vacation he met the woman who is now his wife. Unwisely, of course, he married her without first straightening out his citizenship complications. He liked San Francisco and decided to stay here.

He found work and he and his bride were happy. Five years ago their son was born. They owned an automobile, they were making payments on a home and had settled down to a quiet, domestic life when there came in June, 1931, the first of a succession of blows which were to shatter their happiness.

The doorbell rang one day and Mrs. McLeod answered it. It was someone to see her husband. McLeod was thunderstruck when the visitor proved to be an inspector from the United States Immigration Service at Angel Island come to serve a warrant of arrest and an order that he be deported to Scotland.

"What have I done?" McLeod demanded.

"It says here," replied the stranger, "that you are guilty of moral turpitude. It alleges that you are an undesirable alien and that you were arrested for a crime in Vancouver, British Columbia."

"I can explain everything," said the husband, as he bade his wife good-by and departed with the officer. "I will be back soon."

HE was taken to the immigration depot on the island in San Francisco Bay. He was given a formal hearing. He engaged a lawyer. For a month every legal recourse was used in an effort to avert his deportation. They carried the case into the Federal Court, demanding a writ to stay the deportation order.

It was admitted that McLeod had been arrested in Vancouver years ago on a charge of "unlawful entry" of premises. The defense acknowledged that he had remained in jail for months awaiting trial—but it was contended that the case had been dismissed and that he had not actually served time for any offense after a conviction.

Nevertheless, he lost. He was hustled off on a railroad train loaded with undesirables, taken to New York, and put aboard a boat for Scotland.

Heartbroken, Mrs. McLeod put her boy in the care of sympathizing friends, and went to work. Only faith that her man would return some day—how she didn't know—kept up her spirit. And her hopes were not unfounded.

Thirteen months later her telephone rang in the little apartment that served only as a sleeping place after work. It was McLeod. He had smuggled himself aboard a boat bound for America from a Scotch port, and had worked his way back to California.

"Be careful they don't get you," warned his wife. But McLeod's eagerness to rejoin his family overshadowed his fear of being recognized and rearrested. He hastened to his wife. Once more they were happy.

McLeod got a job. They didn't know when he would be identified and ordered again out of the country. But they decided to enjoy their happiness while they had it. As it turned out, it was not to last long.

A few weeks later someone recognized McLeod. The word got to the immigration office. He was arrested again, given a hearing, and ordered deported again to Scotland. Again, as he parted from his wife he whispered, "I'll be back."

This was in August, 1932. Three months later he was again in San Francisco. This time he had hidden himself aboard the steamer when it landed in Scotland and had recrossed the Atlantic, disembarking at a Canadian port.

He stole across the border one night into Detroit, then hastened across the continent to San Francisco.

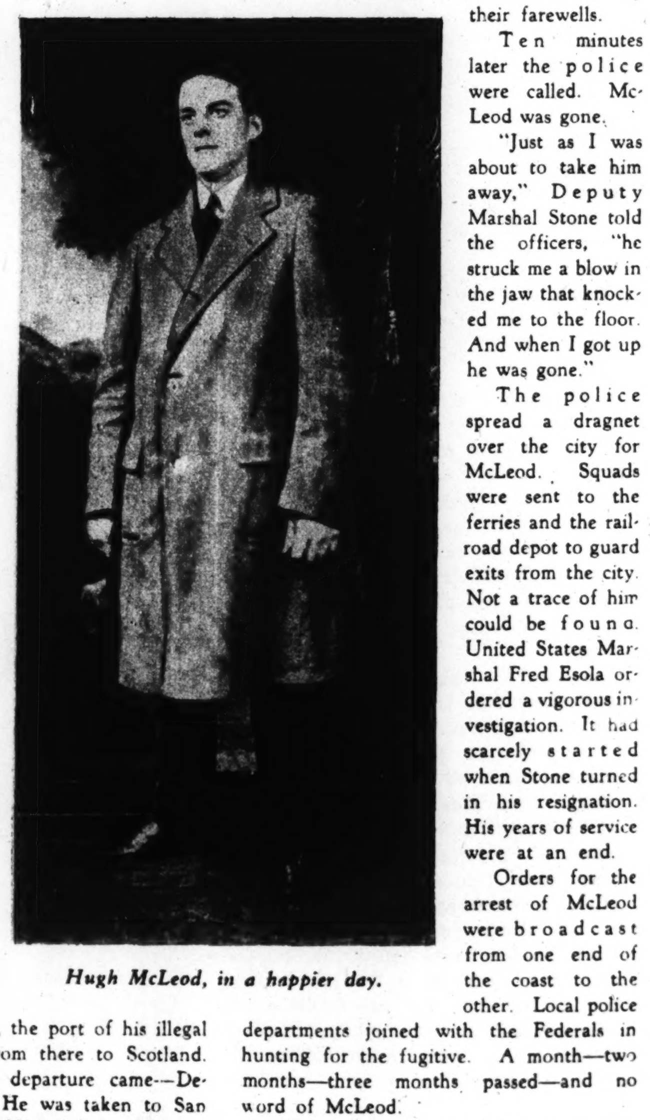
"It's risky being here," he told his wife when they were reunited again, "but you've got a job here and you need it. Any danger is worth being near you and Billy."

Evidently the authorities had been expecting his reappearance. He was picked up on the street within a week and hurried to the immigration station. There they doubled the guard over him and arranged to send him back to Detroit, the port of his illegal entry, to be sent from there to Scotland.

The day of his departure came—December 17, 1932. He was taken to San Francisco by Deputy United States Marshal Charles Stone to be placed aboard an eastbound train. They had several hours to wait before train time.

"My wife is working at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel," McLeod told Stone. "Won't you take me to her so I can tell her good-by? She's expecting another baby, you know, and it will be mighty hard for her without me."

Stone's heart was touched. He went with his prisoner to the hotel, asked for Mrs. McLeod, and allowed them to say their farewells.



Hugh McLeod, in a happier day.

Ten minutes later the police were called. McLeod was gone.

"Just as I was about to take him away," Deputy Marshal Stone told the officers, "he struck me a blow in the jaw that knocked me to the floor. And when I got up he was gone."

The police spread a dragnet over the city for McLeod. Squads were sent to the ferries and the railroad depot to guard exits from the city. Not a trace of him could be found. United States Marshal Fred Esola ordered a vigorous investigation. It had scarcely started when Stone turned in his resignation. His years of service were at an end.

Orders for the arrest of McLeod were broadcast from one end of the coast to the other. Local police departments joined with the Federals in hunting for the fugitive. A month—two months—three months passed—and no word of McLeod.

Then, on the morning of April 17 last, came a phone call to the office of the marshal in the post office building. Esola hung up his phone in a hurry and called for Deputy George Kavanaugh.

Mrs. McLeod and her son, Bill.

Half an hour later Kavanaugh, with two police detectives, scrambled up the stairs of a house at 38 Delmar street and rang the bell.

Admitted, they asked to be taken to Mrs. McLeod's housekeeping room. McLeod, a minute later, was again in the hands of the law.

He gave up without a struggle. His wife had left the house a few minutes before for market. The boy, however, refused to leave his father and tagged along with him to the Federal building, crying. And when McLeod was placed behind the bars of the temporary cell in the postoffice building, it was necessary for a Government stenographer to take him home.

"It's not true that I slugged that deputy marshal," said McLeod after his arrest. "I just ran away from him and jumped into a taxi. But I swear I didn't strike him."

McLeod told of his wanderings and of his narrow escapes from capture. He worked his way to Hollywood, after breaking away from the officer, and got a job in a movie studio. He took the name of Louis Albers.

From there he went to San Diego, but when he saw a deputy marshal eyeing him suspiciously, he hurried north to Compton, near Los Angeles.

There, in his quest for work, misfortune again overtook him. Three days after his arrival there came an earthquake and he was felled by falling bricks. His legs and arms were severely cut, but he feared going to a hospital for treatment lest he be recognized and arrested.

From Compton he wandered north, finally returning to San Francisco. He telephoned his wife, telling her he was in hiding. His heart was filled with an eagerness to see his wife and boy. Better judgment told him to stay away.

He decided to try a daring experiment. Disguised with large black glasses, he walked boldly into the postoffice building, past the office of the marshal. No one recognized him. Next day he did the same at the office of the immigration service. Again he escaped detection.

Encouraged by the success of his daring, he went home only to lose his gamble with the law.

This time he enlisted the aid of Attorney F. C. Dewar, counsel for the state commander of the Canadian Legion. A legal battle followed.

The United States attorney's office announced it would not prosecute McLeod for his escape from Deputy Marshal Stone. But the immigration people were adamant. They insisted on deportation.

FOR weeks the wires were kept hot between San Francisco and Washington in appeals to the Department of Labor. Secretary Perkins was urged, in the name of womanhood and humanity, to make an exception and allow McLeod to remain with his wife and son.

"I'm virtually a man without a country," McLeod pleaded.

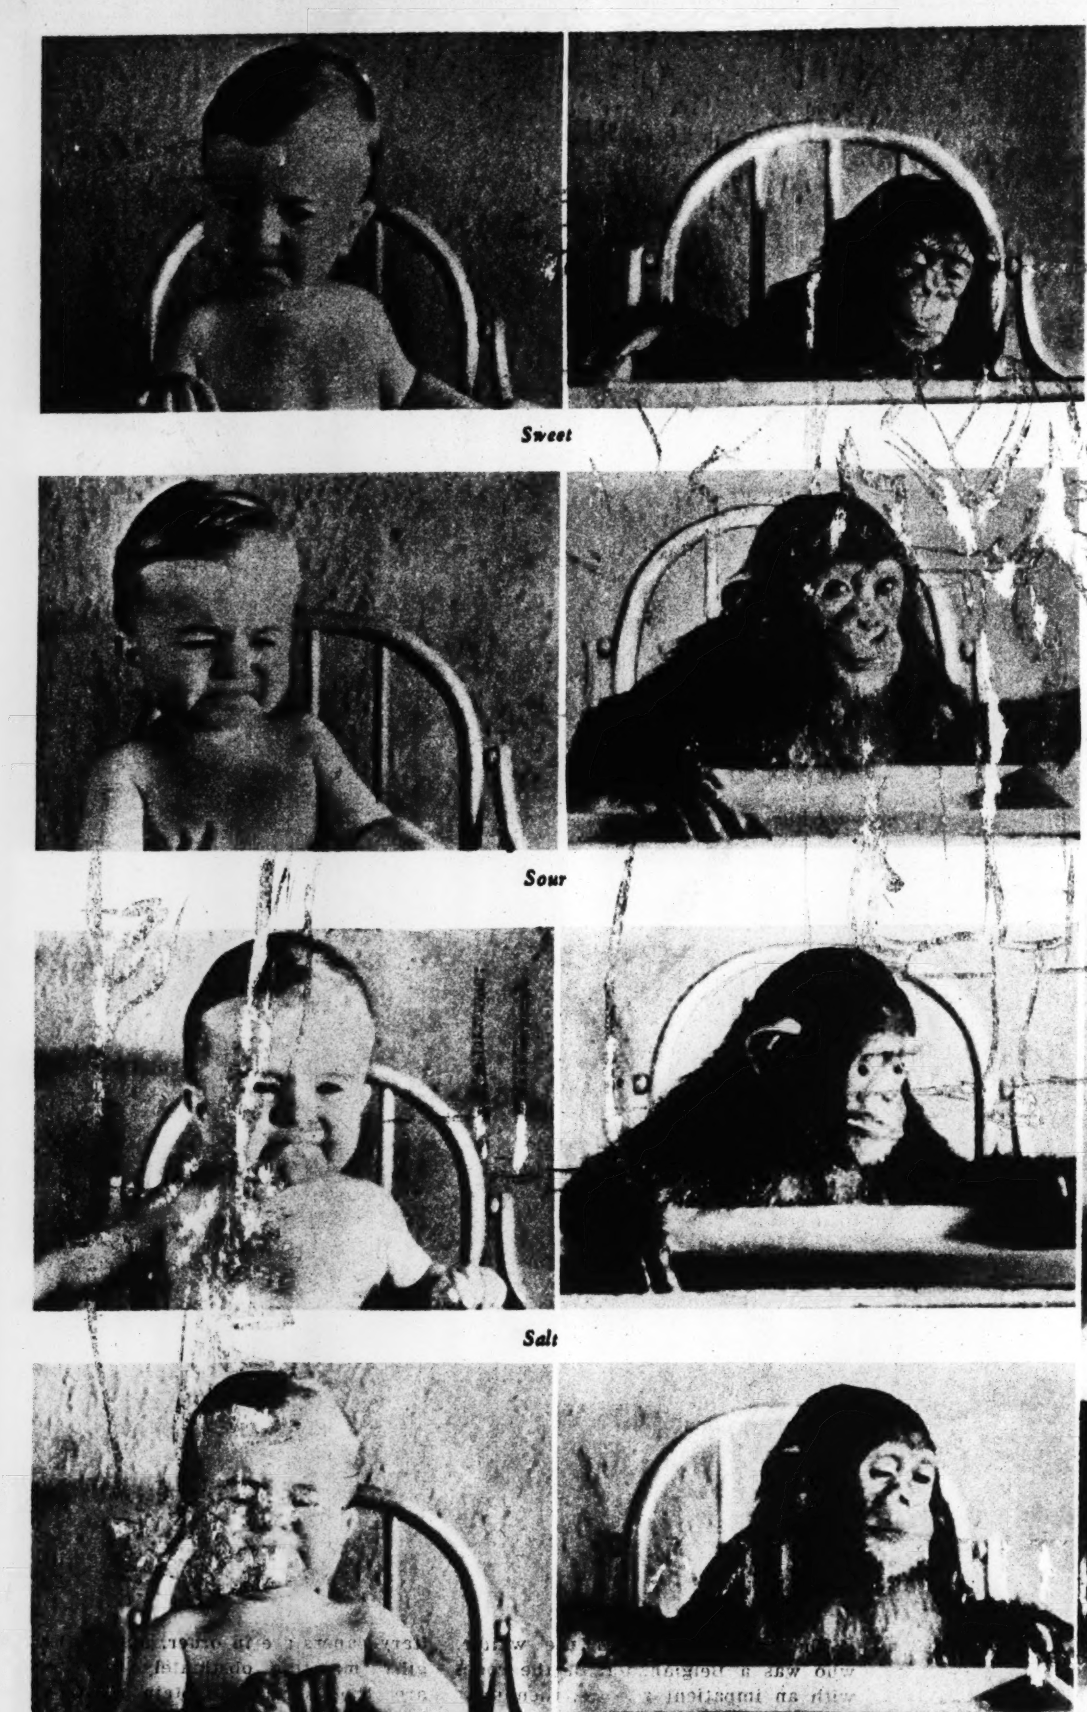
"My boy, born in the United States cannot go to Scotland to live permanently. The United States will keep him but orders me out. My wife seems to be the only one of us acceptable to both countries. What can I do?"

At last all pleas were denied and McLeod, bidding farewell for the fourth time to his wife and child, was taken back to Detroit, there to face deportation again. But the law had still another hold on him. He was brought into court on a charge of violating the immigration laws in his return to this country after deportation. He pleaded guilty and the eighteen months' sentence was imposed—with deportation awaiting him when the prison doors swing open.

Now he is back in the San Francisco jail with a trip to Leavenworth prison scheduled as his next move.

RAISING A CHIMPANZEE AS A HUMAN BEING

Prof. W. N. Kellogg's Unique Experiment in Which a Baby Ape Was Given the Same Treatment As His Infant Son—And Its Provocative Results.



A study in facial expressions after both the chimpanzee and the child had been stimulated by new tasks.

Gua, the Chimpanzee, and Donald Kellogg.

By KEITH KERMAN

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff.

Prof. W. N. Kellogg.

ANTHROPOLOGISTS and psychologists have speculated for a long time as to just how "human" a chimpanzee can become. Physically, this tailless ape is generally considered about the closest thing to man in the animal world, but what its mental capabilities are as compared with man's—to what extent it is capable of behaving like a human being—has been an unsettled question.

An answer to this question—at least a partial answer—is now available as a result of one of the strangest and most interesting scientific experiments ever carried out. So far as is known, the experiment was unique. W. N. Kellogg, associate professor of psychology at Indiana University, and his wife, L. A. Kellogg, borrowed a baby chimpanzee from the Anthropoid Experiment Station of Yale University, at Orange Park, Florida, and for nine months kept it in their home there as a member of the family. It was the playmate of their baby son, and was given, as nearly as possible, the same care, the same training, the same affection they gave the boy. It was treated not as a pet but as a human child. An account of the experiment, telling how the animal responded to its environment and how its development compared with that of their son, is given by Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg in "The Ape and the Child," just published by Whittlesey House of the McGraw-Hill Book Company, New York.

A female chimpanzee named Gua was selected for study. She had been born in captivity, and at the time she entered the Kellogg household was 7 1-2 months old. Kellogg's son, Donald, was 10 months old. Gua was 22.6 inches tall and weighed 9.8 pounds, while Donald's height was 26.6 inches and his weight was 19.5 pounds. But the ape was much stronger than the child; when she was 8 months old she could chin herself with one hand. And she grew faster than Donald, her height increasing 17 per cent and her weight 89 per cent during the period of the research, while the boy gained only 10 per cent and 19 per cent, respectively, in these measurements. The circumference of her head was only about two-thirds that of the boy's, but it increased slightly more than his did in the nine months. Gua gained in size faster than Donald because apes mature faster than human beings.

A few days after Gua joined the Kelloggs she seemed to become reconciled to separation from her mother and was introduced to the sort of life she was to lead for 38 weeks. She was dressed, like Donald, in diaper, rompers and shoes. She ate her meals in a high chair, took rides in perambulator and automobile, played, took part in tests of various kinds, received a daily bath, took afternoon naps and was put to bed in her crib at 6:30.

Gua and Donald out for a stroll.

The ape and the child "took to" each other quickly. The second time they were brought together Gua kissed Donald, and, while startled, he didn't seem to mind. The next time they were close to each other they held hands and the boy pulled the chimpanzee's hair. A few days later Gua touched his face and hands and kissed him, and the boy laughed. Before long they were playing and romping together and were as inseparable as circumstances permitted

THERE appeared to grow up a strong bond of affection between the boy and the ape. Gua often would try to follow when Donald was taken out of the room. Sometimes she would lie on the floor outside and try to peek under the door while waiting for him to awaken from his nap. Often she would climb in his lap. Once, at a sudden startling noise, she ran to Donald and threw her arms around him, crying. The boy began to call her by name soon after their association began. Frequently he would cry when she did. Sometimes when Gua was punished by being made to stay on a chair, Donald would toddle up to her and hug her, and she would put her head on his shoulder and her arms around him. In time it became Donald's custom to go to Gua as soon as he was dressed in the morning and give her a hug. The ape came to assume a protective attitude toward the child; she would take his hand when they were walking together, and run to him if he cried.

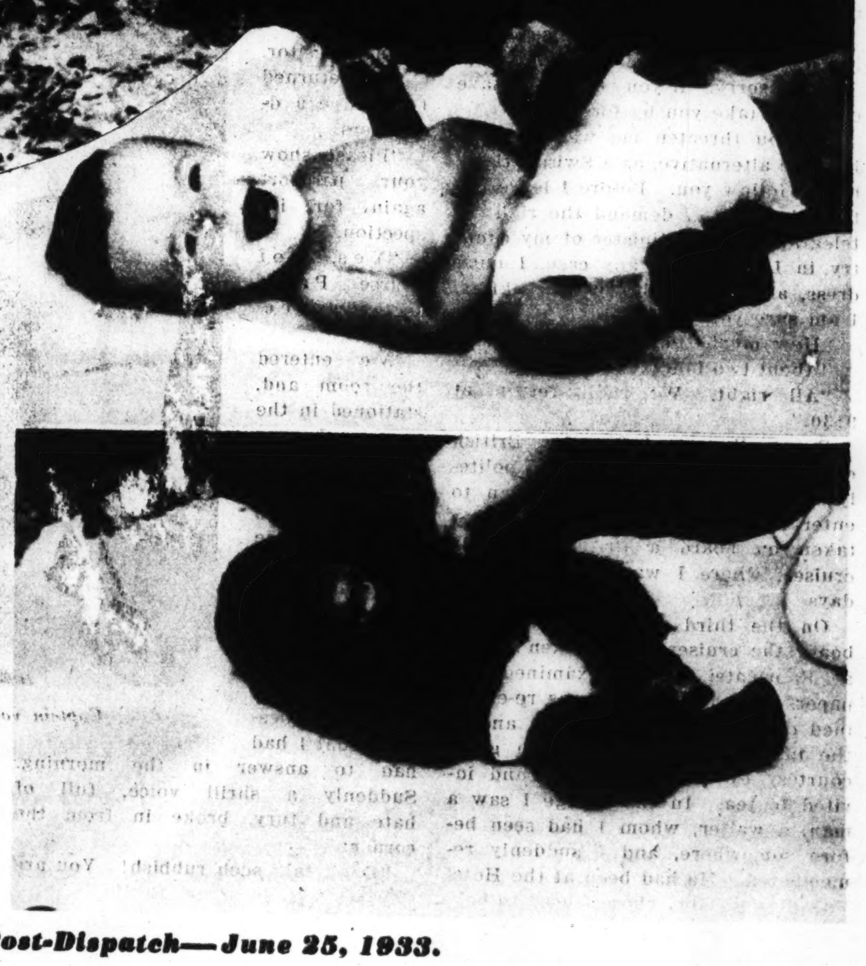
Sometimes the playmates would take toys away from each other, but, say the authors, "neither of the subjects exhibited any behavior which could properly be considered hostile or resentful towards the other."

With other children Gua was not so friendly. Youngsters were inclined to point their fingers at her and laugh at her, and she apparently resented it, for she would rush at them and slap them on the legs. However, toward one little girl and a boy of 8, who treated her well, she was amiable and companionable. The ape and Donald really didn't have much association with other children.

With strange adults, Gua was shy. She would shake hands, after a fashion, with a new acquaintance, if ordered to do so, but she was slow to accept one as a friend. She made friends more readily with women than with men.

The chimpanzee's strongest devotion seemed to be given to Kellogg. For the first month of her new life she clung to him at every opportunity, and when he was absent would drag around with her some article of his clothing. If Mrs. Kellogg would pretend to threaten her husband, the ape would rush to defend him. But she would defend Mrs. Kellogg against others.

Gua was a tough little creature. She would fall on her head without apparently hurting herself, and even seemed to enjoy diving from a chair to the floor. Even when she received bruises and cuts that must have hurt she didn't cry. Sometimes she would run after Kellogg and tackle him around the legs like a football player. When she was a year old, it was recorded that she seemed to possess "the learning and mental capacity of a year-old child, the agility of a 4-year-old, and strength which in some ways probably surpasses that of an 8-year-old."



How Gua and Donald reacted to being tickled.

The two babies of the Kellogg household followed a daily schedule. They would get up at 7 in the morning, eat breakfast in their high chairs at 7:30, and remain in their chairs while the grownups breakfasted. During the forenoon there was often a ride in the perambulator before Donald had learned to walk, or there might be an automobile ride. There were measurements, tests of various kinds, and play. After lunch they took a nap. Gua didn't sleep as long as Donald, and played until Donald awakened. Then they were bathed. At 3 o'clock they were given milk. For the rest of the afternoon they played or took part in tests or were photographed. Supper was at 6 and at 6:30 then were put to bed.

GUA ate about as much as a healthy child of her own size, slightly less than Donald. A short time after the experiment started she was eating the same kind of food the boy ate, with the addition of a little lettuce, celery and raw cabbage. Milk, fruit and cereal were prominent in their diet. Sometimes both had to be tricked into eating certain things. Attempts to force Gua to eat food she disliked or starve her into doing it were entirely unsuccessful. The ape as well as the boy had to take cod liver oil.

For a time Gua supplemented her diet by "piecing" on insects she was able to catch. But the Kelloggs persistently discouraged this practice, and by the time she was a year old she had apparently abandoned it. She didn't seem to care for meat.

Gua had a mighty thirst. She frequently stood under water faucets to catch any drops that might fall, and she discovered several water taps on the premises that the occupants didn't know existed. But she only once succeeded in turning on a faucet, and this, presumably, was an accident.

THE DARK INVADER
SAILS INTO THE BRITISH TRAP

A Waiter With a Memory — Scotland Yard — The Man Who Knew Everything — Why Von Rintelen Was Ordered Home — Solving the Mystery of Von Spee's Defeat.

This is the fourth of a series, which appears weekly in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, telling the inside story of and by Captain von Rintelen, Germany's master spy and chief agent of destruction in America during the great war.

In the preceding installments "The Dark Invader" told how the cautious Admiral Spee steamed to the well-protected Falkland Islands and was sunk by a superior British fleet, as might have been expected, and the mystery at the German Admiralty as to why Von Spee should have taken so imprudent a course; how the Germans feared that superior American ammunition, sold to the Allies when the Central Powers were ammunition poor, would cause their defeat; and how Von Rintelen secretly was ordered from his post at the Berlin Admiralty to the United States to stop the ammunition shipments in any way he could, regardless of American law or international agreements.

Von Rintelen, armed with a counterfeit Swiss passport bearing the name of E. V. Gache, arrives in New York in March, 1915, with copies of the new "most secret code" for the German embassy, for Captain Boy-Ed, German naval attache, and Captain von Papen, German military attache. Von Rintelen finds he can expect no aid in his sinister work of destruction from the attaches, for they are annoyed at what they apparently feel is his intrusion, and Von Papen already has proved himself clumsy and incompetent. Now a German chemist invents a small incendiary bomb about as big as a cigar, and with the aid of German seamen and Irish dock workers, these "cigars" are placed in the holds of ships bearing supplies and ammunition to the Allies. Once the ships are at sea the bombs do their work and the ships burn. Next Von Rintelen conspires with Victoriano Huerta, deposed President of Mexico, who is living in New York. Von Rintelen promises to supply Huerta with funds to stage a counter-revolution, and if the plot is successful, Huerta agrees, with German aid, to declare war on the United States. But Huerta returns to the border and one of Von Rintelen's agents reports that Huerta has been poisoned and is dead. Then Von Rintelen receives a cablegram ordering him to return to Germany. He is astounded, for he has many irons in the fire and much important work is unfinished. But he prepares to obey the command.

By CAPTAIN FRANZ RINTELEN VON KLEIST

Of the Imperial German Navy

I AGAIN became E. V. Gache, from Solothurn, and booked a passage on the Noordam of the Holland-American Line.

I went on board full of despair at the thought of the work I had left unfinished; and as we left New York harbor in the evening twilight I tortured myself with the mystery of the telegram which had ordered me to return.

But the good ship Noordam plowed her way, and at last the chalk cliffs England lay to port. I gazed at them with mixed feelings. It took a whole day to pass them, and I found necessary to visit the bar at intervals to fortify myself. The chalk cliffs still lay on our left, when, early in the morning, at 7 o'clock on Friday, August 13, as I was lying in my bath, a steward knocked at the door and

This was the darkest moment of my life.

Nobody who had done what I considered it my duty to do in America, and was in possession of a forged passport, would have been anxious to converse with British officers opposite the white cliffs of England. Certainly not before breakfast. But I had no alternative. I put my head outside and listened. The officers were not inspecting the other passengers, but had inquired exclusively for me, and I can truthfully say that it made an impression on me. I had an immediate intuition that I was discovered, and the only thing that could help me now was bluff.

I went on deck in my bathrobe and found two officers and 10 sailors with fixed bayonets waiting for me.

"You are Mr. Gache?"

"Yes. What can I do for you?"

"We have orders to take you with us."

"I have no intention of disembarking here. I am going to Rotterdam."

"I am sorry. If you refuse, we have orders to take you by force."

"If you threaten me with force, I have no alternative, as a Swiss citizen, but to follow you. Before I leave the boat, however, I demand the right to telegraph to the Minister of my country in London. In any case, I must dress, and, above all, have breakfast. I am sure you will agree."

"How much time do you need?"

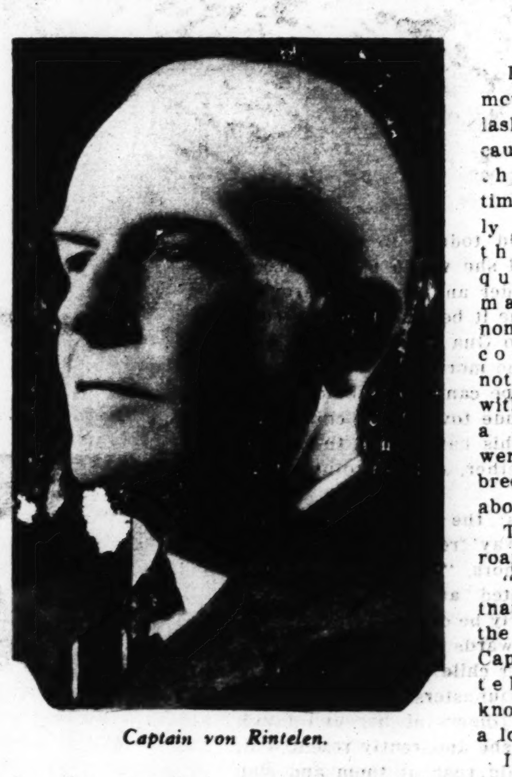
"About two hours."

"All right. We shall return at 9:30."

Punctually at 9:30 the British escort came on board again and politely requested the Swiss gentleman to enter a steam pinnace. I was then taken on board a British auxiliary cruiser, where I was kept for three days.

On the third day of my stay on board the cruiser I was taken ashore at Ramsgate. I was examined, my papers were inspected. I was re-examined once more and inspected, and in the interval I was taken with great courtesy by car to an hotel and invited to tea. In the lounge I saw a man, a waiter, whom I had seen before somewhere, and I suddenly remembered. He had been at the Hotel Bristol in Berlin, where I used to be a frequent visitor.

Admiral Sir Reginald Hall.



Captain von Rintelen.

We returned to headquarters.

"Please show your passport again for inspection."

"Yes, of course. Passport inspection."

We entered the room and, stationed in the corner, I saw the waiter from the Bristol. I told myself to keep cool. The officer in charge, the Rt. Hon. Dudley Ward, M. P., a very eminent man, put to me the same questions that I had had to answer in the morning. Suddenly a shrill voice, full of hate and fury, broke in from the corner:

"Don't talk such rubbish! You are Captain Rintelen from Berlin."

I did not move an eyelash, for I had caught sight of the man in time, but calmly replied to the officer's question. A man talking nonsense in the corner had nothing to do with me. It was a pity there were such ill-bred people about.

The man roared again:

"You stop that! You are the German Captain Rintelen. I've known you for a long time."

It would have been suspicious if I had continued to take no notice.

I turned to the waiter.

Then I said: "There are always ill-bred people in this world who insist on interfering with bona fide travelers."

The officer motioned the waiter, who was a Belgian, out of the room with an impatient gesture, then went to the telephone and reported that a mistake seemed to have been made. To my astonishment and my boundless joy, I was allowed to return to the Noordam. The Fatherland beckoned.

As the pinnace approached the ship the British officer stationed on it called through his megaphone:

"Turn back!"

When I was on shore again I was taken by train, under the escort of a detective and a naval officer, to London, where, to my amazement, I was driven to Scotland Yard. The storm was about to burst.

We entered a building like a castle, and crossed a courtyard to a mighty curved staircase. Through broad corridors instilling an atmosphere of peaceful dignity we came to a door which opened suddenly and admitted us to a room occupied by a group of naval officers in gold-encrusted uniforms. It was not long before I learned that two of them, who wore the aiguillettes of royal aides-de-camp, were Admiral Sir Reginald Hall, the chief of the British Naval Intelligence Service, and his right-hand man, Lord Herschell. To the left of the fireplace stood a heavy table, behind which sat the chief of the C. I. D., Sir Basil Thomson, wearing horn-rimmed spectacles.

This pleasant gathering in my honor offered exciting prospects. They all sat there and bored me through with malevolent eyes. Admiral Hall stood up.

"Do you know a Captain Rintelen?"

"I am not obliged to answer you."

Sir Basil Thomson: "You apparently do not know where you are!"

"WHEREVER I am, I have been brought by force. I have no business here and I shall not reply to any questions until I have spoken with the Minister of my country. Or am I, perhaps, to be charged with a crime?"

Sir Basil Thomson: "You are a German and have to explain why you are on English soil."

"I did not land on English soil of my own free will. I was brought here by force, in violation of all justice."

My reply caused a great uproar. Hall and Thomson grew irritated, while I pretended to get angry and, keeping faithfully to my role, began to shout that I protested against the whole proceedings and demanded to be taken to the Swiss Minister. I insisted on this right, until they actually became uncertain of their case.

The meeting broke up, and I was informed that I should be escorted at once to the Swiss legation. The Minister was M. Gaston Carlin, a dignified old gentleman.

"Now, tell me," he said, "what this is all about. What do the English want with you? I have heard from my office that your passports and military papers are in order, but the English maintain obstinately that you are the German Captain Rintelen. Can you explain how they conceived the idea?"

I decided to risk a great bluff.

"I can disclose it to you, Your Excellency," I said. "Captain Rintelen really was on the boat, but the British have got hold of the wrong man. The Noordam, as I have read in the Times, has already reached Rotterdam, and the German officer, whom I did not want to betray to the English, is far away by now. You see, Your Excellency, my sympathies are with Germany. I spent my boyhood there, and you will remember that my father was Swiss Consul at Leipzig."

"Oh, yes! I remember your father. Your attitude has been quite correct."

He came from behind his desk and stretched out his hand.

"Accept my thanks for your truly neutral conduct."

HE TELEPHONED in my presence to the Admiralty and communicated the disconcerting solution of the mystery, after which my escort took me back to Admiral Hall. Everybody was foaming with rage at having let the German Captain slip through their hands, but the Admiral, who alone remained perfectly calm, came up to me and said:

"So you are not Rintelen?"

Nevertheless, I was not immediately set at liberty. I was to be kept in custody until the evening of the following day, and should then be allowed to resume my journey. Two "adjutants" were attached to me, a naval commander and a detective, and I took up my quarters at the Hotel Cecil. I felt that the battle was won, and ordered a drink. Nothing could happen to me, and I only had to wait for the settling of a few formalities. I began to wonder how soon I could be in Berlin.

My two companions sat in the adjoining room, with the communicating door ajar, so that they might keep an eye on me and see that I did not escape. I walked to and fro and heard them conversing. Suddenly a remark was dropped which made me prick up my ears and listen intently:

". . . a special inquiry in Berne by the British legation?"

"Yes. It isn't merely a consular matter. Admiral Hall has specially asked the legation to find out whether it is possible that Emile Gache is now in London."

I had heard enough to know that my position was serious, that I had lost the fight, when a minute before I had been convinced that I had won. The legation in Berne was bound to discover that the real Emile Gache was in Switzerland. When the English knew that, I should be in a hole.

I reasoned as follows: When the answer arrived from Berne, I should

A Thousand Dollars a Day Was Nellie Carter's Spending Money

BOSTON.

WHEN Nellie Parney Carter, a spinster of 70 and the richest woman in this staid old capital of Puritanism, departed from the earthly scene a few months ago, the spotlight of publicity, which she had so long and rigidly shunned, was turned upon her private life.

And the revelations concerning that private life jolted many Bostonians, especially those listed in the Social Register and the Blue Book of Yankeedom. They all more or less knew that she lived in secluded luxury and was a liberal spender, and given to fine raiment and rare jewels. But few were aware that the last 25 years of her life had been devoted to making the high rollers of other days, such as "Diamond Jim" Brady, "Bet-a-Million" Gates and "Jimmy" Corrigan, look like a lot of pikers.

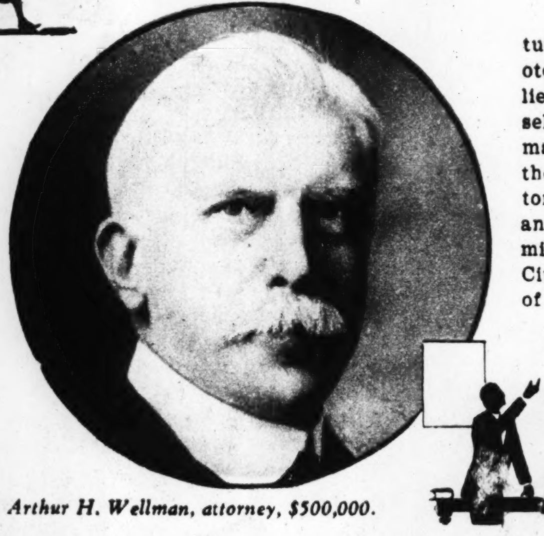
Notwithstanding that for nearly half a century she had occupied vast and luxuriously appointed suites in Boston's best hotels, Miss Carter managed to keep her private life a well-guarded secret. All that was known about her was that she had inherited a tremendous fortune in Standard Oil securities from her father, Charles M. Carter, a shrewd, close-fisted, bargaining Yankee of East Boston.

Of course, it was the last will and testament of the cash-squandering old spinster that caused the Beaconese of the Hill and the Brahmins of Louisburg Square to elevate their brows in pained surprise. The document proved to be a distinct disappointment for an army of expectant relatives, though it heaped riches on domestic servants, chauffeurs, maids, shop girls, secretaries and others with whom the deceased enjoyed only the slightest acquaintance.

But what really upset the calm of those who fared not so well under the terms of the will was the provision that if any legatee should question the document or object to its probate, his or her legacy should be considered as revoked.

And as for those cousins, not mentioned in the will at all, who might be inclined to attack the document on the grounds of the testator's mental incompetency, or as a victim of undue influence by any of the beneficiaries, Miss Carter left as a remembrance reports of a series of medical examinations attesting her sanity at the time of making the will and during the latter days of her life.

Miss Carter also left a record of the many substantial gifts she had bestowed on her relatives during her lifetime. All letters requesting financial aid were neatly catalogued and indexed. In those cases where help was extended she attached the canceled check to the begging missive. In fact, these dossiers of charity have proved a checkmate to quite a few of the disappointed relations.



Arthur H. Wellman, attorney, $500,000.

Though Miss Carter for years paid the largest personal tax of any man or woman in Boston, she was almost an unknown to the people of this city. In 1915 she paid a tax of $42,586 on $2,433,500, with a sister paying an equally large amount on her share of the Carter estate. With the introduction of the State income tax, the wealthy spinster has been fourth on the list of taxpayers for Boston.

At the time of her death she was rated as worth about $5,000,000, her fortune having undergone quite a depreciation since 1929. In 1928 her wealth was estimated at $11,000,000.

THE Carter fortune is of fairly recent origin. Its foundation was a deal in oil. It was during the late '80s and the early '90s, when Standard Oil of New York was beginning its drive for control of the New England market that the Rockefeller organization found itself blocked by the Maverick Oil Company of East Boston. It was owned, lock, stock and barrel, by Charles M. Carter. Though the East Boston oil concern was a comparatively small affair, it enjoyed valuable strategic rights in the distribution of its products. It had tied railroads, steamship lines and municipalities up in all sorts of contracts, as regarded shipping facilities and wharf rights.

It seemed that every time the Standard Oil of New York determined upon a location for a storage tank, pumping station or dock facilities, the Standard would encounter a snag in the form of the Maverick Oil Company. At the time the Oil Trust was not eager for a fight with the Boston oil magnate, having then on its hands quite enough troubles with the Legislatures of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois. After a lot of quibbling and parleying, the oil company of Carter was taken over by the Rockefellers. The Boston Yankee had driven a hard bargain with the Standard Oil, so hard that the Standard Oil official who handled the negotiations for the deal branded Carter a "heartless financial pirate." The owner of the Maverick organization got $7,000,000 in Standard Oil stock for retiring from the field. In its best-paying days, the Carter company was not worth over $800,000.

Such was the foundation of the fortune which, with all her riotous extravagance, Miss Nellie Parney Carter found herself unable to exhaust. For many years she had lived in the Hotel Touraine, once Boston's most elegant hostelry, and the rendezvous for the millionaires of New York City. But one day an official of that well-known hostelry gave out information that Miss Carter was a guest at the place, as a result of which she moved to the Copley Plaza Hotel.

But as her dear old friend, the late Chauncey M. Depew, of New York Central fame, never stopped anywhere else but the Hotel Touraine, Miss Carter flounced back to her old lodgings, where she was to remain until about two years ago, when she moved to the Ritz Carlton Hotel.

For 35 years Nellie Carter has been occupying palatial suites in Boston hotels. Yet in all that time the public knew hardly a thing about her, but in the hotel world she was, indeed, a figure of note.

The rent for her rooms, in which she lived all alone, was approximately $50 per day, or $350 per week. Her suite at the Ritz was the last thing in luxurious appointment.

One room of the suite was furnished in a Japanese motif, the decorations supplied by the House of Duveen. The walls were lined with rare original etchings by noted Japanese artists. The art treasures in this one room were estimated as being worth close to $60,000.

Joseph D. Leland III, a friend, $200,000.

Miss Carter always dined alone, in the dining room of this most amazing of hotel suites. A waiter of the hotel staff brought her dinner as she ordered it. And when the dinner was over the waiter was invariably rewarded with a $20 bill as a tip! She never missed that tip. Twenty dollars for the waiter, seven nights a week—meaning $140 a week for food tips alone.

Bellboys in the hotels where she lived fared equally well. Whenever any bellboy went to her room on an errand of any kind he received a $5 bill for his tip. If she called for her mail, and the boy brought her up one letter, he got $5. It was always, and invariably, the same. The amount she gave to bellboys in this way during the course of a week probably amounted to between $100 and $300.

Though there had been quite a slump in her income since the fateful days of 1929, there was no let up in her spending, for she did not decrease the size or frequency of her tips.

While living at the Hotel Touraine she sent to the bank every day for $1000 in brand new bills. Money, in large bills, laid around her suite in careless profusion.

AT CHRISTMAS time she gave presents in gold to every hotel employe, from the lowliest kitchen worker to the topnotchers on the payroll. No gift was less than $10. One Christmas she distributed $9894 to the employes of the Touraine.

It was when the will of Miss Carter was filed for probate in Suffolk County Court at Boston that the spinster was revealed as a female Santa Claus. A maid and a chauffeur get $100,000 apiece; the members of a single wealthy family of her friends get a total of $1,000,000, and her next of kin get only $5000 each.

The chauffeur, who has driven Miss Carter's expensive cars for the past 25 years, is Paul E. Roy. The maid is Mrs. Barbara Tris. The family receiving the staggering total of $1,000,000 is that of Joseph D. Leland III, prominent Boston architect and social registerite.

Paul E. Roy, chauffeur, $100,000.

Leland, himself a millionaire, gets $200,000; Miss Elizabeth Carter Leland, who was named for the late sister of the benefactor, gets another $200,000. His wife, who was the Countess de Deons de Pierrefeu, before marrying him, also gets $200,000.

The four children of the ex-Countess by her marriage into the French nobility each get $100,000, making a total of $1,000,000 to the family.

A son, born to Mrs. Leland since her marriage to Leland, gets $10,000.

The largest individual bequest goes to Miss Carter's lawyer, Arthur H. Wellman of the firm of Wellman & Wellman, who gets $500,000. Wellman has handled the legal affairs of Miss Carter for the last 30 years.

Wellman's son, Sargent H. Wellman, is also handsomely remembered with $100,000.

Miss Mary MacFarlane, secretary-stenographer in the law firm of Wellman & Wellman, who did a great deal of clerical work for the spinster, is a beneficiary under the will in the sum of $150,000.

Lieutenant James Trimble Brown, junior aide to General Fox Conner, the commander of the First Corps Army Area, who was Miss Carter's theater escort at first nights for the past four years, gets a gift of $100,000.

One woman, Mrs. Cora Lee Webber, who was related to the benefactor by marriage, got a gift of $100,000; Miss Stella Jones Webber got a like amount, as did Mrs. Constance W. Pike.

Another gift of $100,000 goes to Mrs. Amelia E. Frizzell, who had acted as a sort of companion to Miss Carter.

One of the persons to whom the spinster had taken a fancy was a former errand girl at Mme. Driscoll's gown shop, Mrs. Elizabeth Cunningham Riley, as a result of which the latter gets $10,000.

Mrs. Barbara Tris, maid, $100,000.

The heirs at large and next-of-kin of the spinster, totaling 10 in number and described as first cousins, are to receive $5000 each under the terms of the will.

A number of charities, several of which received money from her during her lifetime, got large gifts under the will. In the list of public bequests Boston hospitals and Harvard University figure most prominently.

The maid and the chauffeur, who spent the better part of their lifetimes in the service of Miss Carter, each of whom get $100,000, told this writer that they were surprised at the amount of their bequests. They said that in her lifetime their employer had been more than kind and generous to them.

Mrs. Tris, the maid is 64. She entered the spinster's service at the age of 18.

Roy, the chauffeur, entered Miss Carter's service when he was 25 years old. He is now 47.

GEORGE C. CARTER, unemployed shoe cutter, of Haverhill, one of the cousins left $5000, declared that his cousin, "Miss Nellie had a right to leave her money to whom she pleased.

"After all," he continued, "it was her money, and she had a right to do as she liked with it, burn it up, give it to the bellboys, waiters, escorts, and so on.

"But there's one thing that riles me and that is all this paper talk about her being so good and kind to her poor relatives. To my knowledge Miss Nellie never spent a nickel on any member of the Carter family."

Although there are mutterings of protest on the part of some of the 10 cousins, each of whose legacy is but $5000, as to the validity of the will, they are reluctant to take such an issue to court, as failure of their plea would prove defeat from a financial standpoint.

Some of the second cousins, however, are threatening to upset the will on allegations of unsound mind of the testator and of undue influence.

THE BIG WAR in the FAR EAST —OVER DANCING

Conservatives in Both Japan and China Dismayed at the Inroads of Taxi Dance Halls and High-Kicking Choruses.

CHINA and Japan have another war on their hands, but in this one they are allies and face a common enemy. The common enemy is dancing—the Western world's kind of dancing, jazz, whoopee-making, hotcha. The older generation, and therefore the Government, thinks it is frivolous, shocking, insane and a menace to patriotism. The younger generation thinks it is fun and has nothing to do with patriotism. So there they have material for a bitter conflict and the din of battle is becoming terrific. The youngsters probably will win in the end, as they usually do in wars between the old and the new, but it can't be said that the old folks are not putting up a fight. And right now they seem to hold a temporary advantage.

The National Government of China has just scored a local victory by putting a ban on all dancing in Nanking, the present national capital. Western dancing is bad enough under any circumstances, says the Government, but in this period of grave danger it is unthinkable. So dance halls are closed and sing-song girls don't dare show their faces. Meanwhile, across the Yellow Sea, the Japanese authorities are waging a similar war with their young folk.

For dancing is regarded as a new and strange evil in the Orient, where, for 4000 years, women either have stayed at home, like good wives and daughters that they were, or have been licensed public entertainers, who had no homes.

The idea of a debutante daughter of a wealthy family jazzing about with her boy friends, or of a respectable daughter of a poor family earning an honest living as a taxi-dancer, is incomprehensible to the older generations in China and Japan.

One reason why these dancing daughters seem so strange to their parents is that the older people do not expect girls to be girls. On the contrary, they have been educated to believe that girls should be like Mei Lanfang, the famous Chinese actor, whose impersonations of female roles are lovelier than life itself.

Women, until very recently, never have been permitted on the stage in either China or Japan. Instead of movie actresses to set a standard of girlish charms, graceful men with falsetto voices have thrilled audiences into believing that women should be as artificial as they themselves.

The geisha and sing-song girls, whose stilted performances traditionally grace every banquet in the Orient, are taught to wail and posture in the fashion set by these female impersonators of the stage.

Even when actresses finally were permitted to appear a few years ago in some theaters, they merely imitated their male predecessors, thus presenting female imitations of male imitations of females. It was not until the movies became popular that Chinese and Japanese actresses began to give realistic versions of their own selves instead of copying the gestures of Mei Lan-fang and his classic school.

About the same time that foreign movies introduced new notions of femininity to Asia, there happened also a sudden immigration of Russian cabaret performers.

Fleeing from the Bolshevik revolution in their own land, pretty Russian girls escaped over the snowy fields of Siberia and drifted down to Shanghai, where the only livelihood open to them at the moment was to work in the cosmopolitan restaurants of this great seaport.

Those lucky refugees who had been trained to sing or dance, did so. The best known of these Russian girls who became cabaret entertainers in Shanghai is Lyda Roberti, now favorite of Broadway and Hollywood.

But for one Lyda Roberti, there were 1000 other Russian girls, equally hungry and destitute, but without Lyda's abilities. These girls could not sing or act or dance on their toes.

It seemed, at first, as though they must starve—until someone discovered that there were a lot of lonely bachelors in Shanghai who would rather dance with an ordinary girl than watch the most graceful of Pavlovas dance by herself.

RUSSIAN dancing partners answered this need and, overnight, a flock of Siberian peasant girls were transformed into taxi dancers.

For several years they held a monopoly in the dance halls in all the big cities of China. They collected enough dance tickets not only to support themselves, but also to educate their younger sisters so that, when the time came for these girls to earn their own livings, they became stenographers instead of taxi-dancers.

The older girls married the men they met in the dance halls, and there was no one to take their places.

Simultaneously, however, a new generation of Chinese girls had grown up and, for the first time in history, these girls did not have bound feet. Moreover, they had been watching dance scenes in the movies and, in the cloistered courtyards of their own homes, they had practiced dance steps to the tunes of imported phonographs.

Some daring innovator engaged a group of these new-fashioned Chinese girls to succeed the Russians, and their success was instantaneous.

While the Chinese taxi-dancer was being evolved thus in Shanghai, a new type of dancing girl also was appearing in Japan.

The inspiration there came not from Russian exiles but from the Japanese cafe owners themselves. One astute restaurant owner figured out that if he hired waitresses instead of waiters, he not only could pay them less wages, but that the pretty novelty might even attract more customers.

It soon was evident that there was a greater demand in Japan for waitresses than for food and drink. Hundreds of tiny cafes opened in every town in Japan. Their food was negligible and their drinks were poor and expensive, but the little waitresses, with the manners of movie queens, were attraction enough.

Some of the cafes installed phonographs or radios. It was only natural to shove the chairs out of the way and for the patrons to practice a few dance steps with the waitresses. Before the startled Police Department realized it, Japan found itself covered with a rash of dance halls.

A Japanese taxi-dancer whose press agent functioned in the American style by announcing that she had insured her legs for 10,000 yen.

This jolly state of affairs stirred the geisha guilds of Japan to strong action. The geisha girls, who had suffered long years of training to learn the exacting etiquette, the polite repartee, the difficult dances, the innumerable songs and the samisen music required by their profession, saw their life work put to naught by untaught cafe waitresses.

Their former admirers, instead of sitting with folded knees on the clean rice-straw mats of their tea houses, were thronging the Bohemian cafes and learning to fox-trot.

The giesha guild of Osaka first called upon the Chamber of Commerce of that great manufacturing city and demanded that the unlicensed competitors of their own time-honored profession be suppressed.

The Osaka geisha have an old and powerful organization and the Chief of Police agreed to close the dance halls on the ground that they were corrupt and debasing to the youth of Japan.

An attempt was made also to close the cafes, but the restaurant owners and the waitresses co-operated in a counter-attack. The cafe managers challenged the geisha guild to prove that their establishments were improper, and the 30,000 waitresses organized an association of their own to refute the charge that they were immoral.

The battle in Osaka was watched with great interest by the geisha guilds elsewhere throughout Japan and, as it appeared that the waitresses had come to stay and that there was a public demand for the dance halls as well, the Tokio geisha announced that they were adding the rumba, the saxophone and the tap-dance to their traditional repertoire.

Today most of the larger geisha houses in Japan have installed polished dance floors and a phonograph, and a few even have orchestras in their fight for patronage.

The sing-song girls of China, who, like the Japanese geisha, are artificial products of long years of training, find today that their popularity also is fast waning.

In such southern cities as Canton, where the hot climate tends to dissuade patrons from desiring to dance themselves, the sing-song girls still are in demand as entertainers on the flower boats. These gaily decorated barges float about the river every night with cargoes of sing-song girls who still maintain the customs of old China.

But elsewhere, even within the ancient walled city of Peiping, the modern night club, with its array of dancing "hostesses," has left the sing-song girls forlorn. Even Chinese officials and military officers are eagerly learning the western dances in those cities where "night clubs" still are permitted to operate, but lately nearly all such dancing establishments in China have been forced to close.

A recent petition sent to Nanking by the powerful Hopei provincial branch of the Kuomintang, ruling political party in China, declared: "At the present time, when the country is beset with calamities, both natural and man-made, no Chinese should indulge in the licentious pleasures of dancing."

The order padlocking most of the dance halls in China followed soon after the patriotic appeal was broadcast.

IN JAPAN the classic drama has so dwindled in appeal that even the great Imperial Theater of Tokio, dedicated to such plays, has been turned into a home for the talkies and musical shows. The company which puts on these performances consists entirely of girls who are trained, not in the stiff dances of the geisha, but in high-kicking steps copied from Broadway.

A similar all-girl opera troupe owns its own big theater near Osaka, where, with a change of program every month, modern song and dance acts are performed the year around to a packed house.

Well-to-do Chinese girls have become as enthusiastic about dancing as their brothers. Many of them secretly visit the cabarets of Hankow and Shanghai to take dancing lessons from paid partners. This situation, as well as the grave military crisis in China, has been responsible for the ill-repute of dance halls in China.

SHERLOCK COMBS ON THE JOB

This is a game that can be played by any child. All that is needed are scissors, paste and some cardboard. The directions for playing "Toy Talkies" are given at the bottom of the game.

THE PLAYERS

SHERLOCK COMBS—A great bumblebee detective.
BILL BUMBLEBEE—A honey hoarder.
GENERAL STINGER—Head of the bumblebee army.
POLLEN—Another honey hoarder.

(Bill Bumblebee enters.)

BILL BUMBLEBEE—Gosh, what will I do? Those Bear twins are following me. They want to find out where we store our honey, so they can steal it. I know what I'll do. (He leaves and Eddie and Teddy enter.)

EDDIE—He was here a moment ago. I wonder where he went?

TEDDY—Let's hunt for him. (They leave and Bill Bumblebee and Sherlock Combs enter.)

BILL BUMBLEBEE—They were following me. So I did not go straight home.

SHERLOCK COMBS—Splendid, Bill. Now if the others do the same, the Bears might not be able to find our residence. You'd better leave. (Bill Bumblebee leaves and Eddie and Teddy enter.)

EDDIE—I'm sure I saw him again. I wonder if that old tree is his home.

TEDDY—We will have to see one of the Bumblebees go in before we can be sure. (They leave and Pollen enters.)

SHERLOCK COMBS—P-s-s-t. (Then, in a hushed voice.) Pollen, Pollen.

POLLEN—What's that? I thought I heard someone calling me. I guess I'm just hearing things. (He leaves. Sherlock Combs whistles and General Stinger enters.)

SHERLOCK COMBS—Don't allow Pollen to go home.

GENERAL STINGER—Yes, sir. (He leaves.)

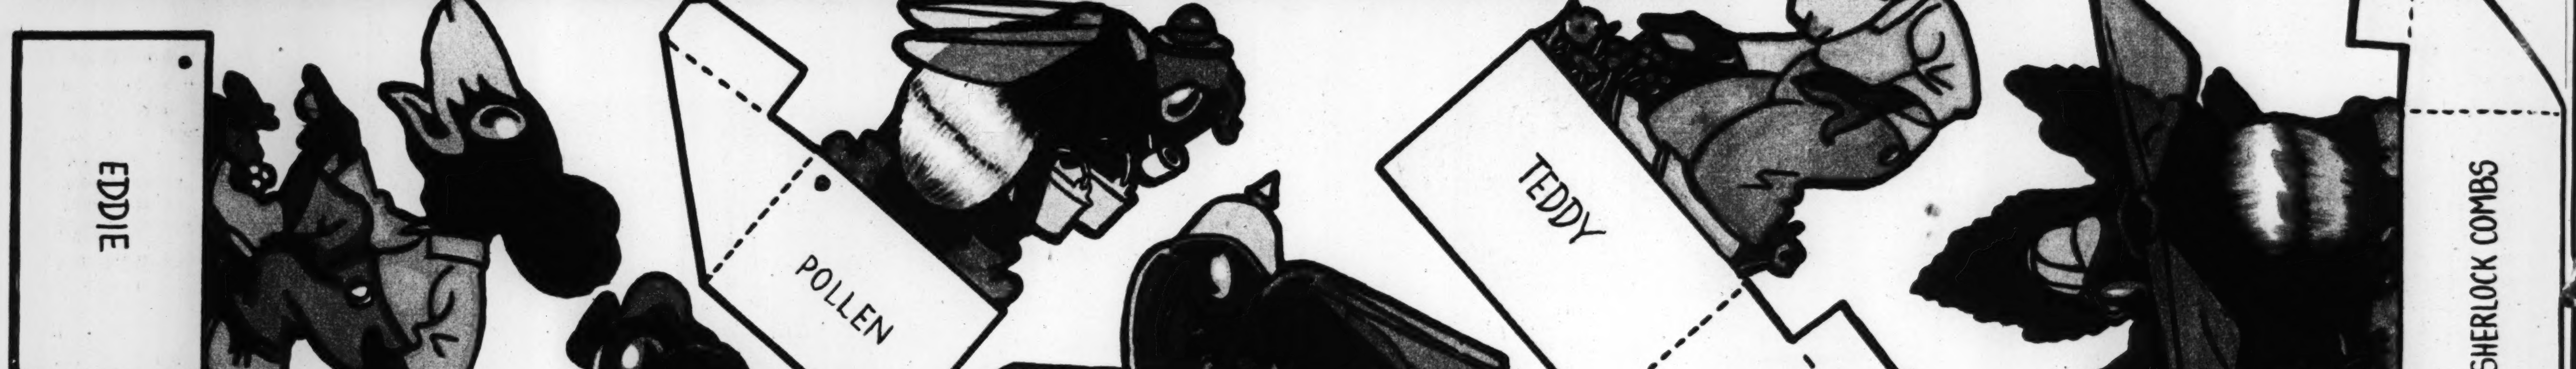
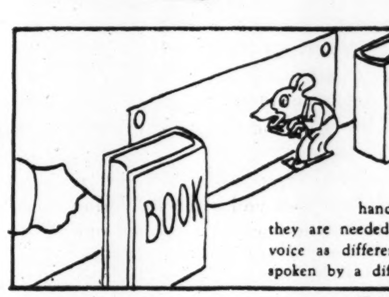
SHERLOCK COMBS—So far, so good. The Bears suspect that tree is our home, but they won't go in unless they are sure. It is my plan to see that no Bumblebee, or Bear for that matter, enters that tree, and they won't as long as Sherlock Combs is on the job.

THE END.





DIRECTIONS: Cut out back-drop and pin it on a wall near the floor. Next, take two books and stand them at each end and about 5 inches in front of back-drop. Then take characters, cut them out, and paste them on thin cardboard, folding flap at bottom so they will lean back a little. Attach a piece of thread about 15 inches long. Place the characters back of the book on the right-hand side of the stage and draw them on the stage with thread as they are needed. The operator may talk for the characters, changing his or her voice as different characters go on the stage, or each character's part may be spoken by a different child. A flashlight can be used as a spotlight.

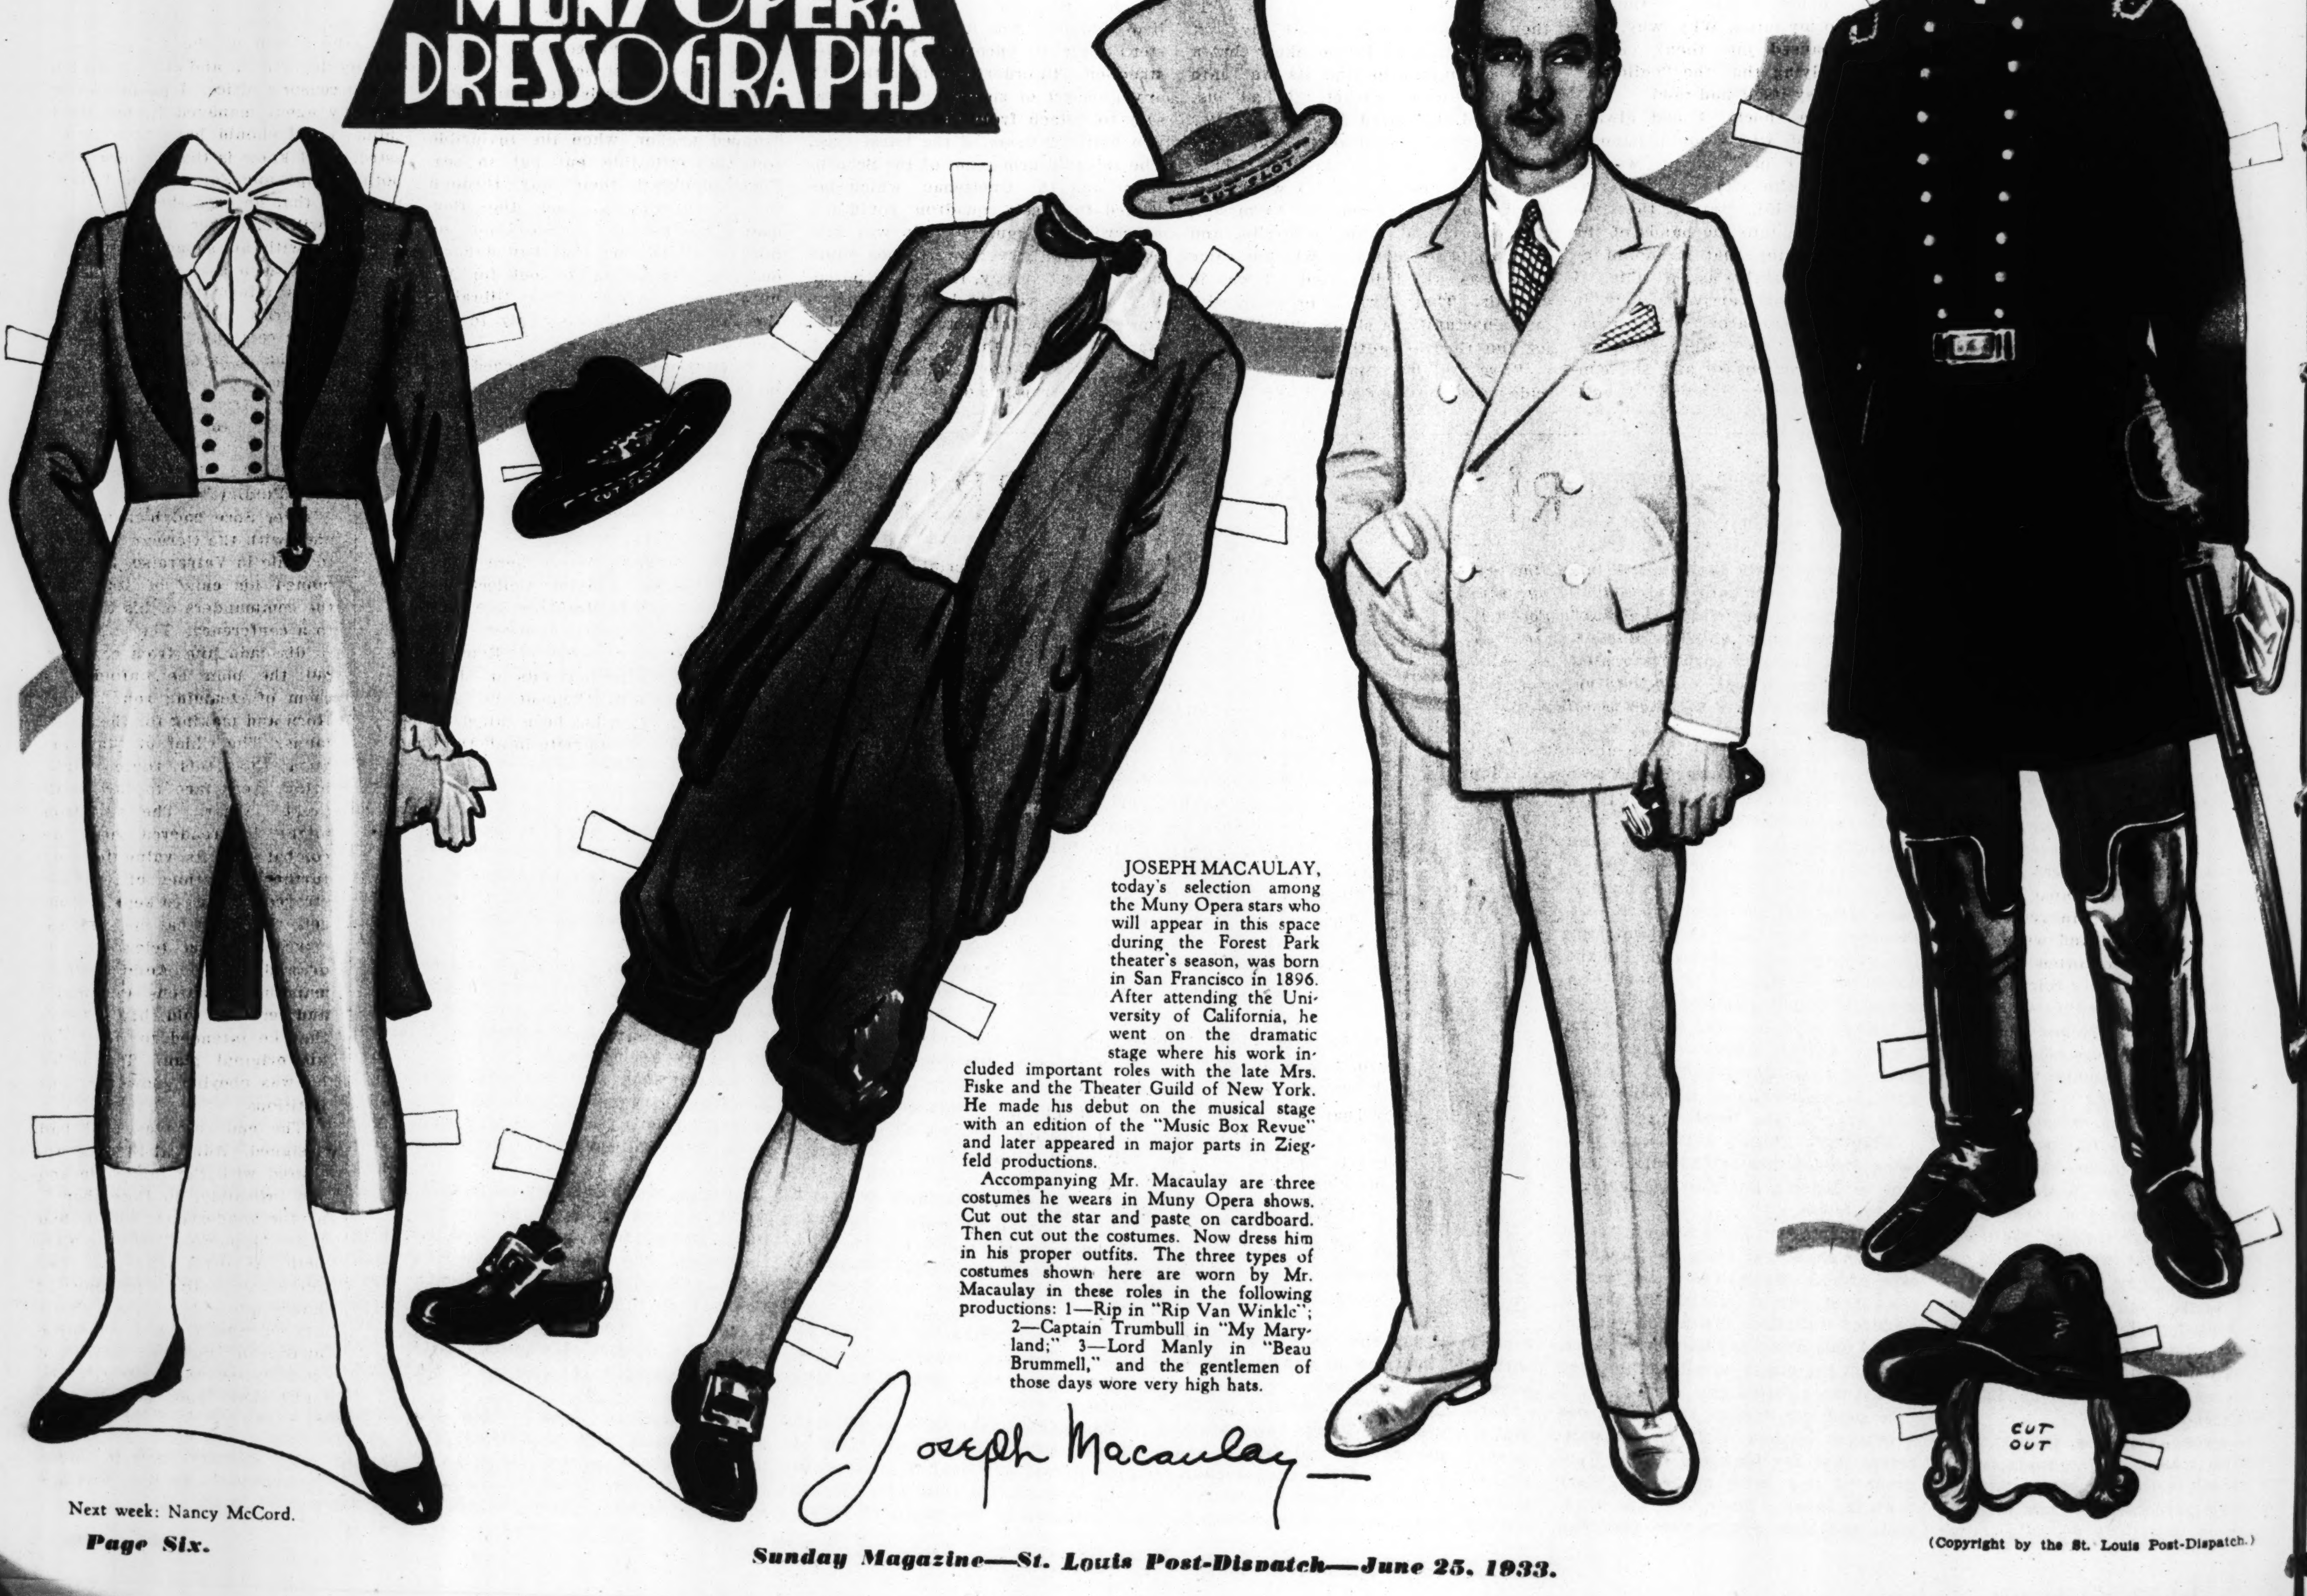
MUNY OPERA DRESSOGRAPHS



JOSEPH MACAULAY, today's selection among the Muny Opera stars who will appear in this space during the Forest Park theater's season, was born in San Francisco in 1896. After attending the University of California, he went on the dramatic stage where his work included important roles with the late Mrs. Fiske and the Theater Guild of New York. He made his debut on the musical stage with an edition of the "Music Box Revue" and later appeared in major parts in Ziegfeld productions.

Accompanying Mr. Macaulay are three costumes he wears in Muny Opera shows. Cut out the star and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress him in his proper outfits. The three types of costumes shown here are worn by Mr. Macaulay in these roles in the following productions: 1—Rip in "Rip Van Winkle"; 2—Captain Trumbull in "My Maryland;" 3—Lord Manly in "Beau Brummell," and the gentlemen of those days wore very high hats.

be regarded as a civilian and sent back to America in custody, where a disagreeable welcome would await me. Whatever happened, they would not let me go, so it was better to be a prisoner of war than to be sent to an American jail. After I had rapidly reviewed the situation, I knocked at the door and said to one of my "warders":

"Excuse me. Is it possible to have a word with Admiral Hall at once?"

"I don't think so. Is it so urgent?"

"Yes, it is. Admiral Hall will be highly interested in what I have to say to him."

He went to the telephone. It was already 8 in the evening, but the Admiral was still in his office and prepared to receive me at once. Rain was streaming down as we crossed the courtyard of the Admiralty. Hall was standing in his room, and asked:

"What brings you here at so late an hour?"

"I surrender."

"What do you mean? We have just wired to Berne on your account . . ."

"That is why I have come. It is no longer necessary."

"What does all this mean?"

"Captain Rintelen begs to report to you, sir, as a prisoner of war."

The Admiral dropped into his seat. He gazed at me, rocked a little in his chair, then sprang up and clapped me on the shoulder as he growled appreciatively: "That was well done." He tore open the door to the adjoining room, called in Lord Herschell and said: "Let me introduce you to our latest prisoner of war, Kapitanleutnant von Rintelen!"

Herschell turned on his heel, went into his own office and returned with a bottle and three glasses.

"Sit down," he said, "and let's have a cocktail to get over the shock."

It was growing late, and the two officers proposed that we should dine together before I was sent to a concentration camp. We drove to a club to which they both belonged, and entered the dining room, in which a number of British officers were sitting.

THE Admiral selected a table in a corner where we could be alone and talk quietly. He and Lord Herschell naturally had a lot they wanted to ask me, and in order to make me loquacious they told me things which gave me a thrill of horror as I listened. Certainly they did not reveal any important secrets. They were only, in their own view, giving me a few details of the world-embrac ing activity of the Naval Intelligence Service, yet it grew clear to me that during the whole of the war we had undertaken practically nothing without the British Secret Service having previously acquired information about our intended moves. I spent a long evening with the two Englishmen and learned much of which I had hitherto been ignorant.

"You need not have waited so long for that cocktail I gave you, Captain," said Lord Herschell.

"So long?"

"We expected you four weeks ago. Our preparations had been made for your reception, but you took your time. Why did you not leave New York as soon as you got the telegram?"

What was that? What was he saying? There are times when one can't trust one's own ears!

"Beyond a doubt, Kaptainleutnant," Admiral Hall went on, "it will hurt your feelings as a German officer, but it was not so much the work of our own agents that you fell into our hands! You may thank your naval or military attaches for that—whichever of the two it may have been. I don't know . . . Were you always in full harmony with—er—Captain von Papen . . .?"

"What do you mean by that, sir?"

"Still something unpleasant for you to hear. There must be a certain limit to human recklessness . . . he wired and wirelessed your name so often to Berlin in good, honest, straightforward German that he just played you into our hands. It seemed almost deliberate."

I was tongue-tied. I had been betrayed. They seemed to know everything—my sudden recall . . . everything. With an effort I harked back to the earlier topic of conversation.

"I don't get your meaning, Lord Herschell. Which of the telegrams were you talking about?"

Admiral Hall bent over the table towards me. He pushed his spectacles aside, looked at me keenly, and said with pointed sarcasm:

"We mean the telegram which you received on July 6, that is to say, a month ago. Captain Boy-Ed met you at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street, where he handed you the be regarded as a civilian and sent back to America in custody, where a disagreeable welcome would await me. Whatever happened, they would not let me go, so it was better to be a prisoner of war than to be sent to an American jail. After I had rapidly reviewed the situation, I knocked at the door and said to one of my "warders":

"Excuse me. Is it possible to have a word with Admiral Hall at once?"

"I don't think so. Is it so urgent?"

"Yes, it is. Admiral Hall will be highly interested in what I have to say to him."

He went to the telephone. It was already 8 in the evening, but the Admiral was still in his office and prepared to receive me at once. Rain was streaming down as we crossed the courtyard of the Admiralty. Hall was standing in his room, and asked:

"What brings you here at so late an hour?"

I stood at attention:

"I surrender."

"What do you mean? We have just wired to Berne on your account . . ."

"That is why I have come. It is no longer necessary."

"What does all this mean?"

"Captain Rintelen begs to report to you, sir, as a prisoner of war."

The Admiral dropped into his seat. He gazed at me, rocked a little in his chair, then sprang up and clapped me on the shoulder as he growled appreciatively: "That was well done." He tore open the door to the adjoining room, called in Lord Herschell and said: "Let me introduce you to our latest prisoner of war, Kapitanleutnant von Rintelen!"

Herschell turned on his heel, went into his own office and returned with a bottle and three glasses.

"Sit down," he said, "and let's have a cocktail to get over the shock."

It was growing late, and the two officers proposed that we should dine together before I was sent to a concentration camp. We drove to a club to which they both belonged, and entered the dining room, in which a number of British officers were sitting.

THE Admiral selected a table in a corner where we could be alone and talk quietly. He and Lord Herschell naturally had a lot they wanted to ask me, and in order to make me loquacious they told me things which gave me a thrill of horror as I listened. Certainly they did not reveal any important secrets. They were only, in their own view, giving me a few details of the world-embracing activity of the Naval Intelligence Service, yet it grew clear to me that during the whole of the war we had undertaken practically nothing without the British Secret Service having previously acquired information about our intended moves. I spent a long evening with the two Englishmen and learned much of which I had hitherto been ignorant.

"You need not have waited so long for that cocktail I gave you, Captain," said Lord Herschell.

"So long?"

"We expected you four weeks ago. Our preparations had been made for your reception, but you took your time. Why did you not leave New York as soon as you got the telegram?"

What was that? What was he saying? There are times when one can't trust one's own ears!

"Beyond a doubt, Kaptainleutnant," Admiral Hall went on, "it will hurt your feelings as a German officer, but it was not so much the work of our own agents that you fell into our hands! You may thank your naval or military attaches for that—whichever of the two it may have been. I don't know . . . Were you always in full harmony with—er—Captain von Papen . . .?"

"What do you mean by that, sir?"

"Still something unpleasant for you to hear. There must be a certain limit to human recklessness . . . he wired and wirelessed your name so often to Berlin in good, honest, straightforward German that he just played you into our hands. It seemed almost deliberate."

I was tongue-tied. I had been betrayed. They seemed to know everything—my sudden recall . . . everything. With an effort I harked back to the earlier topic of conversation.

"I don't get your meaning, Lord Herschell. Which of the telegrams were you talking about?"

Admiral Hall bent over the table towards me. He pushed his spectacles aside, looked at me keenly, and said with pointed sarcasm:

"We mean the telegram which you received on July 6, that is to say, a month ago. Captain Boy-Ed met you at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street, where he handed you the wire—just a minute—I'll read it."

He put his hand in his breast pocket and drew out a small packet of papers, one of which he extracted and, to my astonishment, read out as follows:

"To the German Embassy, for the Naval Attache. Captain Rintelen is to be informed unobtrusively that he is under instructions to return to Germany."

"What do you say to that?" he asked. "Were we not right in saying that you took your time?"

A certain macabre humor, which I had managed to retain up till then, began to desert me.

How had this telegram come into their hands at all? Surely it must have been in cipher? But to judge from the course of events it couldn't have been!

I sat back in my chair and thought of the day when Boniface had appeared in my office and gloomily reported that the "most secret code" had been stolen from the naval attache by British "representatives."

The Admiral watched me closely.

"The telegrams to Count Spee, the Admiral in command of the cruiser squadron . . ." murmured Lord Herschell casually, as though absorbed in thought.

THIS was something new! Admiral Spee had encountered the English battle cruisers on December 8, 1914; yet Herschell was apparently going to say that telegrams sent to him had also been intercepted, though the theft at the attache's office had not taken place until much later. I wanted to know the true state of affairs, so I said abrutly:

"But it was long after December, 1914, that the code was copied!"

Hall shot at me:

"When did you say we had the code copied?"

This seemed a trap. He obviously wanted to find out if I knew when and how the code had been given away. I thought quickly. As a prisoner of war in England I was bound to get news through to Germany sooner or later, and I wanted to learn as many details as I could. It could do no harm if I told the Admiral that I knew how the code had come into their hands.

"Oh," I said, "you mean that affair in New York, when you put that young woman on to the secretary at the embassy? Every child has heard of that!"

They looked at me a little dazed. Hall slowly ground out:

"Every child has heard of it, eh?"

An uneasy silence ensued—and during this silence a hideous thought flashed into my mind. Why, why, why had they paused just then? Could they be implying that the "children" at the embassy itself had not?

This was a shock. I had always been afraid of what would happen, even though I had sent a written warning to Berlin after my conversation with Boy-Ed, stating that the code had fallen into the hands of the enemy and urging that it should be changed as quickly as possible. I knew my message arrived safely in Berlin, but had apparently been disregarded. The two Englishmen regained their composure and the conversation went on. I felt fully entitled to draw my own conclusions. Somehow or other they had got hold of the first code. My imagination ran riot.

I looked longingly at the cocktails.

And I poured myself out another glass.

It would be understating the case merely to say that I was horrified. What could the British not do to injure Germany if they could read the telegrams which were sent out all over the world from Berlin! It did not bear thinking of. I clung to a single hope—I must find a way to let them know at home that the code was no longer secret. I went hot and cold, for I had already sent a warning in those very terms to Germany, after I learned of the theft from Boniface, and what happened? They were still employing the same code on their wireless! If they had taken no notice of my first warning, it was only too likely that a second would also find its way into the waste-paper basket. I had just witnessed the dazed faces of the two officers when they learned that I was aware of the theft of the code. They must have realized that I would not have kept the information to myself, but had passed it on to Berlin, and they could not conceive why the same code was still being used. I was in despair. There I was, a prisoner, with no opportunity to shriek into the ears of the German authorities:

"Are you bent on committing suicide? Are you blind and deaf? Haven't I warned you? For God's sake, throw the code into the fire!"

It was ghastly, but I forced myself to keep calm. The mischief could not, for the time being, be averted and would have to take its course. In order to take my mind off it I said to Lord Herschell:

"What was that you were saying about telegrams sent to Count Spee?"

Herschell looked up and replied:

"Thank you for reminding me, Captain. We are the hosts and must do all we can to entertain our guest. You shall hear the story."

ADMIRAL SPEE was cruising with his squadron somewhere about the seven seas, and London could discover no reliable clew as to his whereabouts. The British Admiralty was, however, perfectly aware that the existence of his squadron constituted a menace to Allied shipping, and it proceeded with stern logic to encompass Spee's destruction. In order to join battle with any prospect of success it was necessary to detach from the British fleet two battle cruisers of the latest type. The splendid armament of the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau, which belonged to Spee's squadron, could not otherwise be equalled. It was also essential to discover where Spee would be on a certain day, if the two pursuing cruisers were to have the opportunity to come into action, and a plan was formed for this purpose. First, however, two large cruisers had to be freed from routine duties.

This could only be done secretly, for if the German Naval Staff got wind of the fact that two powerful British battle cruisers were steering for the Atlantic, it was bound to realize that their objective was Spee's squadron, and this had to be avoided at all costs.

Due weight was given to the fact that the German Navy must be fully aware of the presence of the majority of the British battle cruisers in the North Sea, and that two of them had been detached for service in the Mediterranean, where they were stationed near the Dardanelles for the purpose of blocking the exit of the Goeben. They also took into account the probability that this German ship would try to break out and make for Pola, in order to strengthen the backbone of the Austrians. They could not simply send two cruisers to chase Admiral Spee, since their disappearance would soon be noticed by German agents, who were to be found everywhere. Their absence from their anchorage had to be camouflaged as an indispensable condition of success, and it could only be done by a stratagem.

ADMIRAL HALL had a brilliant idea. He arranged for two new cruisers to be built secretly at an English dockyard, and they were ready in a few weeks. They were painted gray, and lay there with great funnels and heavy guns poking their muzzles threateningly from the armored turrets. They were, however, only wooden models, and as soon as they were finished two large tugs appeared, which attached hawsers and towed the monsters out to sea. Officers stood on the bridge of each tug to keep a sharp eye open for signs of enemy ships, and if anything suspicious hove in sight they set smoke screens in action; for it was, of course, essential for the success of the scheme that the existence of the models should be kept absolutely secret. They were towed through the Bay of Biscay, past Gibraltar and through the Mediterranean to the Aegean Sea, where the Invincible and the Inflexible were at anchor. These two cruisers had been there for weeks, in full sight of the inhabitants of the islands, among whom were agents whose main duty was to make sure that they were still there. Under cover of darkness the imitation cruisers were drawn alongside, and to the eyes of possible watchers on shore there was nothing to distinguish them from the real men-o'-war they had come to replace. They were surrounded by a numerous escort of torpedo and patrol boats, which prevented them from being blown up by mines or submarines and, which was of greatest importance, kept curious strangers at a distance.

The wooden vessels were still rocking on the waves and had not yet dropped anchor, when the Invincible and the Inflexible put out to sea. They ploughed their way through the Mediterranean, and the German Intelligence Service had no inkling of the fact that two dangerous foes had set out to look for Admiral Spee. After passing Gibraltar they set their helms sharply to the southwest.

When Lord Herschell reached this point I interrupted him:

"Why to the southwest? They must have known where Spee was."

"We knew where he would be," replied Herschell, looking at Hall.

The Admiral continued to gaze in front of him. "I had telegraphed to him," he said softly, "to let him know where the British cruisers were to meet him—and he kept the appointment."

I pushed my chair back a little from the table and laughed.

"Excuse me, Sir Reginald, it is not very kind of you to pull a poor prisoner's leg in this way. You do not expect me to believe that?"

I looked into the Admiral's grave face and knew instinctively that what Lord Herschell had told me was true. But I could not conceive how he had been able to send a wire to Spee. What on earth did he mean? He began to explain, and I began to understand.

They never did anything by halves. Our people in New York were careless in regard to the code. They had taken precautions to insure that the two cruisers should not miss their objective. They knew what they were doing. I suspected already that they were in possession of the German secret code. Bearing this in mind, I began to understand what they did. Spee and his squadron were bound to turn up somewhere, and most probably off the west coast of South America. The surmise was correct. On the evening of November 1, 1914, came the horrifying news that Spee had destroped Admiral Craddock's squadron off Coronel. He had steamed away from the scene of battle in the direction of Valparaiso, and the news of his arrival was, of course, at once cabled in. They knew that he had gone ashore with his officers and had been welcomed by the German colony. So he was in Valparaiso.

Hall began to reconstruct his plan of action on the table with a variety of miscellaneous objects.

There was Valparaiso, a matchbox, here the two cruisers, and another matchbox for Berlin. There was Berlin. There Valparaiso and Count Spee. Here the two cruisers. Here was Berlin, and in Berlin was——

"Your man?" I burst out.

"MY MAN," he said calmly; 'my agent. I had instructed him to find out how telegrams were sent from the German Admiralty to the ships which were still at sea. He informed me that the method was quite simple. When such a telegram had to be dispatched a messenger was sent from the Admiralty to the chief telegraph office to hand it over. They used special forms, and the telegram had to be furnished with the stamp of the relevant Admiralty department and also the stamp of the censor's office. I do not know how my agent managed it, nor do I think that I should have been interested. All I know is that he possessed both stamps and forms, and I have no doubt that he used them.

"You will remember that Spee was at anchor with his squadron off Valparaiso. As soon as I was in possession of this information, I sent my agent in Berlin instructions to act. He had been carrying for some weeks a telegram that I had sent from London, set up in Boy-Ed's code, and containing strict orders for Admiral Spee to leave immediately for the Falkland Islands and destroy the wireless station at Port Stanley."

After Spee had had an interview with the German Minister to Chile in Valparaiso, he summoned his chief of staff and the commanders of his cruisers to a conference. They all tried to dissuade him from carrying out the plan he unfolded to them of steaming round Cape Horn and making for the Falklands. The Chief of Staff argued that this route might bring them face to face with great danger. The squadron might be rendered hors de combat and its value for any further operations of war destroyed. But Spee kept to himself the fact that he had received a secret telegram, addressed to "The Admiral Commanding Squadron—Personal," and merely told his officers that he intended to carry out his original plan. The order he was obeying, however, was fictitious.

The end came as Hall had designed. Admiral Sturdee appeared with the Invincible and the Inflexible, on December 7, at the rendezvous which had been "appointed" for the German Admiral; and the two forces came to grips but 12 hours later. The death struggle of the German squadron against a superiour weight of guns lasted only a few hours, until about noon of December 8, 1914.

REMBRANDT PRINTS

THE Gallery of Rembrandt Prints is the twenty-sixth in a series of exhibits being featured weekly at the City Art Museum in Forest Park. Each display in this "Gallery of the Week" presentation will be reproduced in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, with an accompanying description of the exhibit by museum authorities.

This gallery contains 20 of Rembrandt's etchings, of which five are lent, from the Malvern B. Clopton collection, by Washington University. These prints illustrate the evolution of the artist's style, from the open-line work of his youthful period to the dramatic light and shade attained through the use of dry-point before the close of his career.

They show, also, his broad and sympathetic observation and his astonishing ability to impart a magnificent spiritual beauty to commonplace and even trivial subjects.

The plate, "Rembrandt's Mother Seated at a Table," made in 1631, is a notable example of his early work, in which is reverently expressed the beauty and wisdom of experienced age. Also belonging to the earlier period is a self portrait, "Rembrandt in Cap and Plume" (1636), a study in picturesque costume.

In "The Death of the Virgin," dated 1639, we find the use of drypoint, that is, delicate lines scratched upon the bare copper plate, assuming importance in the development of the shadows.

As an expression of piety and the solemnity of death, this plate ranks as one of Rembrandt's great etchings.

Perhaps the most popular of Rembrandt's etched work is the celebrated "Christ Healing the Sick," often referred to as the "Hundred Gilder Print," made about 1649. In it the artist's powers of characterization and command of light and shade are united in a rich fullness of expression. No other work shows better the breadth of his human sympathy and understanding; for here is set forth the whole gamut of human emotions.

Closely akin to it in feeling is the "Christ Preaching" (1652). The development of rich and vibrant shadows as a supplement to the etched line reached its culmination, however, in the magnificent plate of "Three Crosses," dated 1653, shown here in a brilliant impression from the Clopton Collection. Its mysterious lighting and swift, dramatic line, unite in an effect of remarkable imaginative power.

The exhibit also includes three of Rembrandt's etchings of landscape and the portraits of "Jan Lutma," elderly goldsmith, and "Clement de Jonghe" celebrated print dealer, which has been called "a perfect piece of portraiture, consummate in all the qualities of etching."

living with people. But Gua was well most of the time she was with the Kelloggs. She seemed to catch cold a little more readily than Donald, but she had only one serious illness. That was intestinal influenza, which kept her in bed for a few days. As much attention was given to her health as parents ordinarily give to that of a child, and a physician was consulted when it seemed advisable. She incurred one characteristically human affliction through her mode of life: she got a few corns from wearing shoes.

Gua was an enthusiastic jumper. She would climb onto window sills and book cases and jump off. She did a lot of climbing, and Donald, as soon as he was physically able, became a pretty good climber himself by imitating her.

A favorite form of play with Gua—one, incidentally, in which Donald did not join—was to adorn herself and march about, apparently engrossed in self-admiration.

When Gua entered the Kellogg household she walked on all fours, and still rather uncertainly. Before her stay there ended she was walking upright much of the time. In learning to walk in human fashion she would totter along between Kellogg's legs, supporting herself by holding on to his trousers. Later she got along by holding his hand. Eventually she was able to walk with her arms hanging naturally at her sides.

In teaching Gua to walk the experimenters gave her only the help they might have given a backward child. In this as in other aspects of her training, the Kelloggs sought to assist and guide merely in an incidental way; they studiously avoided the technique by which animals are taught tricks.

GUA was subjected, of course, to discipline, as children must be. She was ordered to do things and forbidden to do other things. Occasionally she was punished, rarely by a mild spanking, at other times by being required to stay in her room, sit on a chair, or something like that. She seemed to suffer keenly under the censure of her protectors. Sometimes when she had done something which she knew would bring reproof, she would run to Kellogg, put her head in his lap and cry. Neither she nor Donald, with their infantile minds, seemed to have a clear perception of right and wrong, but judged their actions by whether they would meet the approval or disapproval of their elders. Both ape and child very evidently liked to be praised.

The Kelloggs make it clear they do not want to be in the position of attributing to the chimpanzee some of the emotions which human beings feel, but they relate numerous incidents in which Gua's behavior suggested that she felt these emotions. In the matter of mirth, for example. When tickled her response seemed to be laughter. Before she was a year old she would make a noise that sounded like a chuckle when whirled at arm's length. Sometimes she would make this chuckling noise when she was dodging around chairs in play with Donald, who laughed as he pursued her. "In our opinion," the Kellogg's state, "this behavior suggests that the chimpanzee can appreciate 'good fun' as well as the human infant, and that under proper conditions, it can express its appreciation in an analogous manner. If such observations have never been previously reported, it may well be that caged chimpanzees, like caged men, are unfavorably situated for the production of spontaneous laughter. If this response, on the other hand, besides being partly reflex, is also modifiable through learning, it is possible that other observed specimens have never been afforded the same opportunities of developing it which Gua possessed."

In summarizing the chimpanzee's emotional behavior, the authors say: ". . . almost from the start she seemed willing and ready to do whatever was required of her. . . . One would say in everyday language that she was very good-natured. There can be little doubt . . . that her ruling emotion was fear. In those rare instances when she did object to the treatment accorded her, it seemed usually to be because she was afraid. . . . There was little of the vicious or malicious about her to those who knew her well. According to our observations, she possessed fewer inhibitory responses than the human subject. She was thus a creature of more violent appetites and emotions, which swayed her this way and that, seemingly without consideration of the consequences.

"EXAMPLES are her intense and almost unquenchable thirst; her frantic hunger when she had missed a meal or two . . . and her intense affection for those who cared for her, at times amounting to an uncontrollable passion, which nothing but physical contact, including embracing and kissing would satisfy. She seemed to follow her ruling impulses with little permanent regard for restraining circumstances. In this respect she was coarser than the child and more elemental in her motives."

A remarkable bit of intelligent behavior on the part of Gua is related. She had been placed on a stool and ordered to stay there, but she wanted to be closer to Kellogg, who was seated a short distance away. Several times she started to get down to go to him, but he forbade it, and she obeyed, although very unhappily. Finally she found a way to obey him and have her own way, too. She shoved her stool close to him, perched herself on it again. She could touch him and still obey by staying on the stool.

Gua never learned to talk, although the Kelloggs tried to teach her to say "Papa." But she expressed herself vocally by grunts and barks and wails which the Kelloggs were able to interpret pretty well.

The ape made notable progress in understanding words. During the first few months she surpassed the boy in her response to words, but before the nine months was up Donald had overtaken her. The boy came to comprehend 68 words and phrases and the chimpanzee 58, during the period they were together.

AMONG those to which Gua responded were: "Come here," "Stop," "Give it to me," "Open your mouth," "Hand me your bib," "Hug Donald," "Go to Papa," "Where is your nose?" "Close the drawer." When told she was a "bad girl," she would cry. When asked if she wanted "to go bye-bye," she would climb in the perambulator. When told to, she blew the automobile horn. A number of drawings were put before her, and at the request, "Show me the bow-wow," she pointed to the picture of a dog; when told to "Show me the shoe," she pointed out the correct picture.

Despite Gua's progress in adapting herself to a human environment, the Kelloggs are far from thinking that an animal can be turned into a human being. They recognize, too, that various details of physical makeup, such as hand structure, limit an ape's ability to acquire human behavior. But they think the results of that research "strongly suggest that, if given sufficient opportunity, the animal subject may considerably outdo himself . . ."

What would have been the results if they had kept Gua in the family for several years they do not attempt to predict. "It is possible," they say, "on the one hand that it (the chimpanzee) would prove inferior in every essential respect to older children. But it is also within the bounds of theoretical possibility that it would score relatively as high or higher than normal human beings of like age."

A NEW DEAL

For Modern Housewives

Life's too short, time too precious for a woman to spend most of her waking hours in preparation of meals. Yet homemakers are more concerned today than ever before in providing tasty, nourishing food at a minimum cost.

The OAKLAND PEDESTAL TABLE RANGE offers a perfect solution to this problem, its manufacturers state.

"For instance," they say, "the pedestal base is a wide departure from anything ever before offered in gas ranges. Aside from its novelty of design it completely eliminates all exposed pipe, the gas supply pipe being carried through the pedestal base.

"Another distinct advantage is the greater ease with which the floor under the range can be cleaned. There are no legs to catch dirt or hamper cleaning . . . just plain, straight lines with plenty of working room on all sides. And that's just one of its super-features."

Gaily You'll Dine

How often a dinner party has been carried to success by the atmosphere of a charming dining room. The sheen of napery . . . the gleam of silver . . . the sparkle of glass . . . against walls made lovely by STEELCOTE FLAT WALL FINISH, one of the quality products of Steelcote Mfg. Co. of St. Louis.

In one of the many shades of Steelcote Flat Wall Finish lies unexpected magic for dining or any other room of your home. Artfully it conceals old ugliness . . . reveals new beauties . . . your whole room is transformed, like Cinderella arrayed for the ball, Steelcote paint experts assert.

Steelcote Rubber Enamel, also in any wanted shade, will do the same for your kitchen, its furniture, the sunroom. Note the attractive one above. If the colors illustrated in walls and furniture do not suit your personality, in the wide array of colors available every taste can be filled.

There's a neighborhood store bearing the Steelcote Paint Store sign near you, or ask at any hardware, paint and accessory store for Steelcote products.

CHEESE WITH SOUP

Did you ever pass a dish of grated cheese with cream soup? Try it . . . and you'll make a habit of it.

Health-Giving Elements in Beer Says Chemist

Beer is bound to be a health-giving drink, because all of the ingredients in it are healthful, in the opinion of L. J. Walther, chemist and general superintendent of the Falstaff Brewing Corp., 3684 Forest Park Blvd.

"Beer is made from pure water, cereals, barley malt and hops," said Walther. "Some breweries use rice or corn grits in their formula. Each one of these ingredients is a food and a healthful food. There is nothing else used in beer, and with these ingredients beer is bound to be a healthful, body-building drink. Health authorities have recommended it for years."

A True Story

One of St. Louis' recent brides planned to be married in her mother's wedding gown. The dress was flowered muslin, with hundreds of yards of inserted lace, delicate and fragile. Of course it was soiled and since it was 22 years old, they were afraid to wash it. A friend insisted they could wash it safely with Durlacque . . . they did . . . with fear and trembling . . . but when the gown was dried and ironed, it was as lovely as when it was first worn 22 years ago!

You may be sure that little bride will keep Durlacque in her home always. She knows it will clean anything that water will not harm.

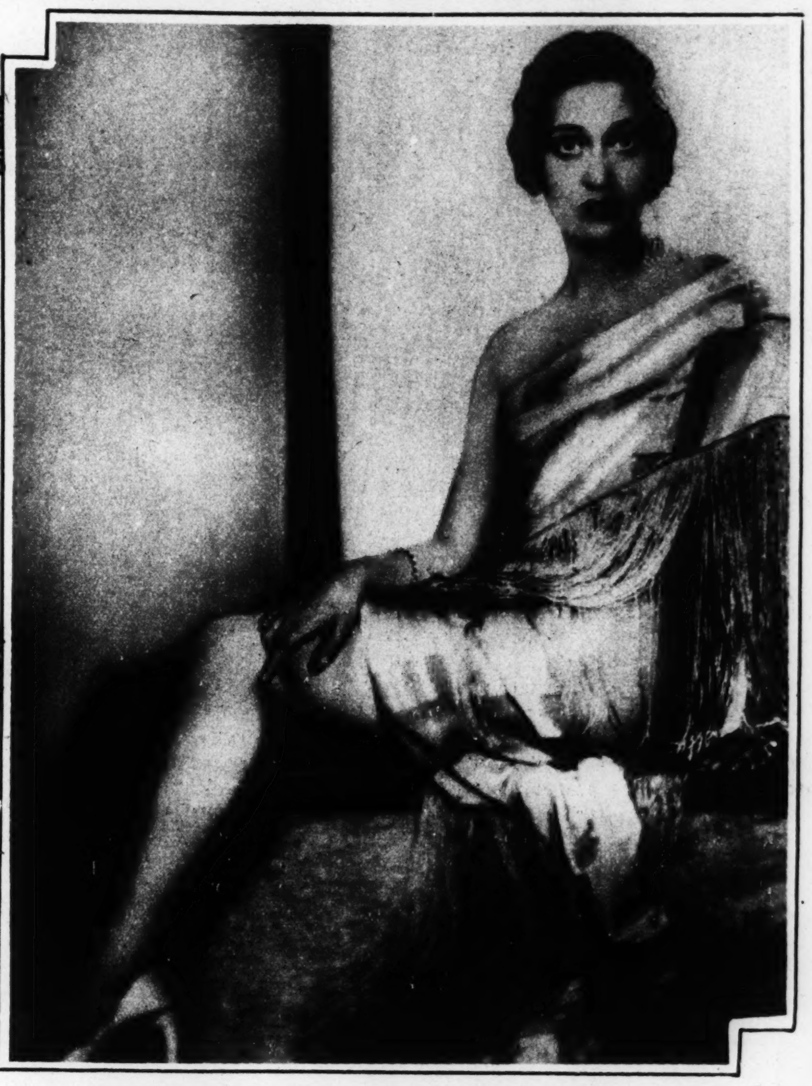
THESE GOBLINS ARE UNPAID BILLS

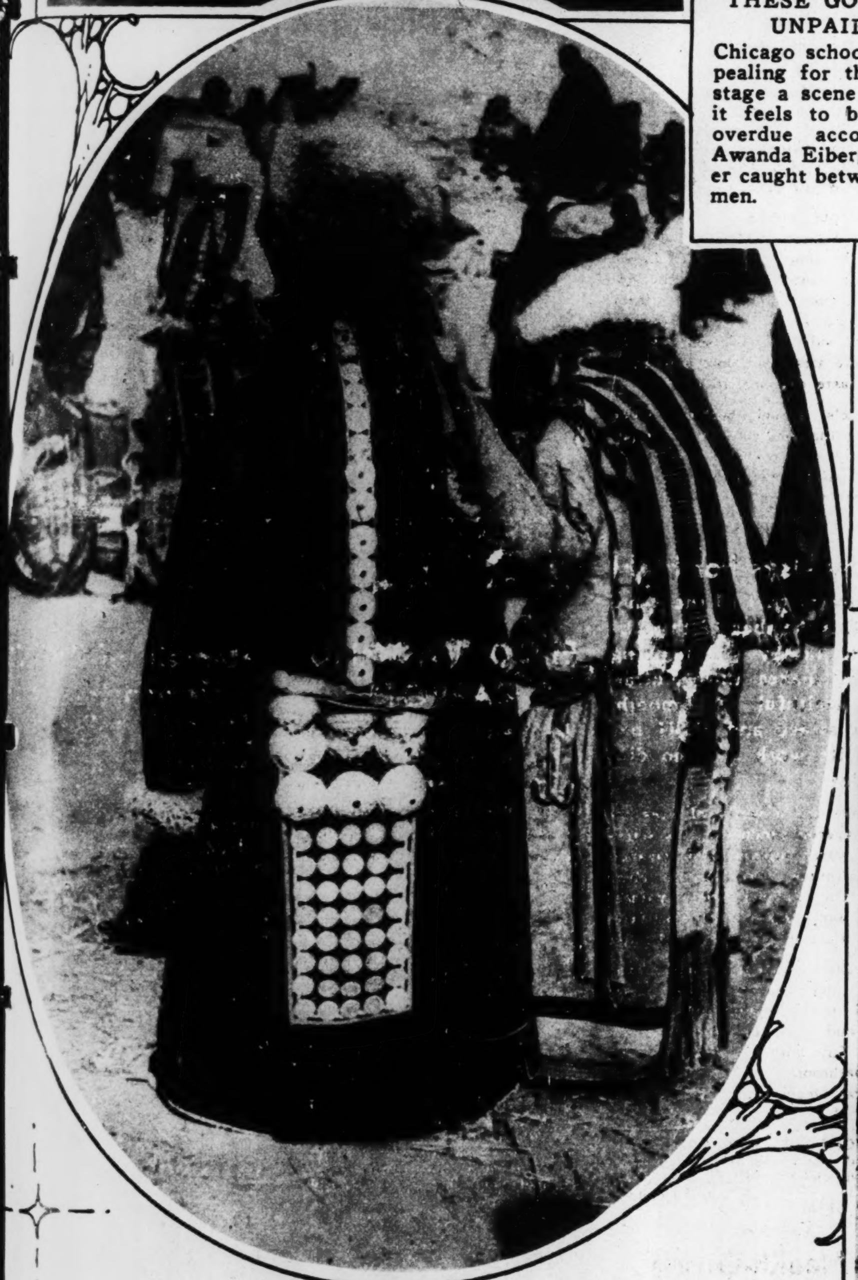
Chicago school teachers appealing for their back pay, stage a scene to show how it feels to be pursued by overdue accounts. Miss Awanda Eiberg is the teacher caught between the bogey men.

AN INSTRUMENT THAT RAISES THE DEAD

It is known as an "artificial pacemaker" for the heart and is shown here with its inventor, Dr. Albert S. Hyman. More than 100 persons who were biologically and legally dead, that is, whose hearts had stopped beating, have been revived by use of this device which, through a long needle inserted near the heart, discharges an electric current that sets up heart activity. Most of these were persons who had died from shock, drugs or heart disease. All were dead longer than two minutes and at least one as long as 18 minutes. Incidentally, all these persons were questioned by clergymen and by Dr. Hyman as to their experience. Without exception, all said they remembered nothing; that the period of death was a period of total unconsciousness and that they didn't even know they had been dead.



SAMPLE OF VIENNESE BEAUTY—Hertha Natfler is a popular stage star of the Austrian capital, noted for its beautiful women.

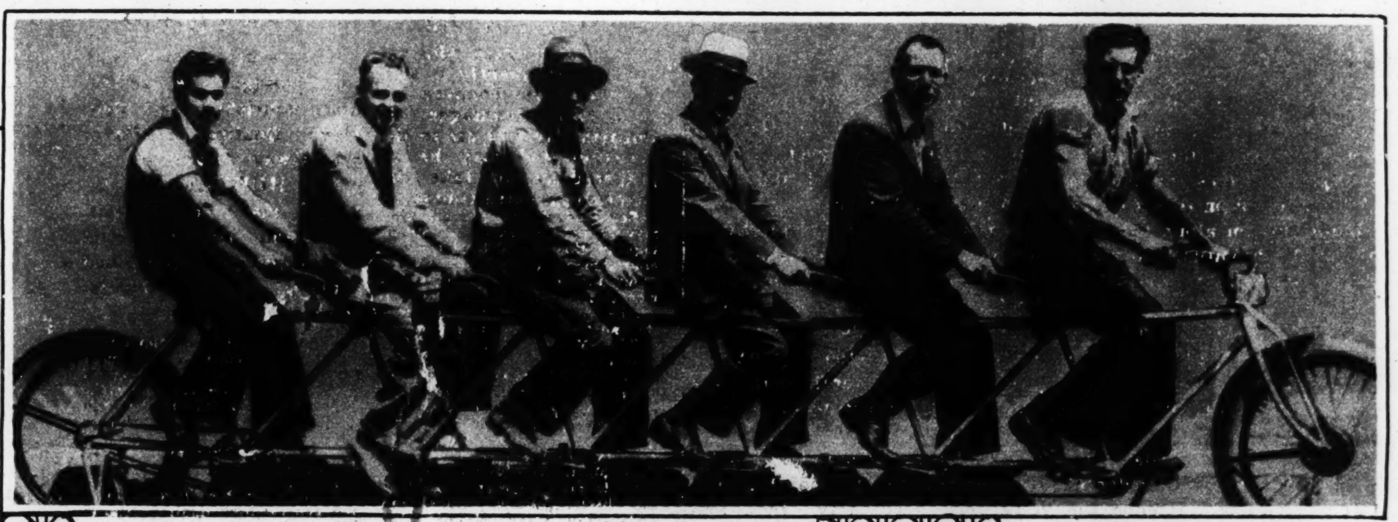


WOMEN'S STYLES IN TIBET

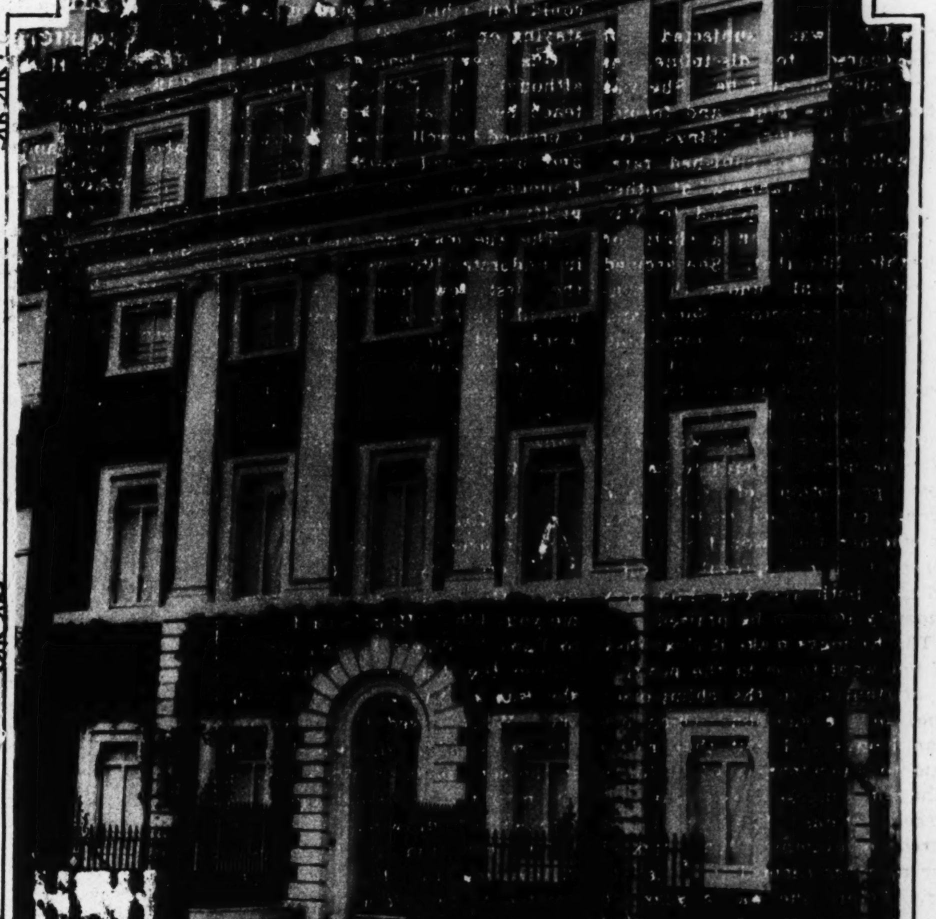
Here are a couple of beauties who posed for Harrison Forman, explorer. They wear their hair in 108 braids as suggested by the 108 volumes of the "Ganjur," the Tibetan Bible. From the ends of the braids they suspend a piece of heavy, studded cloth which reaches to the ground. The studs are of coral, amber and silver. Hats are of foxskin or lambskin.

SIX-CYLINDER BICYCLE

Three times the size of the tandem, popular around the beginning of the century, this huge bicycle carries six passengers and is believed to be the largest in the world. The frame is of airplane tubing and the wheelbase is 16 feet 5 inches. The builders, F. D. Amaral and Edward Amaral, father and son, of Alameda, Cal., are riding in front.



AMERICAN FASCISTS—A group of "khaki shirts," led by Commander-in-Chief Art J. Smith (extreme right) in Philadelphia. They had just promised some 2000 followers that they would "take over" the United States Government.



J. P. MORGAN PROPERTY ABROAD

There's more to a wave than Waves . . . you must also have CURLS!

You get more than waves in a Eugene Permanent Wave—you get curls. . . Permanent curls—framing the face, softening the neckline, peeping out beneath your hat. Not every waving method can give both permanent waves and indestructible curls!

Eugene, alone, by the combination of his new Reverse-spiral Winding and the standard Eugene Spiral Winding, gives hairdressers the means to assure a profusion of permanent curls in addition to natural, rolling permanent waves.

For your shortest hair, smart hair dressers wind from the ends to the roots, without overlapping, and fix the wave with the new Eugene Reverse-spiral Sachets. For your longer strands, they use standard Eugene Sachets and wind from the roots to the ends, the only completely satisfactory method for permanently waving hair that exceeds five or six inches in length.

There's no mistaking the genuine Eugene Permanent Wave. Each Sachet (or waving wrapper) is identified by the Eugene Trade Mark figure. Look for it on each Sachet. Permit no substitutes. Remember, it's your hair—you're the one to be pleased. . . Eugene Ltd., New York and Paris.

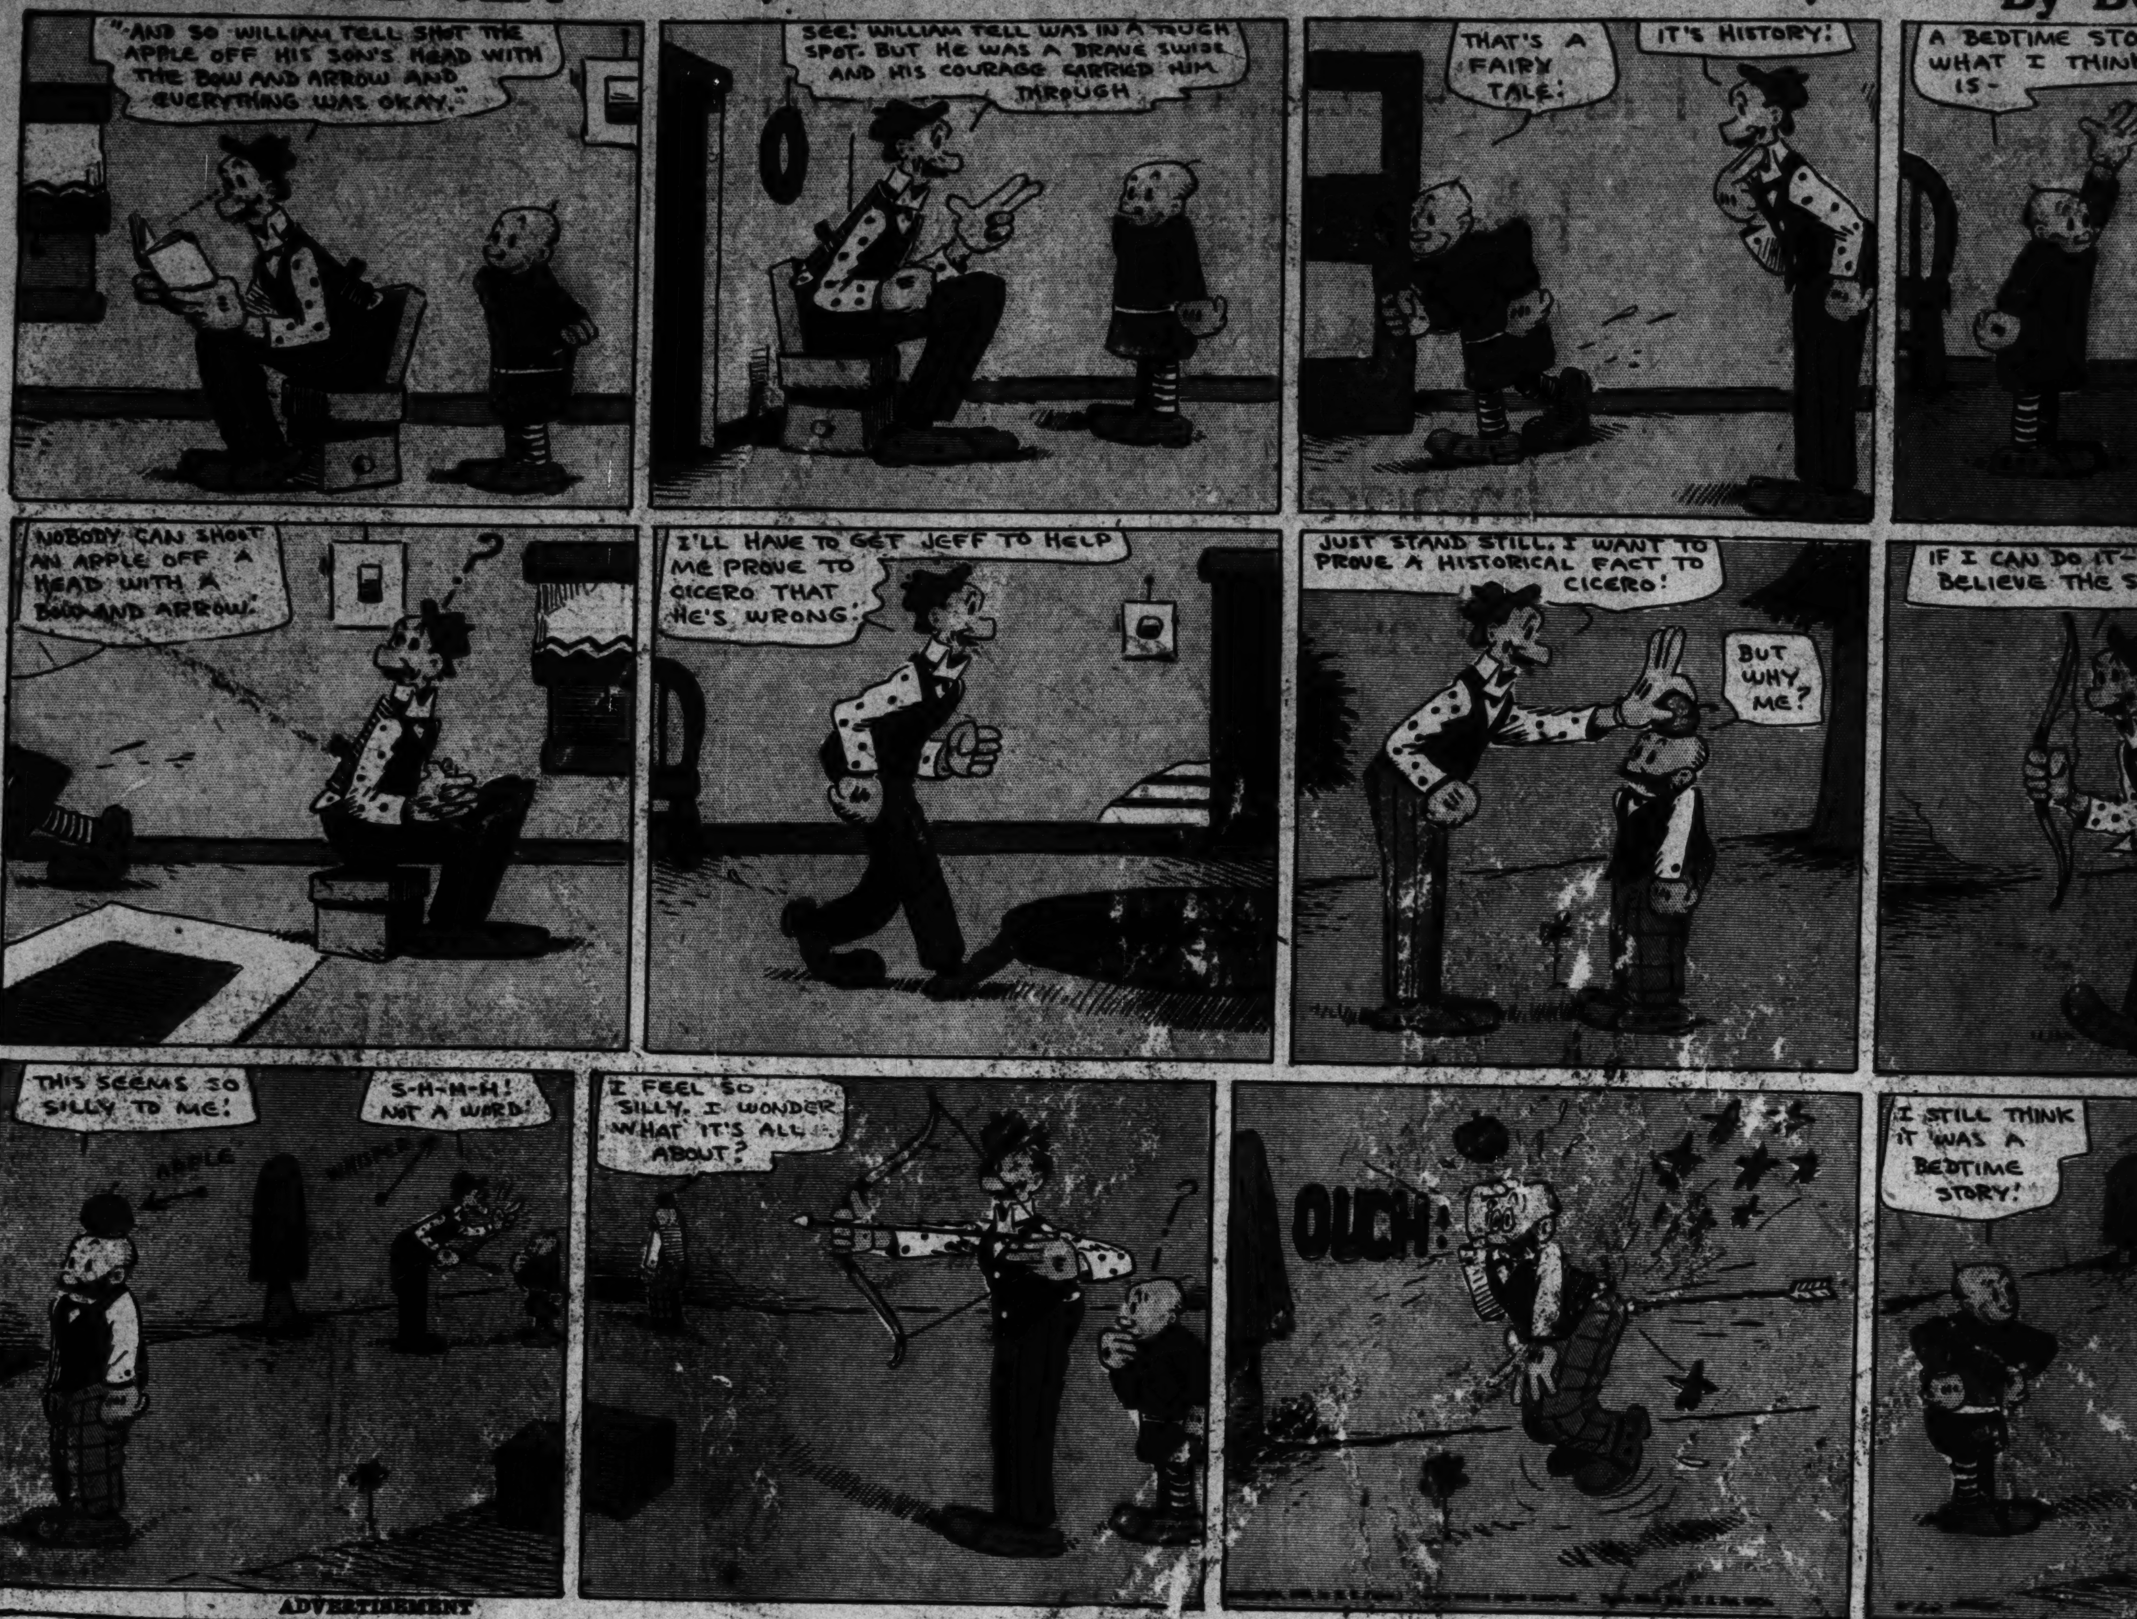
MUTT AND JEFF ◆ ◆ By BUD FISHER



"—AND SO WILLIAM TELL SHOT THE APPLE OFF HIS SON'S HEAD WITH THE BOW AND ARROW AND EVERYTHING WAS OKAY."
SEE! WILLIAM TELL WAS IN A TOUGH SPOT. BUT HE WAS A BRAVE SWISE AND HIS COURAGE CARRIED HIM THROUGH THAT'S A FAIRY TALE!
IT'S HISTORY!
A BEDTIME STORY IS WHAT I THINK IT IS—
NOBODY CAN SHOOT AN APPLE OFF A HEAD WITH A BOW AND ARROW!
I'LL HAVE TO GET JEFF TO HELP ME PROVE TO CICERO THAT HE'S WRONG!
JUST STAND STILL. I WANT TO PROVE A HISTORICAL FACT TO CICERO!
BUT WHY ME?
IF I CAN DO IT—THEN WILL YOU BELIEVE THE STORY ABOUT BILL TELL?
SURE!
THIS SEEMS SO SILLY TO ME!
S-H-H-H! NOT A WORD!
APPLE
I FEEL SO SILLY. I WONDER WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT?
OUCH!
I STILL THINK IT WAS A BEDTIME STORY!

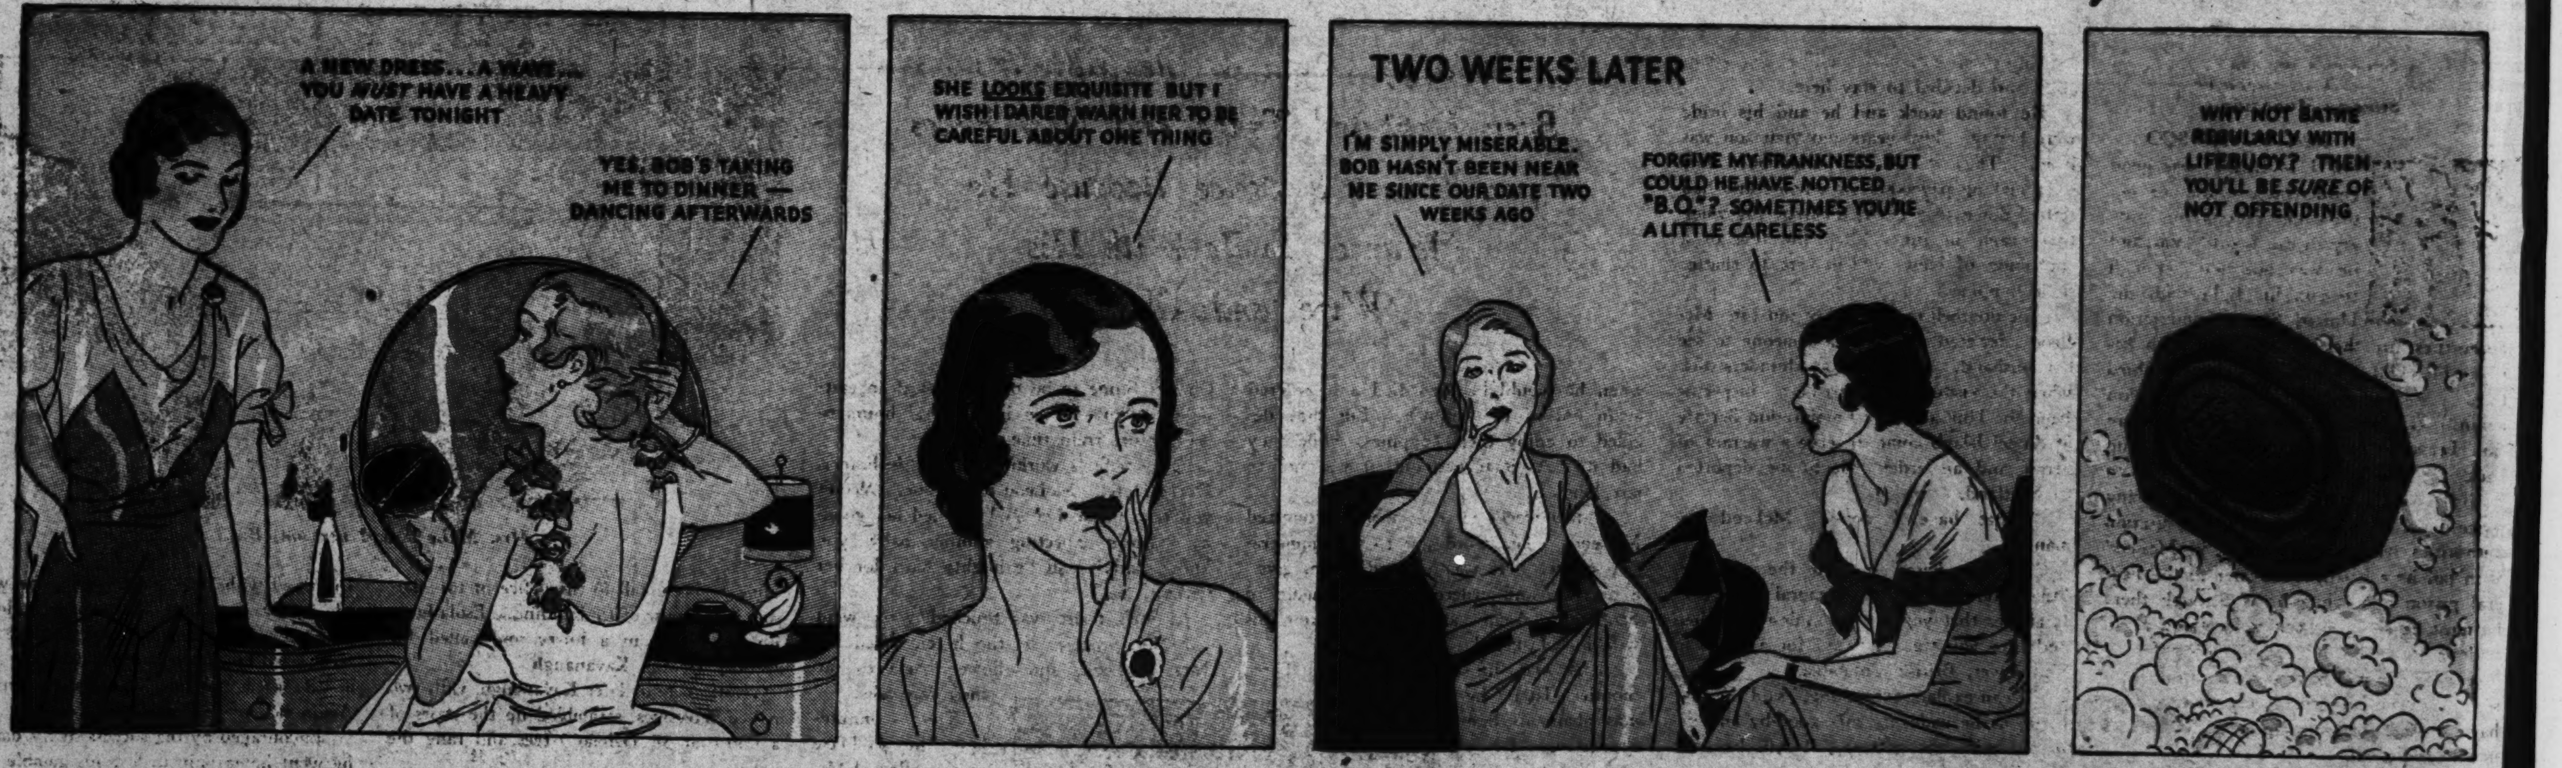
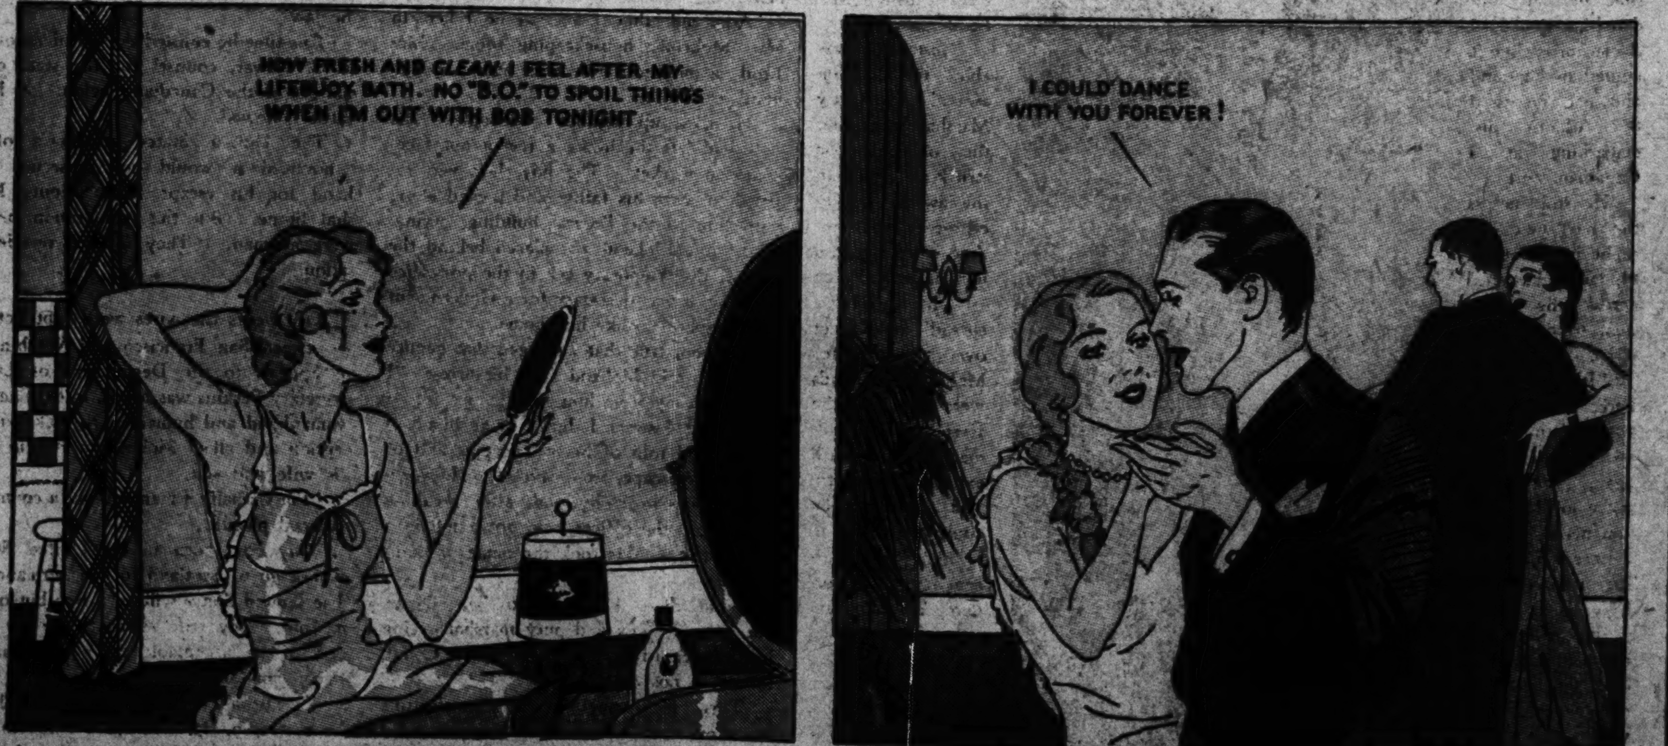
WHEN ROMANCE NEARLY CRASHED . . by Timmins



A NEW DRESS . . . A WAVE . . . YOU MUST HAVE A HEAVY DATE TONIGHT
YES, BOB'S TAKING ME TO DINNER — DANCING AFTERWARDS
SHE LOOKS EXQUISITE BUT I WISH I DARED WARN HER TO BE CAREFUL ABOUT ONE THING
TWO WEEKS LATER
I'M SIMPLY MISERABLE. BOB HASN'T BEEN NEAR ME SINCE OUR DATE TWO WEEKS AGO
FORGIVE MY FRANKNESS, BUT COULD HE HAVE NOTICED "B.O."? SOMETIMES YOU'RE A LITTLE CARELESS
WHY NOT BATHE REGULARLY WITH LIFEBUOY? THEN YOU'LL BE SURE OF NOT OFFENDING



HOW FRESH AND CLEAN I FEEL AFTER MY LIFEBUOY BATH. NO "B.O." TO SPOIL THINGS WHEN I'M OUT WITH BOB TONIGHT
I COULD DANCE WITH YOU FOREVER!

"B.O." destroys charm
(body odor)

NO MATTER how attractive you look, the merest hint of "B.O." (body odor) kills your chances for popularity—romance! Heavy clothing, hot, stuffy rooms make the danger of offending as great in winter as it is in summer. For your own sake, play safe—bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. You will know by its pleasant, quickly-vanishing, extra-clean scent that Lifebuoy is no ordinary toilet soap. Lifebuoy gives extra protection. Its rich, hygienic lather deodorizes pores—effectively ends "B.O." Protects health, too, by removing germs as well as dirt.

Brings new complexion beauty

Every night, massage Lifebuoy's bland, deep-cleansing lather well into the pores; then rinse. This simple treatment gently washes away pore-embedded impurities that dull and cloud the skin—freshens complexion to new, glowing beauty. See for yourself.
